JAPANESE ADVANCE IN SHANTUNG REPORTED

Army of 150,000 Thrusting From North Toward Suchow, Railway Center, Against 250,000 Chinese Troops.

INVADERS BOMB CITY FROM AIR

Hankow, Temporary Capital, Apparently Later Objective—60 Pct. of Country's Coal Resources Captured.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, March 20. (Sunday)—A Japanese army estimated at 150,000 men smashed forward on the southern Shantung front today in an offensive some foreign military observers considered the most extensive battle since the World War.

Backed by artillery, planes and tanks, the Japanese pushed from the north while about 250,000 Chinese sought to stem the advance.

Casualties were heavy on both sides in the Central China fighting.

Japanese reported they were within striking distance of their main objective, Suchow, where China's main east-west Lunghai and north-south Tientsin-Pukow railways cross.

Japanese aerial scouts said Chinese defending Suchow were fleeing in disorder under continuous bombardment by planes.

Chinese reported their forces made successful counterattacks on the Tientsin-Pukow line killing 5000 Japanese.

Foreign advices indicated, however, that the Japanese were advancing steadily along the north-south railway.

Japan's strategy seemed to foreign military observers now to call for the capture of Suchow by the troops driving south which then would join strong Japanese forces moving up from Pengpu. From Suchow the combined armies would strike west along the Lunghai to Chengchow, thus eliminating the dangerous crossing of the Yellow River which would be necessary if the drive on Chengchow were made from the north.

From Chengchow, juncture of the Lunghai and the Peiping-Hankow railways, the Japanese could thrust south toward Hankow, China's temporary capital.

Simultaneously with the thrust from Chengchow other forces could move west from Wuhu to attack Hankow.

In the Japanese march through Southern Shantung important coal mines fell into their control yesterday at Tsaochwang, 180 miles northwest of Nanking. The capture of the mines gave Japan command of 60 per cent of China's coal resources.

MEXICO PROTESTS TO LEAGUE AT GERMAN-AUSTRIAN UNION

Delegate Files Letter Denouncing "Foreign Aggression of Which Republic Was a Victim."

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, March 19.—Ysidro Fabela, Mexico's permanent delegate to the League of Nations, delievered today a protest on behalf of his Government against "the political death of Austria."

Fabela delivered a letter to the League Secretariat which said Mexico, "faithful to its international policy which admits no conquest by force, protests in the most categoric manner against the foreign aggression of which the Austrian republic has just been the victim."

LEAPS TO DEATH FROM WINDOW

Louis A. Heil, Chicago, Had Just Returned From Mother's Funeral.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19. — Louis A. Heil, 52 years old, office manager for a real estate firm, plunged to his death today from an upper floor window of the First National Bank building.

Police said they found two notes in his pockets, one addressed to his wife, Mrs. Estelle Heil, and the other to Orlo Montague, head of the company employing Heil, who was the father of two grown children. Montague said Heil attended the funeral of his mother in Cincinnati this week. Police could find no witnesses.

Four Mothers Will Divide $500,000 Baby Race Prize

Each of Toronto Women Named by Court to Get One-Fourth—Bore 9 Children in 10 Years.

TORONTO, March 19 (Canadian Press.)—Four Toronto mothers today won equal shares in the $500,000 "stork derby" estate left by the late Charles Vance Millar.

The winners, tied with nine eligible babies each born in the 10 years following Millar's death, were announced by Justice W. E. Middleton of the Ontario Supreme Court. They are:

Mrs. Annie Smith, whose husband, William, is a city fireman.

Mrs. Kathleen Nagle, whose husband, John, canvassed from door to door for carpenter work. The Nagles have 12 children.

Mrs. Alice Timleck, whose husband, Arthur, is employed by the City Parks Department. The Timlecks have 14 children, an automobile and a maid.

Mrs. Isabel MacLean, whose husband, John, is a civil servant who works in the Ontario legislative buildings.

Millar, eccentric lawyer, died Oct. 31, 1926, leaving a will whose principal clause specified the residue of his estate was to go to the Toronto mother registering the largest number of births in the 10-year period after his death.

Justice Middleton in his action today ruled out two of the stars in the "stork derby"—25-year-old Mrs. Pauline Mae Clarke and Mrs. Lillian Kenny, who had promised to build a mausoleum in Millar's honor if she won.

Mrs. Clarke, like the winners, had nine babies born in Toronto in the 10 years but the justice ruled five of them were illegitimate and therefore ineligible.

Mrs. Kenny had 10 babies but four were registered as still-born and the judge ruled they could not count.

The mother had contended they were born alive but Justice Middleton decided this was not established.

When she heard of the ruling, Mrs. Kenny said:

"I'm not mad at anyone. My lawyer will take an appeal to a higher court."

J. R. Cartwright, counsel for Mrs. Clarke, also said appeal action would be taken without delay.

While the exact amount of the Millar estate residue available for distribution never has been made public, one of the trustees said it would be "about $500,000."

Stocks, bonds and property were converted into cash shortly before the baby race was finished.

The clause of Millar's will which brought about the competition was challenged on many sides but upheld in court.

Millar did not content himself with starting the baby race through his will.

He gave one share in the Kenilworth Jockey Club to every ordained minister in Windsor, Walkerville and Sandwich.

To every Protestant minister in Toronto he bequeathed one share in a brewery.

FORD PLANS TO MAKE FABRICATED HOUSES

Sets Up Machinery at Ways (Ga.) Estate for Wooden Farm Homes.

By the Associated Press.

WAYS, Ga., March 19.—Henry Ford disclosed plans today to produce fabricated farm houses from the pine and cypress of his 90,000-acre Georgia plantation.

Stocks of lumber accumulated in two years of sawmill operations will be used. Modern woodworking machines are in use and a drying kiln is being installed at the estate's rural industrial school.

"The houses will be made in a number of standard patterns," Ford said, "or manufactured according to the prospective owner's plans. They will be offered to the general public as soon as the needs of our community here are supplied."

He said the work, under auspices of the school, "will be a task for the young men of this community."

The program was one phase of an expansion project. Restoration of old Fort McAllister, a Confederate stronghold, and construction of a school chapel and a manual arts school for Negroes are other aims.

Of national affairs, Ford said the proposed Federal surtax of 20 per cent on undistributed profits of closely-held corporations "will mean a reduction in competition."

"I think everybody should pay taxes," he said, "but I am sure the American people will never stand for unfair taxation. Whatever taxes are imposed, however, we'll make the best of it and adjust ourselves accordingly."

BANKER'S SON INDICTED FOR KILLING BRIDE

Man Held in Delavan, Ill., Tragedy Charged With Manslaughter and Perjury.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Ill., March 19. — James Crabb, 21-year-old banker's son, was indicted on charges of manslaughter and perjury today by a special Tazewell County grand jury in the fatal shooting March 1 of his 19-year-old bride, Betty Collison Crabb.

Circuit Judge Henry J. Ingram fixed bail at $10,000 on the manslaughter count and $7500 on the perjury charge. Crabb gave the required bail.

State's Attorney Rayburn Russell and John E. Cassidy, Special Attorney-General, had asked for a murder indictment. The manslaughter charge carries a penalty upon conviction of one to 14 years in prison.

Crabb has been held without bail for a week in the Tazewell County jail after Sheriff Ralph Goer said he confessed that he shot his wife accidentally after a highball party. The fatal shooting occurred in the pair's bedroom in the Delavan home of Crabb's father and stepmother.

TOWN REFUSES $2000 FUND TO ENTERTAIN ROOSEVELT

Nahant (Mass.) Voters Reject Plan for Fete in Connection With Wedding of Son John.

By the Associated Press.

NAHANT, Mass., March 19. — Disregarding the recommendation of the town advisory committee, Nahant voters blocked today an appropriation of $2000 for the entertainment of President Roosevelt on his visit here to attend the wedding of his son, John, and Miss Anne Lindsay Clark on June 18.

An article in the warrant of the town meeting, embodying the appropriation and committee recommendation, was killed on a voice vote.

Mrs. F. Haven Clark, mother of the bride-elect, expressed satisfaction with the vote. She said she believed the action would meet with the President's approval.

Before the vote was taken, Frederick W. Ryan, town counsel and a Democrat, declared: "The President is not coming to see Nahant, but to see his son get married. We ought to leave him alone."

Voters applauded Ryan's remarks.

DARROW'S ASHES SCATTERED

Strewn in Jackson Park, Chicago, in Accordance With His Wish.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19.—The ashes of Clarence Darrow were scattered to the winds today in Jackson Park. George L. Whitehead, the late lawyer's secretary, stood by the railing of the lagoon bridge and carried out his former employer's wish.

Darrow, who died last Sunday, had admired the park from the bay window of his apartment. To him it was "the prettiest spot on earth."

MEXICANS SEIZE OIL OFFICES AND OUST FOREIGNERS

Strike Over, Union Starts Helping President Run $400,000,000 Industry Expropriated by Decree.

FOREIGN COMPANIES PLAN COURT APPEAL

Cardenas Indicates Peso Will Be Devaluated to Finance Setup — Banks Suspend Deals Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., March 19.—Provisional councils of Mexican workers tonight moved in on offices of the expropriated $400,000,000 foreign oil industry under the Government's "Mexico for the Mexicans" program.

The oil workers ended a folded arms strike and went back to work late today to collaborate with the Government which took over last night the 17 American and British companies.

As fast as the 31 locals of the Oil Workers' Syndicate appointed their provisional councils the groups took over administrative work which under company management had been done mostly by British and Americans.

Aguila (Royal Dutch Shell), biggest of the 17 companies, was the first affected. Workmen walked into the ofice and told foreign employes that "we have nothing against you personally, but we must take over your jobs."

Financial troubles followed the dramatic turn in Mexico's long-smouldering oil industry dispute. The Central Bank of Mexico suspended all dealings in foreign exchange, and all banks in Mexico, D. F., followed suit.

Cardenas indicated devaluation of the Peso was considered and called no Congress to appropriate funds to finance the Government's newly acquired properties. The peso was quoted yesterday at 27.75 cents.

Supreme Court Appeal Planned.

Spokesmen for the dispossessed oil companies said they planned an appeal to a district court for an injunction against the expropriation decree and an ultimate appeal to the Supreme Court against constitutionality of the 1936 law on which the President based his action.

Most oil officials were frankly skeptical of being able to obtain help from the courts, however. The Supreme Court recently upheld an arbitral award to oil workers which was the immediate cause of the confiscation.

Talk of currency depreciation drastically curtailed all credit operations in the capital today, but cash business went on almost as usual.

United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels said:

"The fact the oil companies offered to pay the amount stipulated in the arbitral award on condition certain administrative features of the labor contract be adjusted shows they were trying to reach an agreement by which to carry on operations."

British Minister "Disappointed."

Daniels disclosed that British Minister St. Clair O'Malley, who called at the United States Embassy, shared that view and was "very disappointed" by developments.

Daniels said he had received no instructions from the State Department, but he was sending a day-by-day account of the oil situation to Washington.

A gasoline shortage occurred during the morning but by afternoon gasoline supplies became gradually available as reserves were tapped.

No authoritative source would say exactly when the Government would take over the offices and other property. Many company managers waited in their offices for Government representatives to take formal control.

It was believed that action was delayed until Monday because of the Saturday half-holiday.

Cardenas' decree ordered delivery to the Department of National Economy, the Treasury and the General Administration for Petroleum Operation. It was believed by the precedent of the expropriated National Railways that the oil industry ultimately would be given to the workers to run.

Marketing Becomes a Problem.

Greatest difficulty facing Government operation of the industry was the marketing of oil abroad, Mexico's principal market. American and British companies were said to control virtually all available oil tankers.

Foreign oil men said the Workers'

Barcelona, Spared From Air Raids for Day, Counts Its Dead

Bodies of 640 Recovered, More Sought in Ruins of Bombed Buildings—Shops Reopen and Traffic Is Resumed.

By the Associated Press.

BARCELONA, March 19.—There was a lull today in the bombing of the city by insurgent planes. For the first time since Wednesday the skies were clear of raiders.

With the non-appearance of the raiders, shops were reopened during the day. Subways and trolleys resumed normal operations. Places of amusement remained closed.

There were 640 bodies of victims of the bombers, most of them beyond identification, laid out in rows in overtaxed morgues. Only 105 had been identified. Many women were among the dead. The bodies of 12 babies were also in the morgue.

One doctor estimated 200 more bodies were buried in the debris of bomb-wrecked buildings.

The highest estimates placed the dead at 1300 and the injured at more than 2000 in the 13 insurgent attacks.

More than 700 wounded, including 75 small boys and girls, were in Clinic Hospital alone. Others were treated in emergency hospitals and sent home.

Hundreds of horror-stricken men and women clustered about hospital doors. Women cried in corridors as they searched in vain for missing members of their families.

A two-months-old baby in a crib tried to reach a nursing bottle, but cried in agony each time its burned left arm touched the pillow or railing.

One hospital had to place mattresses on the floor to care for the wounded. The injured who died after arriving were covered with sheets.

Some residential sections were deserted by terror-stricken families that fled to the country.

Forty destroyed buildings were counted; 71 others were partly wrecked.

United Socialist Youth organizations, meanwhile, called for two divisions of youths totaling 22,000 volunteers.

Billboards bore posters of revolutionary groups branding as traitors any workers who deserted their posts.

HITLER DEATH'S HEAD CAUSES COMMOTION IN TIMES SQUARE

Traffic Snarl During Young Communists' Demonstration Against Action in Austria.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19.—A thousand members of the State Young Communist League threw Times Square's Saturday night crowds and traffic into confusion with a brief demonstration against German union with Austria and America's policy on the Spanish war.

They carried banners and chanted denunciations of Hitler and exhortations for aid to the Spanish loyalists.

A brief scuffle with police reserves ensued when a 15-foot death's head effigy of Hitler, made of cloth and cardboard, suddenly appeared and demonstrators tried to hang it on a lamp post. The effigy was torn to pieces in the scuffle. One man was arrested.

BRITISH FASCISTS PARADE, ASSAIL 'JEWISH WARMONGERS'

Mounted Police Break Up Crowds Marching Through London's West End.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 19. — British Fascists staged one of their biggest demonstrations in months tonight, marching through London's West End shortly before theaters closed.

"Down with Jewish warmongers," they shouted.

Mounted police were drafted to break up the crowds. A number of night clubs closed their doors, admitting only those who had reserved tables.

Auto Falls Off Rack Killing Man.

By the Associated Press.

BRAYMER, Mo., March 19. — Ray Brown, service station owner, was killed this morning when a car on which he was working fell from a grease rack. Brown, 40 years old, was thrown from the running board, his head striking an oil barrel and the car falling on his body. His father, Charles Brown, was killed three years ago when a truck loaded with wheat overturned on him.

FRANCE ASKS FRANCO TO STOP BOMBING SPANISH CIVILIANS

Urges Britain to Protest and Gives London List of 442 German Planes in Rebel Forces.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 19. — The French Embassy informed the British Foreign Office today that France, apart from asking the Vatican yesterday to use its influence, had sent a strong protest to the insurgent Government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco against the air bombing of civilians in the Spanish war. Britain was urged to do the same.

France also forwarded to London a documented list of 442 German and Italian planes which France said were in Franco's air force.

AUSTRIAN EX-CABINET OFFICER REPORTED TO HAVE ENDED LIFE

Baron Odo Neustaedter-Stuermer Served Under Two Anti-Nazi Chancellors.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 19. — An Exchange Telegraph (British news agency) dispatch from Vienna today said Baron Odo Neustaedter-Stuermer, a Cabinet Minister under both anti-Nazi Chancellors Dollfuss and Schuschnigg, had committed suicide.

Neustaedter-Stuermer, of Austrian and Italian descent, was dropped from the Schuschnigg Cabinet, in which he was Minister of Interna. Security, in March, 1937. It was believed then that Schuschnigg considered him too friendly to Germany.

Dollfuss' Widow Leaves Italy.

By the Associated Press.

PADUA, Italy, March 19. — The widow of the murdered Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss of Austria departed today with her children and a group of friends, apparently bound for Switzerland. Frau Dollfuss, who fled from Vienna after the Nazi annexation of Austria, reached Italy by way of Hungary and Jugoslavia. Dollfuss was assassinated in the abortive Nazi putsch July 25, 1934.

TWO KILLED, 100 HURT IN POLISH ANTI-JEW RIOTS

President Warns People Such "Brutal" Conduct Might Bring About Totalitarian Action.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Poland, March 19. — Polish celebration of the diplomatic victory over Lithuania turned today into wild anti-Jewish rioting, in which two persons were killed and more than 100 injured.

The windows of hundreds of Jewish-owned shops were smashed and strong police guards encircled Warsaw's ghetto to prevent large crowds from invading it.

President Ignace Mosecki, in an address at a triumphant moment in Polish history, condemned the demonstration as "brutal" and gave warning that repeated disorders might compel Poland to become totalitarian to maintain discipline.

"I cannot hide my sorrow that so many people who used to stand behind the Marshal," the President broadcast in a memorial address on the Patron Saint's day of the late Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, "are today obstacles to the realization of his aims.

"He who fails to understand our historic developments only creates confusion . . . from confusion and demagogy one cannot establish sound government . . . chaos serves Communism first of all."

Sudden Turn Against Jews.

What had been a spontaneous celebration of Lithuania's capitulation to a Polish ultimatum, turned into a fierce anti-Jewish demonstration. Orators talking about Lithuania hardly could be heard above crowds shouting "Down with Jews!" and "To Madagascar with the Jews!"

Until late evening ambulances rushed through the streets to attend the wounded. Police patrolled in large numbers but had difficulty suppressing the violence because it was scattered in all sections of the city.

One of those killed was a Gentile child. The other was a Jew who was struck down while drawing money from a postoffice savings bank.

One of the most prominent victims was Prof. Moses Schoor, a leading rabbi and member of the Polish Senate. He was leaving his synagogue on his way to the Ministry of the Interior to protest against anti-Jewish violence when he was attacked by youths. Police quickly interfered, however, and he was not badly hurt.

The windows of the Adria night club, owned and frequented by Jews, were smashed by another group of rioters.

The excited crowds had built up a war fervor during the hours Lithuania considered, the Polish ultimatum. Jews, apparently, had unconsciously provided the escape for emotions that victory—without war—had failed to provide.

Jews had been in great majority in the lines that stood from early morning to withdraw savings from banks before it became known that Lithuania would yield.

LITHUANIA UNWILLINGLY SUBMITS TO POLISH TERMS

Forced by Threats of Invasion to Agree to Resume Diplomatic Relations and Re-establish Communications.

CHANGE FOLLOWS FEUD OF 18 YEARS

Capitulation Amounts to Giving Up Claim on Wilno, Its Historic Capital — Submission Stuns Nation.

By the Associated Press.

KAUNAS, Lithuania, March 19. —The Government announced to Lithuania's Parliament in special session today that it had been forced to extend its unwilling hand in diplomatic friendship to Poland. The decision was received in silence.

The legislators had no alternative but to indorse the Government's compliance with Poland's demands for an exchange of ministers by March 31 and re-establishment of rail, air, postal and other relations and it reluctantly gave its approval.

This forced friendship follows a feud of 18 years in which neither country has had diplomatic or other relations with the other. It started when Poland, Oct. 9, 1920, seized about one-third of Lithuania, including the city of Wilno, its historic capital.

The issue came to a crisis after a Polish guard was killed March 11 on the armed frontier between the neighbors. Poland insisted border friction be ended and declared the only possible way was unconditional acceptance of its terms.

Between Two Evils.

Despite Government efforts to calm the nation and suppress demonstrations, the settlement increased bitter anti-Polish feeling. Lithuanians believed they had been forced to choose between two evils. They regarded acceptance of the demands as a surrender to Polish threats of invasion behind which lurked the greater menace of a German coup in Memel, Lithuania's seaport.

Lithuania's capitulation amounts to virtual admission that Wilno, which the Lithuanian constitution still claims as capital, is Polish. Although Lithuania did not formally renounce its claim, the Polish demand insisted there be no discussion of Wilno.

"A preponderance of force is on the side of Poland," Acting Premier Jokubas Stanisauckis told Parliament.

"Might is not right. However, under these circumstances, the Lithuanian Government decided to submit to the Polish demands."

Poland Mobilized 100,000.

Before the Parliament met, the Lithuanian Minister at Tallinn, Estonia, had handed a note to Poland's envoy there announcing Lithuania's capitulation.

At that time, 100,000 Polish troops — five times more than Lithuania's whole army — were mobilized near the frontier and the prows of Polish warships were pointed at Lithuania's Baltic shores.

Britain, France and Russia had made urgent representations to both Governments to seek an amicable solution, giving warning that all Europe's peace might be in the balance.

Stanisauckis thanked the great Powers which "strove to help Lithuania in her hour of great stress."

Some sources thought the bitterness within Lithuania might find expression in the resignation of three or four ministers who held out against what they considered humiliation. Among them was the Lithuanian Foreign Minister, Stasys Lozoraitis.

The surrender, in fact, jeopardized the existence of the entire Government.

The bulk of the nation still was too stunned to react sharply to submission under pressure of a country it regards as an hereditary enemy.

But the semi-military riflemen's union with about 58,000 members, virtually an auxiliary of the army, and student bodies began to voice deep resentment.

FRANCO'S ARMIES. PUSH ON; REPORT LITTLE OPPOSITION

Advance Guards Penetrate Almost to Castellon de la Plana Province, Which Lies on Mediterranean.

REBELS PREPARING FOR MAJOR THRUST

Week-Old Drive Slows Down, With Point of Insurgent Wedge Only 45 Miles From Sea.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, France, March 19.—Spanish insurgent vanguards today penetrated almost to the seaboard province of Castellon de la Plana in their drive toward the Mediterranean. They reported they were encountering no great resistance from the Government's troops.

The speed of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's three main armies was reduced, however, to prepare for a major thrust, which he was expected to launch shortly.

The day's fighting was limited to minor engagements between Franco's advance guards and Government rear guards.

Most insurgent activity was in mopping-up operations in the vast territory taken during the last week, establishing communications and moving supplies to the new front.

Insurgents said they were near Castellote, about six miles from Castellon Province, which lies along the Mediterranean coast just north of Valencia.

The point of the wide-angle wedge which Franco's armies form in Northeastern Spain is only 45 miles from the Mediterranean. It is aimed between Valencia and Barcelona, the Government's main strongholds.

The right flank is based just east of Raimundo on the road to Gandesa, which is a junction of highways to the coast, one northeast to Tarragona and the other southeast to Tortosa.

The center column has reached the outskirts of Maella, north of the right flank, on the road from Caspe to Gandesa. The left wing is just east of Caspe.

All have advanced about equal distances in the week since the offensive was launched from the old bases just west of Belchite and Montalban.

5 NEWSPAPERS FAIL TO PUBLISH IN QUEBEC PRINTERS' STRIKE

Arbitrator Named After Union Demands Higher Wages and Shorter Hours.

By the Associated Press.

QUEBEC, March 19.—The Quebec Labor Department appointed an arbitrator today to seek settlement of a printers' strike which forced five daily newspapers to suspend regular publication.

The strike was called by members of the International Typographical Union who asked for a pay increase of $2 a week and a 44-hour week. Present minimum rates were announced by one newspaper to be $30.50 for a 48-hour week for day workers and $32.50 for night employes working 45 hours.

About 250 printers were on strike against the L'Evenement and Le Journal, morning newspapers; Le Soleil, Chronicle-Telegraph and Le Quotidien de Levis, evening papers. The latter is published in the City of Levis, just across the St. Lawrence River.

Besides the newspapers, a half-dozen commercial printing shops were affected.

FLOOD IN MISSOURI RIVER AT BISMARK, N. D., RECEDES

Still Above Danger Point; W P A Trucks Help Many to Leave Homes.

By the Associated Press.

BISMARCK, N. D., March 19.—The Missouri River, which flooded lowlands here, was dropping tonight at the rate of one inch an hour and weather bureau officials said they thought the river was receding generally in this area.

The river had dropped to 20.16 feet at 8 p. m., about four inches since it began to recede. The river was still one foot above the flood stage of 19 feet here.

Earlier the muddy flood had spread over 5000 acres of lowlands, driving scores of residents from their homes.

Federal Meteorologist O. W. Roberts reported damage to several farms. In some cases buildings were floated off foundations and overturned.

W P A workers, operating trucks, aided residents in moving from the threatened area. Many tok most of their household goods to storage places provided by the W P A.

MEXICANS SEIZE OIL OFFICE AND OUST FOREIGNERS

Syndicate was unprepared technically to take over operation.

Hundreds of congratulatory telegrams from workers' organizations poured into the National Palace.

The politically powerful labor leader, Vicente Lombardo Toledano declared the expropriation "has the value of an act of economic independence for the nation just as that of 1821 meant political independence."

The Communist party termed it "the most brilliant step in the Mexican Revolution along the road toward national liberation from foreign oppression."

Silver Refinery Closes.

Attorneys for the companies said they would attack constitutionality of the expropriation law on grounds that it provides indemnification "within a period of 10 years," whereas the Constitution stipulates immediate payment.

Cardenas promised to compensate the companies, but did not say how much. Neither did he indicate whether he would accept their $400,000,000 valuation on their properties.

There was speculation whether Cardenas would move next to expropriate the foreign-operated mining industry in Mexico.

The American Smelting & Refining Co. closed its Monterey silver refinery employing 400 men last night. A strike today confronted its Chihuahua refinery, with a payroll of 1600 men.

Company officials said they feared a general strike of all their 19,000 workers.

The expropriated oil companies employed 18,000.

American Firms to Submit Briefs to Secretary Hull.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19.—American oil interests, surprised by the unexpected Mexican expropriation, today began preparing a legal and diplomatic fight to regain control of their properties, as the next step in their long controversy with the Mexican Government and Mexican labor.

Briefs will be submitted early in the week to Secretary of State Hull in the hope that diplomatic moves may ease the situation of the companies and "every legal means" will be resorted to, a spokesman for the companies said here today.

The total American and British interest in Mexican oil development is estimated at $450,000,000, of which little more than a quarter is American. The largest American interests involved are those of Standard Oil of New Jersey and the Consolidated Oil Corporation (Sinclair group).

Hoped for Intervention.

When the Supreme Court of Mexico recently upheld Labor Board rulings which the companies said they were unable to meet, the companies were hopeful that United States diplomatic intervention would save them.

This hope was based on the fact the United States Government, through continued purchases of Mexican silver at fixed prices, has helped Mexico through financial crises.

This policy, it was announced today in Washington, will be continued at least until the first of April, despite Mexican internal developments.

When it became evident that President Cardenas had decided definitely to cast his lot with the Mexican workers instead of the foreign oil companies, the companies, acting jointly, decided to ignore the Supreme Court order.

When the first pay day came around, they told their employes they could not meet the terms of the order, calling for payment annually of an estimated additional 41,000,000 pesos ($11,377,500). The companies also protested against certain administrative features of the court order, especially about certain sections giving workers time off with pay.

Compromise Rejected.

Last week, the spokesmen said here, the companies made a compromise offer of 23,000,000 pesos ($6,382,500) increase in pay. This offer was refused.

The companies then moved records, files, cash, etc., out of their offices.

They expected the Mexican Labor Board would install receivers to operate the business in compliance with the Labor Board's ruling. The companies warned the Government that such operation was likely to be unsuccessful, because of the fact that foreign sales would be hard for the Government to make under the circumstances, and because domestic sales, according to the companies, had already been carried on at a loss.

Oil Firm Statements.

W. S. Farish, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, in a lengthy statement, renewed prior offers of compromise, but referring to the collective foreign investment of $450,000,000 in the Mexican petroleum industry. He said, "We are not disposed to stand idly by and see that capital confiscated."

H. F. Sinclair, executive chairman of Consolidated, said:

"Our American employes, some of whom have lived there for generations, have been ordered out of their homes and threatened with violence. All access to our offices and properties is blocked by bands of workers. Mob action rather than legal proceedings characterizes the whole program.

"In spite of the unreasoning attitude of the syndicate (union) officials as distinguished from the workers themselves, I believe that some basis will be established on which we can continue to stay in business in Mexico."

ROOSEVELT SAYS FIRST DUTY IS TO FIND WORK FOR ALL

Writes to Head of Workers' Alliance Welcoming Conference on Jobs and Security.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—President Roosevelt told a conference on work and security today that "our first duty is to find work for every able-bodied man and woman."

In a letter to David Lasser, president of the Workers' Alliance of America, which Lasser read to delegates representing workers' organizations, the President said:

"Only through labor can security be achieved and the economic and social welfare of the nation be established upon a firm foundation."

Welcoming the conference, the President said "there is always a place in our Democratic system of government for an open forum for free and untrammeled discussion of the problems which clamor for the attention of the Government."

Senator Murray (Dem.), Montana, a speaker at the conference, listed among causes of the current business recession "the monopoly fixation of prices" and the "failure of industry to observe sound economic principles."

surrendered reluctantly against overwhelming odds, to establish normal relations with their powerful neighbor.

The Polish army that had been mobilized near the frontier remained, however. The Government foresaw that there might be difficulty in the negotiations after nearly two decades of enmity despite assurances Lithuanian national pride would not be injured.

"Lithuania has a right to independence and, in the name of the Polish Government, I declare Poland will respect this right," declared Col. Joseph Beck, Foreign Minister.

"Poland has no desire to humiliate the Lithuanian nation. It is a danger to European peace to have these abnormal conditions on one section of a frontier that has been hermetically sealed for 18 years. It is better to have the dispute out than to be nursing grievances in silence, which might breed dangerous thoughts.

"Now, normal diplomatic relations will begin, during which a number of questions will be settled.

"In a few days' time, the Polish Minister to Kaunas will be appointed."

HIROTA HAS PLAN TO SETTLE ISSUE OF LAND IN PHILIPPINES

Tokio Watching Problem of Japanese Ownership, He Tells Questioner in Diet.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, March 20 (Sunday)—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota told the Japanese Diet today that the Government is watching the problem of Japanese-owned land in Davao, the Philippines, and has a plan for settlement.

Details of the plan, which Hirota spoke of in answering questions of a Diet member, were not disclosed.

"The Government is watching the situation regarding our emigrants," Hirota said. "A plan has been made for solution of the question, and I believe it will be arbitrated amicably."

(There have been charges that many Japanese held lands illegally in the fertile Davao region on Mindanao Island, south of Manila. The Davao population is predominantly Japanese.)

FEBRUARY FOOD PRICES DOWN 5 PCT. FROM DECEMBER, 1937

Eggs Off 23 Pct. for Greatest Reduction, While Vegetables Rose Slightly.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The average family paid 5 per cent less for food in the middle of February than it did two months earlier, a recent compilation of retail prices by the Department of Labor indicates.

Meat, dairy products and eggs offered most for the money in the recent period. Compared with quotations on Dec. 14, 1937, cereals and bakery products were moderately cheaper, bile vegetables were slightly higher.

The sharpest cuts were noted in eggs, which cost 23 per cent less on Feb. 15 than on Dec. 14.

GEN. JOHNSON ASSAILS REORGANIZATION BILL

'Delivers Federal Structure Over to Power of One-Man Government.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19. — In two addresses over two national networks, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson tonight attacked the pending Government reorganization bill as "an insidious assault of democracy."

The bill empowers the President to alter or abolish any of the various administrative agencies of the insidious assault on democracy."

Johnson centered his fire on the provision that a two-thirds majority of Congress would be needed to overrule any of the President's proposals under it.

"There is your joker," Johnson said. "There is the trick that delivers the Federal structure over to the power of one-man government, plus minority rule by one-third of the people's representatives, instead of a majority of them, as the Constitution intended.

"This bill proposes a first great breach in the wall of democracy—the last pure democracy on earth.

"Unless Congress hears from the country in no uncertin terms over the week-end, that bill will pass. It ought not to pass in its present form. It is an abdication by Congress to the President."

In his second talk, Johnson denounced the provision of the bill abolishing the office of Comptroller-General as a "surrender by Congress of the power of the purse," and the proposed abolition of the Civil Service Commission.

The radio networks which carried Johnson's talks said he had asked for time as an individual.

GOV. HORNER IN E. ST. LOUIS ASSAILS 'CHICAGO'S TAMMANY'

Denounces Kelly-Nash Machine in Campaign Address to 4000 Persons.

Gov. Henry Horner, making his first platform appearance of the Illinois State primary campaign, spoke last night before 4000 persons at Ainad Temple, East St. Louis, in support of his slate of candidates headed by Congressman Scott W. Lucas, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Senator.

Renewing his attacks on the Chicago Kelly-Nash Democratic organization, which opposed his nomination for a second term as Governor in 1936, he said the important issue of the campaign was bossism. "What would happen in down-state counties if the Kelly-Nash machine gained control of the State is best demonstrated by what is happening today in Cook County, where even the schools are being used for political purposes," he said.

Gov. Horner added that the down-state districts had been loyal to his administration and were not not yet ready to accept the domination of "Chicago's Tammany." Lucas is opposed for the nomination for Senator by United States District Attorney Michael L. Igoe of Chicago, who is backed by the Chicago organization.

DETROIT POLICE ROUT CROWD OUTSIDE GERMAN CONSULATE

Demonstrators Carry Signs: "Down With Hitler," Others Protest at Denver.

DETROIT, March 19.—One hundred men and women who said they were members of anti-Fascist societies were dispersed by police today when they attempted to hold a demonstration in front of the Hammond Building, in which Fritz Haller, German consul, has his office.

Forty mounted police and patrolmen ordered the demonstrators to keep moving when they attempted to march in a circle in front of the building. Offering no resistance, the group departed. Their signs bore such legends as "Down With Hitler" and "Austria today; What Next?"

DENVER, March 19.—A group of men and women, estimated by police to number between 20 and 30 persons, engaged in an orderly demonstration before the German consulate today in protest against "war and the policies of Hitler."

DETROIT, March 19.—Lily Pons said tonight she would cancel a concert appearance she was to make in Vienna late in April "because of the disturbed situation there."

HITLER TO LEAD CAMPAIGN FOR BIG PLEBISCITE VOTE

Ballot on German-Austrian Union April 10—Vienna Settling Down, But Provinces Get Out Flags for Dictator's Visit.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 19.—Adolph Hitler told Nazi leaders tonight that he would take a personal part in the campaign for a "yes" vote in the April 10 plebiscite on his union of Austria and Germany.

Der Fuehrer met with his subleaders, including Austria's Governor, Arthur Seysz-Inquart, to lay down a plan of operations for the campaign. After the session, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels pledged himself and his subordinates to spare no effort to "make the plebiscite the greatest vote of confidence the German people ever gave the Fuehrer."

During the evening Hitler signed a decree consolidating Austrian and German telegraph service, another establishing a foreign currency control office at Vienna, and a third forbidding Germans to open new businesses in Austria without special permission.

Lithuania's capitulation in her dispute with Poland was received favorably in German Government circles.

Austrians Slowly Adjusting Themselves to Changes in Rule.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, March 19. — Tonight, a week after Adolf Hitler marched his German troops into Austria, the country seems generally satisfied that it's all over. German troops have established themselves in new garrisons throughout the country. Austrian Nazi S. A. and S. S. troops—mostly Nazis who not long ago were released from concentration camps and prisons — were told to forget revenge and learn party discipline.

Strict orders were issued by Joseph Buerckel, Hitler's chief delegate for the Austrian-German union plebiscite of April 10. He told all German-Austrian authorities not to interfere unnecessarily with Austrian business and social life before the date for voting on union of the two countries. He also empowered police to prevent unjust confiscation and searches of homes —frequently reported, especially in Jewish sections.

Marching, singing, parading troops and Nazi militia almost have disappeared from Vienna's streets. To the same degree, most Viennese have returned to their daily routine.

First enthusiasm is changing slowly into a philosophical question: "What will happen next?" There seems to be a general hope that Hitler will pump so much business into Austria within the next few months that Austrians will be too busy to sit in their favorite wine and coffee houses and mix sour memories with sour wine.

Visit to Provinces Coming.

The Swastika flag is disappearing slowly from Vienna streets, but the provinces are busy preparing for a visit from Hitler, expected within a fortnight. Some streets in smaller towns already have been decorated with flags and garlands.

In Styria province, which long had been a center of Nazi agitation, even horses and plows carry Swastika emblems. Many Dollfuss posters and Dollfuss streets have disappeared in provincial hamlets, the name and picture of the assassinated anti-Nazi chancellor giving way to that of Hitler. In many villages school children can be seen outdoors practicing Hitler songs and Nazi salutes. Anti-Nazi school books already have been discarded in many schools.

Austrian teachers, lawyers and Government officials will have to go to school again to learn laws and regulations of Greater Germany. The currency seems to be the hardest for all to learn. Older Austrians find it especially difficult. Within a generation they have seen a change from gulden to crowns, from crowns to schillings, and now from schillings to marks.

In 1890 gulden were abandoned for crowns at a rate of one to two. After the disastrous deflation of 1925 crowns were exchanged for schillings at the rate of one to 10,000. Now these schillings are exchanged for marks at 1.50 schillings to one mark, worth about 40 cents.

Arrests of Anti-Nazi Leaders.

Measures against former anti-Nazi leaders in the fallen government of Kurt Schuschnigg are reported continuing, with a number of arrests made.

One Vienna newspaper service reported that Friedrich Planetta, hanged in 1934 for the assassination of Dollfuss, would get a new trial. The report said his body would be transferred to the National Hero's Shrine.

Many foreign correspondents have left Vienna. It is estimated that of the 180 in Vienna last week less than 50 remain today.

GEORGE W. TODD, INDUSTRIALIST AND PHILANTHROPIST, DIES

Rochester Director of Many Corporations, Friend of George Eastman, Ill Four Years.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 19. —George W. Todd, industrialist and philanthropist, died at his home here tonight after an illness of four years. He was 78 years old.

One of the founders of the Todd Co., makers of check writing machines and other business office equipment, he had been chairman of the board of the Stromberg-Carlson Manufacturing Co., and a director of many corporations.

Todd, a close friend of the late George Eastman, camera manufacturer, was known as the father of the Greater University of Rochester, to which Eastman contributed millions. Todd also made large contributions to the university. The social assembly building at the men's campus is called Todd Union in his honor. He made large gifts to Cornell Univeristy, which his sons attended. He leaves his widow, a sister, and three sons, Walter, George and Donald.

NEW YORK BILL TO BA[R] COMMUNISTS PASSE[D]

Legislature Acts After Effort to Oust S. W. Gerson Fail.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 19. — The Legislature today overwhelmingly approved the McNaboe bill designed particularly to remo[ve] from office Simon W. Gers[on] Chief Examiner for Borough Pr[es]ident Stanley M. Isaacs of Manhattan, after appeals to the cou[rt] and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman h[ad] failed to achieve the end. Ger[son] is a Communist.

Although aimed specifically at Gerson, the McNaboe bill of necessity is much broader. It provides that no person known to pro[mote] the gospels of anarchy, suppression of free speech or overthrow of the State by force shall hold a public office, civil service post or [be] in any school in the State.

While opponents of the measure were in a small minority, they were far more vociferous in their protests than were even the supporters of the measure in both Houses. [One] its opponents the bill was "un-American and a step toward Fascism" which actually would increase the popularity of Communists by making them martyrs—the highest hope they have."

Despite an attack on the bill in the upper house by Senator Le[on] Fischel, New York Democrat, who termed the measure unconstitutional and "what may be the first of a series of subversive statutes suppressing any thought at all," the bill passed the Senate 39 to [16].

Senator Berg, describing himself as a member of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the World War Amputation Association, declared no one could doubt his love for this country and its institutions. But he felt that "history has shown the kind of legislation always accomplishes the reverse of what it was aimed to do."

Assemblyman Abbot Low Mo[ffat], New York Republican, led the attack on the bill in the Assembly. It was supported by "professional patriots," he said, who "want to take any step, right or wrong, to protect American institutions." Under the guise of Americanism, he added, the "bill is insidious and dangerous to American doctrine and starts the initial stage of Fascism."

SOUTH ADMITS WRITING LEVINE RANSOM NOTES

T. Jasosky, Newark, N. J., Tried to 'Chisel in' on Payment to Kidnaper, Police Say.

ASSERTS HE KNOWS WHO ABDUCTED BOY

Denies He Did It, However —Detained on Attempted Robbery Charge — Bail Set at $25,000.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., March 19.—Stanley Thomas Jasosky, a 19-year-old Newark probationer, was held, lacking $25,000 bail, after police said he confessed writing six letters to Murray Levine, New Rochelle, N. Y., attorney, demanding $30,000 for the return of Levine's 9-year-old son, Peter, who disappeared more than three weeks ago.

Detective Peter La Bagliva said Jasosky, who was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hol[land] after being questioned all night by Newark detectives and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, confessed writing the notes; declared he did not participate in the kidnaping, but asserted he knew who did it.

The youth was surrendered to authorities yesterday by his mother, who was told he was wanted for questioning for violation of parole. After the arraignment, he was transferred to the Hudson County jail in Jersey City.

Jasosky, who was placed on a five-year probation in 1935 for an attempted holdup, was charged with attempted extortion in writing the six letters dated March 2, 7, 9, 13 and 17. The March 3 note was addressed to Levine in care of "The Hotel Belmont, Newark, N. J."

While Federal agents continued to question Jasosky, Department of Justice officials in Washington said his arrest was a minor one and did not solve the kidnaping of Peter Levine, Feb. 24. Peter Levine disappeared on his way home from the Albert Leonard Junior High School in New Rochelle. Department of Justice officials said Jasosky attempted to "chisel in" on the case.

Detective La Bagliva said the March 13 letter demanded of Levine that the money be taken in a taxicab to the Paramount Theater in Newark. The detective said the taxicab appeared in front of the theater. An intermediary was in the cab. He said Jasosky was in the crowd near the theater, "but apparently lost his nerve and did not approach the taxicab."

Meanwhile, two warrants were obtained against Jasosky charging attempted robbery and carrying a concealed weapon in connection with the attempted holdup of Benjamin Wigler, Newark, Feb. 24.

Levine Says He Knew Newark Ransom Notes Were Frauds.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., March 19.—Unperturbed by hundreds of fake ransom notes, Murray Levine, father of the kidnaped 12-year-old Peter Levine, said today: "I'll know the right note when I see it, by the insignia. Only the kidnapers and myself know what it is."

Levine would not explain further. Levine said he had received "hundreds of notes from chiselers" and had turned them all over to Federal officers.

Commenting on the arrest of a 19-year-old Newark (N. J.) probationer who police said confessed writing six letters to Levine demanding $30,000 for the safe return of his son, the father said: "I have never been to Newark to make any contact. I knew immediately the note was a fraud."

WILLIAM H. MALONE TAKES APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

Former Illinois Tax Chairman Was Convicted of Attempting to Evade Income Levies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19. — William H. Malone of Chicago, former chairman of the Illinois Tax Commission, appealed to the Supreme Court today his conviction of attempting to evade Federal income taxes by failing to report $269,958 for 1929 and $79,150 for 1930.

His petition said he became a member of the commission in 1921 and chairman in 1924. He served until January, 1931.

He denied testimony that contributions had been made to him for the "Governor Small Campaign Fund" and for Malone's campaign for Governor. The petition said the bank deposits in question were not income received during 1929 and 1930 but had been received in 1920 "from one proctor" for activity in behalf of the campaign by "Gen. Wood" for president.

Malone asked the Supreme Court to review a decision by the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the conviction.

MAIL FRAUD CHARGE AGAINST EX-CONVICT

Clayton Man Puts Up $250 for Oil Firm Job, Then Becomes Suspicious.

A warrant charging Nathaniel H. Wheeler, a former convict, with using the mails to defraud was issued yesterday by United States Commissioner John A. Burke on complaint of R. B. Reed of Clayton who said he had given Wheeler $250 for investment after being promised a position as vice-president of a company owning oil and mineral concessions in Mexico.

Reed who resides at 8025 Watkins drive, told postoffice inspectors he sought a job through a newspaper advertisement last Sunday and received a letter asking him to call on Wheeler at the Mayfair Hotel. Wheeler identified himself as president of the Latin-American Investment Co., with headquarters at Mexico, D. F., Reed said, and spoke of plans to start a "$150,000 operation." By providing some capital, Reed said he was told, he would be made vice-president of the company.

During the conversation at the hotel, Reed reported, they were interrupted by a telephone call which Wheeler said was from his office in Mexico. When Wheeler offered the explanation that $250 cash was needed immediately for another promising venture of the company, Reed accepted the suggestion that he provide it, left the hotel to cash a check for that amount and returned to hand it over to Wheeler, he said.

Becoming suspicious some hours later, he reported the occurrence to postoffice inspectors and Wheeler was arrested Friday night. The inspectors said Wheeler had received a four-year prison sentence for mail fraud in Baltimore after serving a sentence in Illinois as a swindler and now was wanted in several cities.

EXTORTION NOTE ARRESTS

Brothers Questioned at Salem, Ind., About Demand for $2000.

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, Ind., March 19. — Police took into custody two youths from Clay County, Kentucky, today to question them about an extortion letter threatening death to Ford A. Smith, wealthy head of a local cabinet manufacturing firm, if he did not pay $2000 to the writer. He received the letter Friday.

The youths are Oscar Bowling, 21 years old, and Vernon Bowling, 23, brothers. They told police they had come here a few days ago to look for work.

IRON, STEEL AND TINWORKERS TO VOTE ON LONGER-HOUR WEEK

American Steel Founderies Ask Men to Take a Wage Cut and Work 6 Days Instead of 5.

Members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tinworkers, employed at the Granite City plant of the American Steel Founderies, will vote Thursday on whether to accept a proposition made by the company to reduce wages and extend the 5-day, 40-hour week to a 6-day, 48-hour week.

C I O representatives have been negotiating for the union at conferences in Chicago with company officers. A recess has been taken to permit balloting by members of the Granite City local on the broad proposition of wage reduction and working-hour extension, without arriving at specific wage rates.

About 700 of the 1000 members of the Granite City local are now employed at the plant. Another branch is operated in East St. Louis and will be effected by any decision reached at the Chicago meeting. The decision to vote Thursday was ratified at a meeting yesterday by the Granite City local.

WOMAN BAR OWNER OBTAINS WRIT TO PREVENT CLOSING

Temporary Order Prevents Excise Commissioner From Enforcing Cancellation of License.

A temporary order restraining Excise Commissioner Lawrence McDaniel from enforcing his order Thursday revoking the license of Mrs. Serena Alexander's saloon in the basement of the Lindell-Plaza Hotel, 239 North Boyle avenue, was issued yesterday by Circuit Judge Eugene J. Sartorius.

Her license was to have been revoked at 6 o'clock last night. In seeking the temporary restraining order, she contended she arrived 10 minutes late for the hearing before McDaniel and he refused to hear her or her witnesses. A hearing on the restraining order will be held Thursday.

The license was revoked on a charge of violating the Sunday closing law by remaining open after midnight Saturday, Feb. 26. Inspector John Reiner testified he obtained beer at the place at 1:50 a. m. and that 15 men and women were drinking there at the time.

$2400 FOR TORNADO RELIEF CONTRIBUTED TO RED CROSS

Brewery Gives $1000; Funds for Aid of Sufferers in Belleville and Kennett.

A total of $2418.50 was received by the Red Cross yesterday as the first response to a mail campaign for funds for relief of sufferers in the Belleville and Kennett tornadoes.

A check for $1000 was sent to the Midwestern Branch of the American Red Cross by the Griesedieck-Western Brewery Co., and was turned over to the Belleville chapter. The other contributions were received by the St. Louis chapter and included one of $250 from the St. Louis Clearing House, and others of $100 from Joseph Desloge, Simmons Hardware Co., Anheuser-Busch, Inc., and the Boyd-Richardson Co.

WULLER WILL PLEAD GUILTY TOMORROW

Cashier Who Wrecked Belleville Bank to Admit Embezzling $190,000.

George E. Wuller, whose thefts wrecked the Belleville Bank & Trust Co., will plead guilty tomorrow to a Federal indictment charging embezzlement of $190,000 from the bank of which he was cashier.

The case will be called before United States District Judge Walter C. Lindley at Danville, Ill. When arraigned Wuller entered a formal plea of "not guilty," but he has told friends he is "ready to take his medicine."

There are 10 counts in the indictment, each with a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Examiners under State Auditor Edward J. Barrett of Illinois have fixed the amount of Wuller's thefts at $209,500, but he maintains the figure mentioned in the Federal indictment is correct. Barrett estimates the loss on liquidation of the bank will be about $500,000.

The Circuit Court grand jury, meeting next month on a day not yet set, will take up the State's case against Wuller, who is under $25,000 bond in Circuit Court, as well as $20,000 bond in Federal Court.

Fifty depositors of the closed bank met yesterday in the office of George H. Eckert, president of the Security Abstract & Title Co., and decided to circulate petitions among other depositors for the removal of Charles H. Albers, receiver of the bank by appointment of State Auditor Barrett, and for the appointment of Eckert in his place. A statement, issued by those attending the meeting, cites the Illinois law, that two-thirds in number and amount of credit, of the creditors of a closed bank, can make the removal of the receiver mandatory on the State Auditor, also the appointment of a new receiver of their selection.

Wuller, 45 years old, and the father of eight children, had been connected with the bank since his early youth. He became cashier about 10 years ago, succeeding his father, who died.

EX-LEGISLATOR ARRESTED ON FAKE ACCIDENT CHARGE

Joseph J. Schultz Named in Suppressed Federal Indictment Alleging Mail Fraud.

Joseph J. Schultz, former State Representative and unsuccessful Republican candidate for State Senator at the last election, is held at Police Headquarters on a suppressed mail fraud indictment in which he is named as the leader of a fake accident ring.

Held with him is Sylvester Keeney, a laborer, of 1406 Monroe street. Others named as defendants are being sought.

Postoffice Inspector Arrestus F. Burt told a Post-Dispatch reporter Schultz, using the name of a lawyer in whose office he rented desk space, had obtained a $50 settlement on a claim he presented for Keeney. Keeney filed the claim on the ground that he had been injured falling on the sidewalk in front of the Famous-Barr Co. warehouse.

Two other claims for damages as a result of falls are set out in the indictment, Burt said, although no settlements were obtained in these instances.

Schultz, Burt said, admitted writing letters to insurance companies on the stationery of the lawyer whose office he shared, and signing the lawyer's name to the letters. He asserted it was his usual practice to handle the lawyer's correspondence, but the lawyer denied this and satisfied postoffice inspectors that he had no knowledge of Schultz' activities.

The investigation which led to the indictment was begun by the Grievance Committee of the St. Louis Bar Association as an inquiry into the lawyer's professional conduct, on the assumption, now known to be false, that he had written the letters to which Schultz signed his name.

Schultz, a real estate broker, and not an attorney, lives at 1904 Hadley street. In the 1931 Legislature he represented the Fourth District, and in the last election he was the Republican nominee in the Thirty-third Senatorial District.

Four years ago he was acquitted in Circuit Court of obtaining money by false pretenses, a charge based on an alleged faked accident claim which an insurance company paid $100 to settle.

In that case the State alleged Schultz arranged for his wife and two other persons to pretend that they had been injured in an automobile collision. At Schultz' trial the Judge directed a verdict of acquittal because the $100 check offered in evidence was a check of the General Accident, Fire & Life Insurance Corporation, Ltd., of Philadelphia, whereas the information on which the trial was held gave the name of the insurance company as the "General Accident Co."

Five Officers Indicted, Accused of Extortion Scheme.

Indictments against five law enforcement officers have been returned by the Federal grand jury in connection with an alleged extortion scheme for which the men were arrested March 10. District Attorney Harry C. Blanton announced yesterday.

The defendants named were Constable Andrew T. Sears of St. Ferdinand Township; his deputies, Ray Niedringhaus and William H. Chandler, and City Detectives Charles W. Harrington and William Cooper.

They were charged with conspiracy to defraud Antonio Mattina, a bootlegger, and to extort money from him after he had been taken into custody in St. Ferdinand Township Dec. 27, 1936, and a quantity of alcohol in his automobile had been seized by a deputy of Sears. It was alleged that Sears and the detectives told Mattina that the detectives were Federal agents.

Sears was charged with illegal possession of 200 gallons of untaxed alcohol at or near his home at 2618 Terrace lane, Jennings, on the same day. Harrington and Cooper were charged with impersonating Federal officers. The indictments replaced warrants on which the men had been arrested.

IT'LL BE SPRINGTIME IN ROCKIES WHEN IT'S STILL WINTER HERE

Vernal Equinox Begins Tonight in West, Tomorrow Morning in Central Area.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19. — Spring begins this year both on March 20 and March 21. In the Central time zone, it starts at 12:43 a. m. Monday, March 21; in the East at 1:43 a. m., but in the Rocky Mountain zone the season starts at 11:43 p. m. Sunday, and on the West Coast still an hour earlier.

Forecaster H. A. Downs of the United States Weather Bureau said the vernal equinox, popularly supposed to bring a week or 10 days of heavy spring rains, is a "lot of hooey."

"They're called equinoctial rains, but there is no sense to it," he said. "The beginning of spring simply is a season of rapidly changing weather conditions, and there's no other connection between the equinox and the rains."

KEN MAYNARD'S MOVIE HORSE ATTACHED IN WOMAN'S SUIT

Held at Marion, Ark., With Truck and Trappings; Cowboy's Arrival Awaited.

MARION, Ark., March 19.—Cowboy Ken Maynard's horse Tarzan munched hay in McGee's mule barn today, detained on an attachment. The horse, the truck it rides in and all its shiny trappings were attached by court order awaiting the arrival of Maynard to make an appearance bond in connection with a $50,000 damage suit.

Miss Josephine Yannosey Seymore of Hollywood, Cal., filed the suit against Maynard, an outgrowth of an assault and battery charge to which the movie cowboy submitted in a Magistrate's court at Memphis, Tenn., Thursday. He was fined $50.

Presumably Maynard, who concluded a theater engagement in Memphis Thursday, is en route to Hollywood. That was the destination of Tarzan and his handlers when Crittenden County officers served the writ of attachment in West Memphis, Ark., yesterday.

THE REV. JOSEPH G. WESTHUES DIES OF PARALYTIC STROKE

He Was Founder and Pastor of St. Catherine's Catholic Church in Riverview Gardens.

The Rev. Joseph G. Westhues, fonder and pastor of St. Catherine's Catholic Church, Chambers road, Riverview Gardens, died last night of a paralytic stroke at De Paul Hospital. He was 54 years old and had been in ill health since last September, when he was stricken with sleeping sickness.

Father Westhues, brother of Commissioner Henry J. Westhues of the Missouri State Supreme Court, was ordained in 1907 after studying at Kenrick Seminary. He served as assistant pastod in several St. Louis churches, and as chaplain at the State Penitentiary in Jefferson City. He was appointed by Archbishop Glennon in 1922 to organize the parish in Riverview Gardens, and had been associated with that church since.

Also surviving are five brothers and a sister.

TRUCK DRIVER FINED $175, ACCUSED OF DRUNKEN DRIVING

Defendant First Says He Had One Bottle of Beer, Finally Admits to Three.

Charles Roberts, who said that his home is in Troy, Mo., but that he is occupying a room at 6201 Etzel avenue, St. Louis County, was fined $150 and costs yesterday by Police Judge Edward M. Ruddy on a charge of driving while intoxicated. He was also fined $25 and costs for careless driving.

He was arrested March 18 in front of 1402 Arlington avenue when his truck ran into the car of Meyer M. Dubin, 1358A Blackstone avenue, as the latter was backing up.

First stating that he had had only one bottle of beer, Roberts finally admitted emptying three. This caused the court to remark that "if we only had time enough we might get to the truth."

CHARITY SOLICITOR FINED FOR NOT HAVING PERMIT

Richard Wright First Person Convicted Under Ordinance Passed In October.

Richard Wright, 1320 South Third street, was fined $25 and costs by Municipal Judge Edward M. Ruddy yesterday on a charge of soliciting without a permit, thus becoming the first person convicted under the Charity Solicitation ordinance.

At the time of his arrest on March 18 he had been authorized to receive donations by the Rev. W. J. Roberts, pastor of the Christian Volunteers' Church, also at 1320 South Third street, Wright said, adding that he had not been informed that it was necessary to have a permit.

Director of Public Welfare Joseph M. Darst, who is also chairman of the Charities Solicitation Committee, has asked for public co-operation in the enforcement of the ordinance.

SEADLUND SENTENCED TO DIE FOR KIDNAPING

Lawyers of Man Who Abducted Ross Get Stay of Execution.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Attorneys for John Henry Seadlund challenged the constitutionality of the Federal kidnaping law today in a notice of appeal filed 10 minutes after he was sentenced to die in the electric chair April 19 for kidnaping.

Their action, producing an automatic stay of execution, gave Seadlung at least until May 19 to live because United States District Judge John P. Barnes granted the court-appointed lawyers, Floyd E. Thompson and Frederick Burnham, 60 days to perfect the appeal.

Seadlund pleaded guilty to the $50,000 ransom abduction of Charles S. Ross, 72-year-old Chicago business man, last Sept. 25. Ross and Seadlund's confederate, James Atwood Gray, were murdered at the kidnapers' hideout, a cave, near Spooner, Wis.

A jury in Judge Barnes' court decreed the extreme penalty for Seadlund Wednesday.

He was the fifth man condemned to die under the law passed in 1932. Arthur Gooch was hanged in 1936 at McAlester, Ok., for kidnaping two Texas peace officers. Arnett A. Booth, John Travis and Orville Adkins were scheduled to be hanged Monday at Moundsville, W. Va., for kidnaping Dr. James L. Seder.

Judge Barnes overruled defense motions for a new trial and arrest of judgment, then asked Seadlund: "Have you anything further to say?"

"No," muttered the one-time Ironton (Minn.) mechanic, shaking his head. He was handcuffed to two deputy marshals.

Judge Barnes then pronounced sentence. A few moments later Seadlund's right hand was freed of its handcuff so he could sign the appeal notice.

Court attaches said his lease on life would be extended to at least seven months from now if the appeal were not ready in time for the April term of the Circuit Court of Appeals and went over to the October term.

WEISENBURGER ADMITS AIDING IN FIGHT ON STRIKE

Tells LaFollette Committee Letter He Wrote Helped Johnstown, Pa., 'Citizens' Committee.'

SENT OUT WITH COPIES OF 'AD'

Manufacturers' Association Officer Recounts Appeal for Contributions in Labor Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19. — Investigators for the Senate Civil Liberties Committee made public today a letter which Chairman La Follette (Prog.), Wisconsin, said showed the National Association of Manufacturers helped promote a fund raising campaign for the Johnstown, Pa., "Citizens' Committee" in last year's steel strike.

The letter, written by Walter B. Weisenburger, executive vice-president of the Association, suggested to about 30 large manufacturers that they arrange to have published the Johnstown Committee's appeal for financial aid.

Weisenburger, at today's hearing of the committee, agreed that his letter might have "had the effect" of promoting financial support for the Johnstown Committee, but asserted the Association did not have that intent.

Enclosed with the letters was a copy of the Johnston Committee's "We protest" advertisement, appealing for cash donations.

The advertisement was published in about 40 metropolitan newspapers in June. It said the action of Gov. George Earle of Pennsylvania in closing the Johnstown plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation was an "affront."

Lawrence W. Campbell, secretary of the Johnstown Committee, filed with the Senate investigators a letter in which he said that the "great middle class of America" made up of 70 per cent of the population but was "being crushed and exterminated by the epidemic of unwarranted industrial conflicts."

Asserting that some Government officials had "abetted and condoned" labor conflicts, Campbell said the "middle class cannot be expected to remain passive and tolerant while being exterminated."

Weisenburger's Letter.

Weisenburger's letter, written on June 24, said, "We think this evidence of community attitude and effort in Johnstown, Pa., has real significance." It declared that one large manufacturer contemplated arranging for the publication of the advertisement in cities where it had branch plants.

"It is possible that other manufacturers having branch plants in different communities will wish to take the same action," the letter said. "It has been suggested that a practical means of facilitating prompt appearance of the advertisement would be to wire the Johnstown committee, whose address appears in the advertisement, for permission to have it appear at your expense in one or more local papers in the community in which your branch is located.

"We are sure you will appreciate the present importance of this advertisement and its possible use."

Didn't Investigate.

La Follette asked Weisenburger if he knew that Bethlehem Steel had contributed $25,000 to the Johnstown committee when he wrote the letter. "No," Weisenburger replied.

"Didn't you think it important to investigate what use might be made of funds resulting from this ad?" La Follette asked. "No, we thought because it was a citizens' movement, that spoke for itself," Weisenburger said. He added there was "no record" of the advertisement having been published anywhere at the suggestion of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Winding up the investigation of the Johnstown Citizens' Committee and the Association, LaFollette put in the record several affidavits and telegrams which he said related to "conflicting" testimony about the purchase of tear gas for the city of Johnstown during the strike.

Officials of the Bethlehem plant testified they paid for the gas through Charles Adams, an employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Mayor Daniel J. Shields asserted he had paid for it with Citizens' Committee cash received from Bethlehem.

An affidavit by Adams and communications from Federal Laboratories, where the gas was purchased for delivery to the city police, said Adams paid for the gas with Bethlehem funds.

ROOSEVELT OPPOSES BUYING OF 3 LINERS

Does Not Want to Put Government in Competition With Intercoastal Lines.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, made public today a letter from President Roosevelt opposing passage of a resolution by Senator McAdoo (Dem.), California, calling for the purchase of three luxury liners by the Government and their operation in intercoastal trade.

As a result of the letter, written to McAdoo, the Senate Commerce Committee delayed final action on the McAdoo resolution, on which it had reached a tie vote earlier in the week.

In the letter, the President said the effect of the resolution for purchase of the ships and their operation would be to put "the Government in direct competition with the six or seven other intercoastal lines operating on the New York-California route which are now being operated without a subsidy."

The President, in his letter, said it was the wish of the Maritime Commission to put the liners into service "on the highly important trade route between this country and the east coast of South America.

"While, of course, I regret that economic factors apparently prevent a financially successful luxury liner service between California and New York," his letter said: "I must say also that I am wholly in accord with the policy of the commission in attempting in every way to build up and improve the South American service.

"For the reasons above stated, I am constrained to say that it will not be possible for me to indicate my approval of the resolution."

While the committee met, California's congressional delegation discussed the problem with Roosevelt. McAdoo, who headed the group of 13, said Roosevelt made it clear he was anxious to solve the problem of keeping the ships on the run despite the lack of operating subsidies that are paid American ships in foreign service.

McAdoo said Roosevelt promised to consult the maritime commission without delay and added the Californians were "very hopeful" for a solution.

"We are proposing emergency aid only for a year," McAdoo said. "The Government has just given $243,000,000 subsidy to the railroads, which will cost California farmers more than $20,000,000 in increased rates, and it is only fair that the shipping be compensated."

Others in the conference were Representatives Lea, McGrath, Kramer, Scott, Sheppard and Tolan, Democrats; Englebright, Carter and Gearhart, Republicans, and Havenner, Progressive.

Accountant, at S E C Hearing, Says Balance Sheets Err If It Isn't Shown.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—R. E. Warren, Cleveland accountant, testified at a Securities and Exchange Commission hearing today that balance sheets of the Missouri Pacific Railroad were misleading "if they failed to disclose a liability of $15,000,000."

Warren is an accountant for Alleghany Corporation and its subsidiary, Terminal Shares, Inc.

The commission contends that contracts between the Missouri Pacific and Terminal Shares for the purchase of securities gave rise to a liability of about $15,000,000 which the Missouri Pacific failed to disclose in a registration statement. The hearing was ordered to determine whether about $153,000,000 of common and preferred stocks of the railroad should be suspended from the New York Stock Exchange.

Luther M. Martin, Chicago attorney for a stockholders' committee, asked permission to argue Monday against removal of the stocks from the Exchange.

The bonds of the road are not involved.

PUBLIC'S AID TO BE SOUGHT FOR WILDLIFE CONSERVATION

Roosevelt Proclaims This as "National Wildlife Week"; Radio Programs Arranged.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The nation's conservationists will appeal to the public next week to support President Roosevelt's plea that the United States preserve its "assets in wildlife."

In a proclamation designating the week as "National Wildlife Week," President Roosevelt called on "all of our citizens to recognize the importance of the problem of conservation."

"Only through the full co-operation of all can wildlife be restored for the present generation and perpetuated for posterity," he declared.

A series of radio programs on conservation programs was arranged by the National Wildlife Federation for broadcast nationally during the week. One of the speakers will be Ira N. Gabrielson, Chief of the Federal Bureau of Biological Survey. His talk on activities of the bureau will be broadcast at 11:30 a. m. Wednesday.

The Federation, under leadership of J. N. (Ding) Darling, former chief of the biological survey, will urge congressional appropriation of about $1,000,000 to inaugurate a program of Federal-State co-operative game refuges.

UNDIVIDED PROFIT TAX REFUND IS URGED AT HEARING

J. W. Oliver Tells Senate Committee Levy Was Unjustly Imposed, Should Be Returned.

BANKER FEARS CAPITAL SIT-DOWN

Morris Wertheim Foresees This Unless Law Is Changed—Processing Assessment Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The Senate Finance Committee, in an unusual Saturday session, heard J. W. Oliver of New York, representing the Tax Committee of the New York Merchants' Association, advocate repeal of the undistributed profits levy, and suggests "that this Committee show a spirit of fairness to the taxpayers of the country by recognizing that this tax was unjustly imposed, and that every dollar of this tax which has been collected by the Federal Government be refunded."

Treasury statisticians indicated about $200,000,000 had been collected.

Other business spokesmen urged repeal of the undistributed profits levy and revision of the capital gains tax.

The House-approved bill retains the principle of the profits levy for corporations having incomes in excess of $25,000 a year.

Morris Wertheim, an investment banker of New York, told the committee a "sit-down strike" of capital "certainly will be here very shortly unless our tax laws are changed."

He said that while there now is no "concerted" sit-down strike on the part of capital, Government tax policies have caused "an unwillingness on the part of capital to invest in industry."

Chairman Harrison said a proposal to add commodity processing levies to the administration's tax revision bill might delay enactment of the measure. His committee is considering eliminating the undistributetd profits tax and modifying the corporate gains tax.

Senator Pope (Dem.), Idaho, an author of the new farm program, proposed yesterday an amendment levying "tariff equalization" taxes on the processing of wheat, corn, tobacco, rice, cotton and synthetic fibers.

He said the levies would add $212,000,000 to the $500,000,000 now provided for the payment of farm benefits.

Harrison said that if Pope demanded hearings on the processing levies, it would be necessary to hear the views of those opposing such taxes, entailing considerable time.

MOTHER SEEKS GUARDIAN FOR YOUTH MARRIED 4 TIMES

Petitions to Have Angelo Lodato Held Incompetent Filed After Bigamy Charges Are Dropped.

A petition to have Angelo Lodato declared of unsound mind and not competent to manage his affairs was filed in Probate Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary Moncado, 1823 Carr street. He has been married four times although he is only 21 years old and on three occasions authorities have sought to prosecute him for bigamy but failed each time.

Mrs. Moncado is Lodato's mother, her attorney, Joseph E. Catanzaro, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. The youth was adopted in childhood by an aunt, Mrs. Mary Lodato, who left him her estate of $24,000 when she died in May, 1936, Catanzaro asserted.

Mrs. Moncado is seeking to have Lodato declared of unsound mind in order that a guardian may be appointed for him to manage his inherited real estate, the attorney added. A hearing will be held before Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold March 28.

Lodato's first marriage was annulled. His second wife, Mrs. Gracia Scorfina, divorced him Feb. 8. His third wife, Mrs. Veronica McNicholas Lodato, filed suit for divorce Tuesday. His fourth mate, Mrs. Imagean Pierce Lodato, whom he married in St. Charles nine days ago, announced she was "going to hang on to him," in the Circuit Attorney's office Thursday. At that time a bigamy warrant was refused because the last two Lodato marriage ceremonies took place in St. Charles.

MINERS' LOCAL OUSTS STIEHL

Declares Belleville Union Secretary Can't Hold Office for 99 Years.

Sherman Stiehl, recording secretary of Belleville Local No. 4, Progressive Miners of America, was ousted from office and declared ineligible to hold office for 99 years at a meeting of the local Friday night. Union officers said the action was caused by dissatisfaction with Stiehl's handling of the affairs of the Miners' and Merchants' Welfare Association during the unsuccessful fight on the St. Louis smoke abatement ordinance. Stiehl said he will appeal the ouster action to the union's district executive board.

CHAMBER'S TRAFFIC BOARD INTERVENES IN RATE CASES

Action Taken on Two Railroad Matters Before Interstate Commerce Commission.

Announcement of intervention by the Traffic Board of the Chamber of Commerce in two railroad rate cases pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission was made yesterday by the chamber. The board acted Thursday.

In one case the Southern Governors' Committee is seeking lower rates on many products manufactured in the South and shipped north. The Traffic Board is opposing this on the ground that St. Louis shippers would be placed at a disadvantage. In the other case, action was instituted by the I. C. C. itself to investigate class freight rates between southern points and between southern and northern points.

The Traffic Board decided not to oppose the proposed abandonment by the Frisco Railway of 41 miles of branch line in Wayne and Carter counties, Missouri, because other transportation service is available.

EX-POLICEMAN SEEKS PENSION; HE WAS SHOT BY GUDGY GUNN

Francis G. Cook Asks for $120 a Month and Gross Award of $1000.

Suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Francis G. Cook, a former patrolman, against the Police Retirement System to obtain a pension of $120 a month and a gross award of $1000. He sets forth he has been denied a pension although permanently incapacitated as a result of being shot last April by "Gudgy" Gunn, Deputy Constable in the court of Justice of the Peace Jimmy Miller.

At the time Cook reported Gunn, an ex-convict, shot him when he refused his drunken invitation to "go out and have a good time."

According to the petition Cook is paralyzed from the waist down. His attorney, Louis Hudson, told a reporter he was released from the police force about three months ago on the ground he was incapacitated as a result of accidental injury.

Later a petition for a monthly award was presented to the Police Department System, but the application was rejected on the ground Cook was not on active duty when shot, the attorney said. The attorney contends that the injury was inflicted as the officer was endeavoring to preserve the peace.

Cook joined the police force in 1933 and is 29 years old. A bullet was removed from his spine in an operation at De Paul Hospital.

New Books About Spain at Library

St. Louis University announced yesterday the acquisition of a number of books about Spain for its library. Most of them deal with the current Civil War and many are written from the Fascist point of view. It was also announced that the library is now receiving a new publication entitled "Spain." This semi-monthly, devoted to current events, is edited in New York.

DOCTORS' VIEW OF DUPLICATION OF SERVICES FOR THE INDIGENT

County Medical Society Bulletin Says Profession Is Still Waiting for Action.

The organized medical profession of St. Louis is still waiting for steps to be taken to eliminate duplication of services in the treatment of indigent sick persons, an editorial in the current bulletin of the St. Louis County Medical Society states.

"The new ordinance for venereal control is about to be O K'd by the St. Louis Medical Society," the editorial says, "but has it occurred to the members of that committee that here was a splendid opportunity to hasten the establishment of a central admitting bureau for the host of cases that will be sent to the hospital clinics for treatment at 50 cents a treatment?

"What a chance to include some provision in the new ordinance for the establishment of such an admitting bureau. New York is attempting to establish such a bureau by law. Washington, D. C., has had one for more than two years."

FIRED UNIONISTS TO TAKE STAND AT HANNIBAL HEARING

N L R B to Call Three, Said to Have Been Dropped by Shoe Plant for A. F. L. Activities.

75 WITNESSES HEARD SO FAR

Testimony Has Been That International Co. Inspired and Dominated Company Union.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HANNIBAL, Mo., March 19.—Attorneys for the National Labor Relations Board expect to complete within a few days the board's side of the case against the International Shoe Co., which is being heard here before Trial Examiner David F. Smith.

When the hearing is resumed Monday, Herbert L. Beadle, an employe of the company who, it is charged, was the object of discrimination because of union activities and was not rehired at the proper time, according to his seniority status after a layoff, will again be on the stand under cross-examination.

Three employes, James McQueen, Alvin Guthrie and Karl Kroger, who, it is charged, were fired for their activities in the American Federation of Labor's Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, will follow Beadle on the stand.

Testimony So Far.

In the 10 days the hearing has been in progress, there have been 75 witnesses. From most of these the Labor Board has elicited testimony in support of the charge that the shoe company, the largest in America, inspired and dominated a company union known as the Western Brotherhood of Shoe and Rubber Workers, and that it influenced its employes against the Boot and Shoe Union.

The testimony so far has been to the effect that the shoe company has long had a vehement dislike for unions, especially outside unions, and that in this feeling it was frequently backed by Hannibal officials and merchants. Also in its favor has been a powerful state of fear which the very mention of the world "union" can create in Hannibal.

The conviction that the company will move its three factories out of Hannibal if it must ever deal with a unit of a strong national union always has been present, no matter where its inspiration came from, and is, as a matter of fact, very much in evidence at present. No matter how much company officials deny that the factories may be moved in the event the Labor Board's decision is against the company, Hannibal merchants persist in thinking of this as a strong possibility.

It has also been brought out in testimony that the employes overwhelmingly favored an outside union in an election held at the plant in 1933. The results of this election never were posted by the company. In the face of the company's traditional anti-union policy, the testimony has shown that the brotherhood was organized with startling rapidity last summer and that among its leaders and advisers were some of the strongest anti-union employes and citizens of Hannibal.

"Good Faith" Defense Indicated.

Attorneys for the company have indicated in their cross-examination of witnesses that the company's defense will largely be that it has shown good faith with its employes and that, as individual employes, it has treated them well.

The brotherhood, which claims 2000 of the plants' 2850 employes, is an intervenor in the case. Its attorneys have indicated in their questions to witnesses that the Brotherhood enjoyed no more privileges at the plants than the members of the Boot and Shoe Union. Both unions have written agreements with the company designating them as collective bargaining agents for their own members. The agreements expire on the same date.

GERMAN SHIP BLOWS UP, SINKS

20 on Craft Bound for Spanish Insurgent Port Saved.

COPENHAGEN, March 19.—The German steamer Claus Boge, 2340 gross tons, on its way from Oslo, Norway, to the Spanish insurgent port of Huelva, sank in the North Sea off Hornsrev Light today after an explosion. The ship went down 10 minutes after a distress call was sent out.

The Swedish steamer Sverre Nergaard saved all the crew of 21 except the captain, who was thought to have been lost. There were conflicting reports as to the cause of the explosion. One said it was caused by a mine, possibly from World War days. Another said the explosion occurred in the hold.

To Return Suspect From Oregon.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 19.—Gov. Stark issued a requisition yesterday for the return of Jennings Burnett from Corvallis, Ore., to Springfield, Mo., where he is wanted on a charge of embezzling an automobile.

New State Cancer Hospital at Columbia, Mo.

Architect's drawing of projected institution.

ARCHITECTS SUBMIT CANCER HOSPITAL PLAN

All Bedrooms in 7-Story Structure at Columbia Would Face South.

All bedrooms in the new State Cancer Hospital, to be built at Columbia, Mo., will face the south and all but 12 will have immediate access to sun balconies, under the plan submitted to the Cancer Commission by Jamieson & Spearl, St. Louis architects.

The hospital will be seven stories of reinforced concrete construction with a brown and cream-colored brick exterior. There will be accommodations for 90 bed patients in four-bed, two-bed and single rooms. About half the rooms will have more than one exposure and a shallow depth is expected to provide excellent cross ventilation.

Occupying a 40-acre site on United States Highway 40, the hospital will have landscaped grounds designed to give walking patients the opportunity for exercise without being conspicuous to passersby. The ground floor will be occupied by the deep therapy and radium department and some service rooms. The first floor will house the administration offices and a large clinic, which is expected to serve many walking cases. The second, third and fourth floors will be given over to bed patients, and on the two upper floors there will be the operating rooms, diagnostical X-ray, research and clinical laboratories and film storage.

In order to provide southern exposure for all bedrooms, elevators and stairs are all on the north side. The design will permit extensive expansion.

Dr. Ellis Fischel, chairman of the Cancer Commission, reported to Gov. Stark yesterday that he found widespread interest in the Missouri cancer program while on a recent tour of Eastern medical centers. The American Society for Control of Cancer plans to devote a nation-wide broadcast to the Missouri program, Dr. Fischel said, and the plans for the hospital at Columbia will be featured at an exhibit of the society in New York. The Missouri hospital is the first in the United States designed exclusively for cancer patients, Dr. Fischel reported.

A cancer clinic and hospital of 36 beds will be opened tomorrow at the Fulton State Hospital as the first unit for control of the disease. A similar unit probably will be established at the State Hospital at St. Joseph within the next few months, and both eventually will be operated as branch units of the main institution at Columbia. The Legislature appropriated $500,000 to build the State Cancer Hospital and $100,000 for operating expenses for one year. The hospital is scheduled for completion next year.

SHOE POLISH FIRM, UNION SETTLE DISPUTE

NLRB Hearing Put Off Pending Election at Barton Manufacturing Plant.

Hearing of National Labor Relations Board charges against the Barton Manufacturing Co., makers of shoe polish, 4157 North Kingshighway, was postponed indefinitely yesterday when a settlement was reached in a dispute between the company and the C I O Gas By-Product, Coke and Chemical Workers' union, which had filed a complaint with the Labor Board.

The company agreed to rehire four of five employes who the union contended were discharged for union activity. An election to determine whether a majority of the plant's 43 workers wish to be represented in collective bargaining by the C I O union, an affiliate of the United Mine Workers of America, will be conducted by the regional Labor Board office Wednesday.

Bargaining Promise.

If a majority of the workers vote for representation by the union, the company will bargain "in good faith" with the union as sole bargaining agent. One of the charges against the concern was that it had failed to bargain collectively, which was denied with the assertion that the union was evasive in replying to several requests for proof of majority representation.

In stipulations presented to Trial Examiner Peter F. Ward, who was to have presided at the hearing, counsel for the company and the Labor Board and representatives of the union agreed that there should be no electioneering before the election by secret ballot Wednesday afternoon at a public school building near the plant.

The four workers who are to be called back to work tomorrow will not receive back pay, it was agreed. The union alleged they were victims of discrimination when the plant reopened recently after a seasonal shutdown and they were not rehired. Most of the concern's employes are deaf mutes.

Violation Not Admitted.

The company declared in the stipulations that its agreement to a cease and desist order being entered against it by the Labor Board was not an admission of violation of the Wagner Act, but a formality necessary to settlement of the case.

Under the agreement, the concern will post notices in its plant affirming the employes' rights under the Wagner Act and stating that it will not interfere with the workers' right to organize and bargain collectively and that it will bargain with the union if a majority designate it as their representative.

The hearing was to have begun Friday morning, but it was delayed until the agreement was reached.

OPERATION ON JOHN SARGENT

Former Attorney-General Reported Doing Nicely.

By the Associated Press.

BURLINGTON, Vt., March 19.—John G. Sargent, United States Attorney-General under President Coolidge, underwent a serious operation here today.

Dr. W. G. Townsend, who performed the operation, declined to divulge its nature, but said the patient was doing very nicely. Sargent, 77 years old, entered the hospital earlier this week for observation.

Marriage-Health Bill Meeting.

The Missouri Women's Chamber of Commerce will meet tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the Melbourne Hotel to discuss the marriage-health bill which it will sponsor at the next session of the State Legislature. The meeting will open a membership drive as a step toward increasing interest in the bill.

UNION DRAFTS CHARGES AGAINST DR. DAMROSCH

Musicians' New York Local Slandered by Him, Its Secretary Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The executive board of Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians is preparing charges against Dr. Walter Damrosch, conductor and composer, alleging that Dr. Damrosch has slandered the local and its members, it is announced today by William Feinberg, secretary of Local 802. If proved, the charges may lead to the expulsion of Dr. Damrosch as a member of the union.

In an address March 5, Dr. Damrosch charged that attempts of the union to maintain wage scales had caused widespread unemployment among the musicians, and the next night he quoted a former official of the union, who, he said, told him that of the 15,000 musicians in the Musicians' Union of New York, only 2000 play their instruments well. These statements are the basis of the charges.

Dr. Damrosch has testified at a Senate hearing and has spoken in public in opposition to the bill introduced in Congress by Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.), Florida, and Representative John M. Coffee (Dem.), Washington, for the creation of a Federal Bureau of Fine Arts.

Feinberg admitted that Damrosch's opposition to the bill was "distasteful to the local," but insisted that it was not the reason for the charges. What was objectionable, he said, was Dr. Damrosch's taking "advantage of a difference of opinion to launch an unjustified and anti-union attack upon our organization."

Dr. Damrosch said today at his home that he had not yet received notification of the charges from the union. "I shall be glad," he said, "to meet the board of the Musicians' Union of New York at any time to prove to them that the so-called charges against me are absolutely unfounded."

He dismissed the charge that he had said that there were only 2000 really good musicians in the local, reiterating that he had not made this statement of his own belief, but had merely repeated the statement of a former official of the union, whom he declined to name.

"I still believe," he said, "that if, during the terrible years of the depression, the governors of the union had lowered their rates more of their 10,000 members without work would have found it. That is an opinion which I have the right to hold and the right to pronounce as a member of the union. I am a member of four unions. The interest of all these unions is commercial and their object is to get the highest compensation possible for the labor of their members. But I don't want such organizations to dictate to the President of the United States whom he shall choose as director of a National Bureau of the Arts in Washington."

MAN, 74, HIT BY AUTO SUFFERS SKULL INJURY

Driver Says Victim Stepped in Path of Car in Rain; Boy on Bicycle Hurt.

Stanley Krug, 1519A Cass avenue, a cook, suffered a skull injury, fractures of several ribs and internal injuries last night when he was struck by an automobile at Twelfth boulevard and Biddle street. The driver, Joseph Haug, 872 Elias avenue, told police that Krug, walking in the rain, stepped into the path of his car about 25 feet north of the intersection. Krug, 64 years old, was taken to City Hospital.

James Adragua, 15 years old, 1616 Belt avenue, suffered fractures of the left leg yesterday when struck by an automobile when riding a bicycle in the 5800 block of Natural Bridge avenue. He was taken to Dr. L. B. Tiernon's Hospital in Pine Lawn by the driver, Orville Winchell, 4605A Richard place, who told deputy sheriffs the boy turned suddenly in front of his car.

MAN, 65, KNOCKS DOWN ARMED ROBBER AND AVERTS HOLDUP

Maplewood Clerk Says His Reply to "This Is a Stickup," Was a Blow on the Chin.

Charles Rochelle, 65-year-old night clerk for the City Ice & Fuel Co., reported he frustrated an attempted holdup last night of the company's Maplewood branch at 7020 Manchester avenue by hitting an armed robber in the face and knocking him off a loading platform outside the office door.

Rochelle told police that two men, each about 25 years old, knocked on his door about 9:30 o'clock. When he answered, one of them drew a revolver and said, "This is a stickup."

At that, he said, he hit the man on the chin, knocking him to a brick pavement about four feet below the platform, where the other man helped his companion to his feet and both fled. Rochelle lives at 4462 Oakland avenue.

ALVA J. MILTON KILLED IN CRASH AT SAFETY ZONE

Cattle Buyer Dies of Injuries Suffered When Auto Hits Concrete Marker.

Alva J. Milton, a cattle buyer living at the Embassy Apartments, 530 Union boulevard, died yesterday at City Hospital of injuries suffered when his automobile struck a concrete safety zone marker in Union boulevard, at Cates avenue.

Milton, 58 years old, was unconscious when taken from his machine, which smashed a light standard on the marker. He suffered fractures of the skull, jaw, ribs, ankle and leg.

Private Albert Dougherty of Scott Field suffered fractures of the skull and jaw when knocked down by an automobile at Grand boulevard and Market street at 2 a. m. yesterday. A witness told police Dougherty walked against the side of an automobile driven by Humphreys A. Crooks, a printer, 6606 Hoffman avenue. Crooks took the soldier to City Hospital.

LIVING INDIANS GIVE CLEW TO THOSE OF PAST

Columbia U. to Study Tribes and Relics on the Upper Missouri.

From a Correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The establishment of an archeological laboratory at Columbia University, initiating an extensive program of research to include expeditions of graduate students to North Dakota and to Central and South America, has been announced by the department of anthropology. The laboratory will be directed by Dr. William Duncan Strong, associate professor of anthropology and former anthropologist of the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian institution, Washington.

Dr. Strong will lead an expedition to North Dakota next summer. Excavators from the university plan to concentrate on the northern plains of the upper Missouri River, heretofore studied slightly. In co-operation with the North Dakota Historical Society ethnological research will be combined with studies of living Indians and with excavations in numerous fortified, historic and prehistoric villages.

Great Plains Relics.

"The earliest known traces of men in the Western Hemisphere have recently been revealed in the Great Plains of the United States," Dr. Strong said. "To understand the significance of these discoveries it is essential to work back into the past from the earliest historic sites in the region. In this way it is possible to establish a true connection between history and prehistory."

Contact material from an early historic Arikara Indian village, which is now being examined by Columbia students, reveals evidences of the visit by Lewis and Clark and the later destruction of the village by the United States army, under Col. Leavenworth, and his Sioux allies. Supplied by the Bureau of American Ethnology, co-operating with Columbia, the material has already solved a mystery which puzzled artillery officers accompanying Col. Leavenworth on the punitive expedition against the Arikara in 1823, Dr. Strong revealed.

The officers had noted that cannon balls with fuses attached failed to explode. In an official dispatch it was reported that the ammunition was defective.

Dr. Strong has unearthed an unexploded shell in the floor of one of the earth-lodges. He asked one of the descendants of the Arikara on the Fort Berthold Reservation, North Dakota, what he knew of the episode. The Indian explained that members of the tribe won honors during the bombardment by leaping on cannon balls when they dropped into the besieged village and removing the burning fuses before the shells exploded.

Dr. Strong said that the Columbia laboratory was designed for the complete training of students in archeology. The only adequate way to train archaeologists," he said, "is by excavation work in the field, combined with the actual handling and calcification in the laboratory of the material thus secured. Laboratory analysis generally takes at least two to three times as long as does actual digging and mapping in the field. It is necessary for the good archeologist to be a historian and an ethnologist first, and an archeologist afterward."

ORAL OATH ENOUGH TO GET AID IN MARKING BALLOTS

Attorney-General's Office So Rules When Kansas City Democrats Protest at Signed Affidavits.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 19.—Voters in the Kansas City municipal election March 29 who ask assistance of judges in marking their ballots will have to take only an oral oath concerning the reason they are unable to mark the ballots, Attorney-General McKittrick's office ruled today.

The opinion was prepared by Assistant Attorney-General Olliver W. Nolen at the request of Walter W. Graves Jr., Jackson County Prosecuting Attorney.

Nolen held in a ruling Tuesday that election judges might mark ballots for voters who declared "under oath" they could not read or write or had some physical disability. Following this ruling, the city's Election Board interpreted "under oath" to mean a signed affidavit. Democratic organization leaders protested against the board's interpretation and the request for an opinion followed.

Nolen stated in his ruling today that the law would have so specified if a written oath had been intended.

Occupation of Austria Shows New German War Machine Well Geared for Swift Troop Movements

First Armed Force to Leave Reich Since 1918 Demonstrates How Planes and Trucks Have Speeded Up the Modern Army.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 19.—The occupation of Austria last week revealed Germany's war technique to be based on quick movements of troops by land and air. Military significance was seen in the workman-like demonstration of transporting soldiers by plane and truck.

The invasion showed modern armies could eliminate difficult overland marches—the German war machine, on the march for the first time since the World War, moved Germany's frontiers within 48 hours to the borders of Yugoslavia, Italy and Hungary.

Apparently troops of the Seventh and Thirteenth Army Corps were sent into Austria. They are part of the 14 corps known to be in the army which Germany has built from a force of 100,000 men to a military machine estimated at 850,000 men.

Estimates here said 50,000 German troops invaded Austria. Other estimates said 100,000 went in. They entered as conquerers without a shot being fired by the mere threat of their power which made possible the unopposed advance.

Supplementing this first armed force to step outside Germany since the World War were 16,000 regular police in addition to Nazi Storm Troop units.

Not Deemed a Rigid Test.

Though military observers watched the troop concentrations with interest they were not inclined to regard the activity as a rigid test of the army.

They felt there was too much strewing of flowers in the paths of the invaders for a detached military appraisal. Technical details, too, were hidden in traditional secrecy and no picture of the scope of the movements was available from official sources.

Military interest centered on the planes as well as the discard of heavy troop concentrations all along the border in favor of a swift fanning out from strategic garrisons.

Two hundred JU52 tri-motored transport planes, which normally carry 18 passengers, but which probably had 12 to 15 soldiers aboard with machine guns and munitions, were counted at Vienna's Aspern Airport at one time.

As an example of speed, troops of the Berlin garrison which had moved into Southern Germany March 11, left in a squadron of 38 transport planes for Vienna at 9:30 a. m. the next day from Fuestenfeldbruck, Upper Bavaria. Shortly after 11 a. m. they landed in Vienna.

A staff of 70 and 700 soldiers from the crack "Gen. Goering" Regiment were likewise taken to Graz, Austria's second largest city.

The order to push across the Austrian border was issued at 5:30 a. m. March 12, although German troops reportedly crossed at 10 p. m. March 11 at Salzburg, Mittenwald and Kufstein.

Colonel-General Feodor von Bock directed the advance. Motorized units were commanded by Gen. Guderian and the air force by Gen. Sperrle.

The mobilization order was issued to the Seventh Army Corps late on March 10. Early the next day first detachments left Munich in army trucks principally and commandeered commercial vehicles.

They carried with them bridge-building materials, pontoons, motor boats, barbed wire and sandbags but did not use them. Blank or disguised number plates made it impossible to determine the identity of the various units.

The first troops went north from Munich toward the Ingolstadt Garrison, but it is believed they turned in an easterly direction soon after and advanced on the Austrian frontier between Passau and Braunau at the River Inn.

Later the road to Garmisch-Partenkirchen, leading to the frontier at Griessenleermoos and Mittenwaldschanitz, as well as the superhighway to Kufstein and Salzburg and the side road to Fuessen were choked with army trucks carrying motorized infantry, cavalry and heavy and light artillery with ammunition.

Trucks Go 32 Miles an Hour.

From the afternoon of March 11 through the next day, reinforcements pushed into Munich from Ulm, Stuttgart, Ludwigsburg, Wurzburg, Bamberg and Regensburg, all in Southern Germany.

By breakfast time Saturday one report said 100 troop-conveying planes already had landed at Vienna and a vanguard of motorized equipment, tanks and marching soldiers had moved well into Austria in several columns.

The super-highway from the Inn River bridge on the border back to Siegsdorf, Bavaria, carried an unbroken stream of military conveyances at a speed of 32 miles an hour.

The outpouring of troops did not slacken appreciably until Sunday night.

At noon Saturday Alpine infantry detachments reached Innsbruck.

By 1:30 p. m. troops had entered Linz and at 3:30 p. m. German and Italian troops exchanged greetings at the Brenner Pass on Austria's southern frontier. Motorized equipment reached Vienna, a distance of 187 miles from the border, late Saturday. Infantry progressed at the rate of 25 miles a day.

By the following Tuesday approximately 400 tanks and 500 planes were in Vienna, according to published reports.

MAN ORDERED DEPORTED BY U.S. FOR 1903 KILLING SEEKS STAY

Moral Turpitude Charged Because of Crime Committed in Yugoslavia.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19.—United States District Judge John P. Barnes today adjourned to April 9 a decision on the habeas corpus petition in behalf of Vincent Zupancic, 62 years old, an Ogiesby (Ill.) laborer ordered deported to Yugoslavia.

The order, issued Dec. 7, 1937, was effective March 12, but deportation was held up by the habeas corpus action. The Court ordered counsel for Zupancic and the Government to file briefs.

The action was based on the Government's contention that Zupancic's conviction for manslaughter in 1903 in a part of Austria-Hungary that is now Yugoslavia constituted moral turpitude, hence was ground for deportation.

Zupancic served four and a half years of a six-year term for the killing, which resulted from a saloon fight. He visited the United States in 1907 and took up permanent residence in 1912. He served 11 years in the Illinois State prison for manslaughter in the killing of his wife in an affray in the saloon he operated in La Salle, Ill. The shooting occurred Oct. 27, 1920, in what he said was an outgrowth of an extortion plot.

Dean Frank Martin Improving.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 19.—Dean Frank L. Martin of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, continues to show improvement in a hospital here where he has been confined since March 11, Dr. Dan G. Stine said today. Dean Martin entered the hospital after suffering a relapse following an attack of influenza last month.

eece has not been in St. Louis ent months. His wife lives in leigh, in a home built for her her father at the time of her iage to Hager.

r petition makes the conven- al allegations that Preece ed out late at night without rming her of his whereabouts; he did not appear regularly at meal times; that he was often sullen and unsociable; and that he deprived her of companionship by spending his leisure time in the company of others. These actions, the petition sets out, constituted mental cruelty and destroyed the happiness and impaired the health of Mrs. Preece.

Preece was formerly the husband of his wife's cousin, Lilly Busch Magnus, who divorced him June 27, 1936, 10 days after his present wife had divorced Hager.

Mrs. Preece's father, who ended his life in 1934, left his estate to his widow with the suggestion that she take an annual income of $60,000 and distribute the rest of the income among their five children.

$69,300 PENALTY SUIT AGAINST SHOE FIRM

Hamilton-Brown Accused of Failing to Give Information to Trade Board.

The Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., 1140 Washington avenue, was named defendant yesterday in a suit to collect $69,300 in penalties assessed by the Federal Trade Commission. The action was filed in United States District Court by District Attorney Harry C. Blanton.

The company is charged with failing to answer parts of a questionnaire sent to it by the commission on March 26, 1936.

The act of Congress which permitted the commission to send the questionnaire in an investigation of agricultural income carried a penalty of $100 a day for failure to give the required information within 30 days.

After a warning sent by the commission to Luke E. Hart, then president of the shoe company, the penalty clause was invoked. The suit asks for penalties from April 27, 1936, to yesterday.

The questions which the company refused to answer pertained to net sales, salaries of offices, a statement of assets and liabilities, and the amount of stocks and bonds issued at par in the preceding year, according to Blanton.

The suit is the first of its kind filed in this district. Blanton said others have been filed in the East, and in one the Federal Court ordered the recalcitrant company to give the information sought.

Presley Edwards, now president of Hamilton-Brown, said he was not prepared to comment.

HIRTH REVERSES SELF ON GOV. STARK

Says He Was Wrong in Predicting Governor Would Go Along With Pendergast.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 19.—William Hirth, farm leader, issued a statement tonight praising the "courage and independence" of Gov. Stark, who defeated him for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Hirth also urged defeat of the Pendergast organization in the Kansas City election March 29.

"In discussing the candidacy of Gov. Stark during the campaign," Hirth said, "I freely paid tribute to his high standing as a man and citizen, but having received the indorsement of the big Kansas City boss, I predicted that when he became Governor he would 'go along.' And I think this was the belief of many others who are familiar with practical politics.

"And thus, when during the campaign, Stark repeatedly insisted that he was for 'clean elections' I took it with a grain of salt.

"However, when the Governor failed to name new Election Commissioners in Kansas City while the Legislature was in session, I began to wonder, and when later in a conference with Pendergast it was reported he had flatly refused to reappoint Bellemere and Aylward, I realized that something unusual was happening. And as time has passed my attitude for the Governor's courage and independence has become one of unstinted admiration."

Says Stark Fights Alone.

Hirth reviewed "the high lights of Stark's acts since he took office that concern the machine." In late years, he said, "the machine has reached out into the State, and thus during the recent elections small but extremely practical Pendergast machines have been on the job in almost every county."

"I say that the Governor is fighting the machine single-handed and alone because, since most politicians are cowards, they are sitting on the fence to see how the battle will end ere they shout, 'The king is dead, long live the king!'"

"How will the machine strike back at the Governor?" he asked. "No doubt it will strive to elect as many of its followers to the Legislature this fall as possible in order to block Stark's program."

Hirth said there were newspaper reports that "the machine will back" Senator Albert M. Clark of Richmond for the Supreme Court seat no wheld by William F. Frank, Republican candidate for re-election, and "also rumors that the machine will go after the scalp of Judge James M. Douglas, Stark appointee from St. Louis, who will be a candidate to succeed himself."

Predicts Big Court Fight.

"And thus," he said, "unless all signs fail, the greatest battle over the personnel of the Supreme Court in the history of the State is in the offing."

"If I were a citizen of Kansas City," he continued, "I would delight in supporting the coalition ticket, and I would do this because political crooks have no right to hoist the banner of any political party. They are simply crooks, and deserve the contempt of all decent men and women, irrespective of party."

"Among the 90,000 who recently remained away from the polls, are there not enough men and women who have the red blood of their ancestors in their veins to strike a blow for decent government in this, the greatest opportunity they have had in years? Do they not owe this much to their Election Commissioners and to the Governor and Mr. Maurice Milligan (United States District Attorney), who are heroically endeavoring to make honest elections in Kansas City possible once more?"

TOWNSEND URGES HIS OLD AGE PLAN AT SENATE HEARING

Declares Transactions Tax Would Provide Employment for 25,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend told Congress today that adoption of his old age pension plan would provide employment for 25,000,000 people.

Townsend, making his first appearance before a congressional committee since he walked out of a House hearing in 1936, gave his views to the Senate Unemployment Committee.

The author of the old age pension plan which bears his name, told the committee there was no need of Government borrowing for relief purposes.

He urged adoption of his plan of levying a 2 per cent transactions tax to finance payments of pensions to persons over 60 years old who would be forced to spend all of their monthly benefits.

MOUSE SINGS WITH CANARY

Joins Bird in Cage in Home of Memphis Woman.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 19. — A singing mouse has moved into a cage with Mrs. Gladys Wilkins' singing canary. It just hopped into the bird cage recently, Mrs. Wilkins said today, and began sharing the seed and other food.

The canary is stand-offish, but otherwise the two get along well enough. The mouse's contribution to the singing, Mrs. Wilkins concedes, could stand improvement.

MAN SHOT IN BACK; COMPANION SOUGHT

E. St. Louisan Says Shooting Followed Quarrel in Tavern Over Nickel.

Vahan Mikoelian, a janitor, of 1336 East Broadway, East St. Louis, was shot in the back and seriously wounded last night by an unidentified assailant in the 1400 block of East Broadway. Police were seeking a man with whom Mikoelian said he had had an altercation in a tavern a short time before.

The bullet entered the right side of his back and ranged upward into the chest. Miss Vicky Vartanian of Granite City, who was visiting at 1419 East Broadway, heard the shot and ran outside in time to see a man disappear down an alley. She assisted the wounded man to a nearby cleaning shop, where police were called.

Mikoelian, 45-year-old Armenian, was taken to St. Mary's Hospital and told police, through an interpreter, that he had quarreled with a drinking companion, whose name he did not know, after he refused to give the man a nickel to play a phonograph. Both left the tavern about the same time, he said.

KIRKWOOD GRADE SEPARATION SURVEY AND ESTIMATE ORDERED

Highway Commission Asks for Data on Cost of Improving Lindbergh-Manchester Intersection.

A survey and cost estimate for a grade separation or roadway widening at the intersection of Lindbergh boulevard and Manchester road, Kirkwood, was ordered by the State Highway Commission, meeting here Friday, on recommendation of Robert B. Brooks, St. Louis member of the commission. Value of additional right-of-way needed also will be appraised.

Brooks said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that no funds were available for the construction work yet, but that eventual approval of the plan would depend on the commission's ability to acquire right-of-way at a fair price. A grade separation, as originally contemplated, was preferable, he declared, but if that was too costly, widening would be considered.

When Manchester, which carries U. S. highway No. 50, and Lindbergh, carrying U. S. No. 66, were widened to four lanes each, varying distances in each direction from their intersection were left in two-lane width because of the expectation that Manchester would be lowered to pass under Lindbergh.

WON'T SPARE 3 KIDNAPERS

West Virginia Governor Declines to Intervene in Executions.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 19.—Gov. Homer A. Holt declined today to intervene in the executions Monday of John Travis, Orville Adkins and Arnett A. Booth for the abduction of Dr. James I. Seder, 79-year-old minister, who later died. The mothers of Adkins and Travis had appealed to the Governor. No appeal was made for Booth.

In announcing his decision, Gov. Holt made public a letter from Booth asking that Travis and Adkins be spared. In their trial Adkins and Travis had contended Booth influenced them. The Governor said alienists who examined the men Wednesday reported them sane.

PRESIDENT'S RIGHTS IN T V A CASE ARGUED

Whether He Has Power to Remove Chairman Morgan Questioned.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Administration legal experts contended today that President Roosevelt could remove Arthur E. Morgan from the chairmanship of the Tennessee Valley Authority if Morgan refused to answer questions at a White House hearing Monday.

Mr. Roosevelt has given the T V A chairman until Monday afternoon to answer yes or no to presidential demands that he give facts to support his charges of misconduct against his fellow directors.

Many members of Congress contend that, if Morgan persists in his refusal to answer questions by the President and continues his demands that Congress instead of the President investigate the T V A, the most Mr. Roosevelt can do is to ask him to resign. They say the T V A Act gives Congress the power to remove directors of the public power and planning agency and authorizes the President to remove directors only in the event they are opposed to the policies of the act or appoint employes without regard to merit.

However, Administration legal experts, who declined to allow the use of their names, declared the provision for congressional removal does not impair the President's broad power to remove executive officials. They contend the Supreme Court had upheld the President's power to remove officials of the executive branch of the Government in an opinion delivered by the late Chief Justice Taft in 1926.

They said the court's later opinion, invalidating President Roosevelt's effort to remove the late William E. Humphrey from the Federal Trade Commission, had not affected the law as it would apply to Chairman Morgan.

In the Humphrey case, they said, the court held that the President could not remove an official who was an arm of the legislative or judicial branch of the government. The Trade Commission is a quasi-judicial body. But they said Morgan's post was purely executive, entirely within the President's jurisdiction.

Chinese and Prince Teh's Mongols Preparing for Clash in Suiyuan

Battle May Decide Control of Communication Line Over Which Russia Is Sending Supplies Into China.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

YULIN, Northern Shansi, China.—A clash that may decide control of the communication line over which Russia has been sending arms and supplies to China is brewing in Suiyuan Province.

Two opposing forces are preparing for battle. Neither represents Russia, which now controls Outer Mongolia, buffer state between Russia and Japan, and through which the Soviet Union maintains communications in the North with China proper.

There are three personalities in this impending fight.

The first is Prince Teh, Mongol leader, who, the Chinese charge, has sold himself to the Japanese and now serves as their puppet in the Japanese-created "Empire of Mongoko," embracing a part of Inner Mongolia, which nominally is still under China's sovereignty.

The second is Gen. Teng Pao-shan, former Deputy Pacification Commissioner for Kansu Province, who has been instructed by Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to oppose the Japanese in their aims to conquer the whole of Inner Mongolia. Gen. Teng is one of the few Chinese military leaders well versed in Mongolian affairs.

The third is Gen. Ma Chan-shan, hero of the Nonni River battle against the Japanese in 1931, who has defied all attempts of the Japanese to capture him.

Gen. Ma Once Reported Dead.

It will be recalled that the commander-in-chief of the Japanese forces in Manchuria reported to the Emperor of Japan that Gen. Ma had been "killed" during the drive in Manchuria, in evidence of which the commander sent to the Emperor what purported to be the trunks, clothing, boots and decorations of the Chinese leader. A short time after that, Gen. Ma, to the great chagrin of the Japanese army, turned up well and alive in Tientsin.

Highly skilled in all forms of border warfare, Gen. Ma has been placed in charge of special battalions of Chinese troops who will operate against the forces of Prince Teh, who now heads the "Inner Mongolia Federal local autonomy government."

Gen. Ma recently dealt a severe blow to this Government by capturing alive Prince Kang, renegade Mongol "banner" chief. Following this, a detachment of the West Banner Mongols of the Ulanchab League mutinied and joined the troops of Chiang Kai-shek in Southwestern Suiyuan.

Under Prince Teh, who has been promised rulership over what the Japanese expect to call the great Mongol empire are several thousand Mongol irregulars, who are equipped, fed and financed by the Japanese army. Their actual leader in the field, the Chinese say, is a notorious bandit chieftain, Li Shouhsin, who has always fought against the Chiang Kai-shek Government.

Chinese Prepare for Battle.

In an attempt to strengthen the Mongol insurgent front, Prince Teh has summoned repeated conferences of rebellious Mongol princes of the Ulanchab League, northwest of Kweisui, the capital of Suiyuan Province. The Chinese, on the other hand, are taking all necessary measures for the defense of Southwestern Suiyuan. Heavy contingents of troops have been placed along the 250-mile front running from Wuyuan, entering the Igecho League of the Mongols and ending at the Suiyuan-Shensi border.

Should fighting break out on the Suiyuan front, the Igecho League of Mongols is expected to be the immediate objective of the Japanese. Igecho League is of great strategic importance, as it serves as a bulwark for Ninghsia Province, in the West, and Shensi Province, in the South. The capture of Igecho League would make it possible for the Japanese to have easy access to Ninghsia Province.

Entering Ninghsia Province, the Japanese forces would be in a position to strike southward at Kansu Province, where, it is believed, they could cut off communications between China proper and Soviet-controlled Outer Mongolia.

STUDENTS' ASSEMBLY PASSES BUT ONE BILL

Others Die in Committee at One-Day Session of High School "Legislature."

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 19.—One bill passed out of 20 introduced was the Legislative record of Missouri's first student general assembly here today.

The sole surviving measure, offered by Harold F. Gibbons of Festus, set 16 years as the minimum age for persons to be granted driver's licenses; require applicants to pass driving tests; provided for revocation of licenses of intoxicated drivers and for award of stars of merit to drivers with long safety records, and limited the number of persons to occupy the front seat of a car.

The vote was 119 to 3 after the students, most of them 16 to 18 years old, had vociferously adopted an amendment reducing the age minimum from 18 to 16 years.

The only other measure to survive committees was tabled in the adjournment rush after an afternoon of debate marked by the offering of numerous amendments. All measures introduced dealt with the subject of highway safety, as prescribed by Lloyd W. King, State Superintendent of Schools, and other State officials sponsoring the educational assembly.

The 133 high school legislators, representing 108 counties, unanimously adopted a resolution for a similar session next year, laughingly approving an additional resolution that the "representatives" be allowed five cents a mile and salaries of $1 a day.

One election contest this afternoon resulted in voiding the election of Robert Fairchild of Kansas City as speaker pro tem and the election of Miss Mary Frances McAnaw of Excelsior Springs to that office. Fairchild, apparent victor in a hot three-cornered contest this morning, failed on the necessary majority of 67.

Dixon Carl Rogers of Fayette was elected speaker, Clayton James Thomas of St. Joseph headed the committee on bills and Max R. Rush of Barnard was chairman of the resolutions committee.

The session was conducted according to rules and regular legislative procedure, with the advice of Dr. J. G. Christy, Speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives.

Forrest Smith, State auditor, Robert W. Finn, State Treasurer, and King spoke briefly.

That d into Woodrow Wilson's the- sis of the self-determination of peoples.

In April, 1918, Benes had called in Rome a "congress of oppressed nations" which passed a strong anti-Austrian resolution. On May 22, Lord Robert Cecil, on behalf of Great Britain, approved this and recognized the right of the Czechs and Slovaks to complete independence. Similar action was taken on May 29 at Washington by Secretary of State Lansing.

On Sept. 3, Britain recognized the Czechoslovakian Government of the future upon the de facto basis of the National Council which Masaryk had started in 1915. America followed with recognition on Sept. 9.

On Oct. 14 Benes notified the Allies of the establishment of a central government for Czechoslovakia in Paris with himself as Foreign Minister. On Oct. 18 it proclaimed the independence of Czechoslovakia by a manifesto dated at Washington.

Two days later Masaryk, still in America, was elected president of the republic. In a speech at Philadelphia on Oct. 26 he proclaimed independence for all other oppressed peoples of Middle Europe. He stayed in America until Nov. 20, meanwhile taking the oath of office as first President of Czechoslovakia on Armistice day. His formal inauguration took place at Prague on Dec. 22.

ANTHROPOLOGISTS TO DIG ON NORTH DAKOTA PLAINS

Dr. William Duncan Strong of Columbia U. to Lead Expedition in Summer.

NEW YORK, March 19.—An expedition to ferret out secrets of prehistoric America on the northern plains of the upper Missouri River in North Dakota was announced today by Columbia University.

Dr. William Duncan Strong, associate professor of anthropology at Columbia and former anthropologist at Smithsonian Institution, Washington, will lead the expedition, setting out next summer. Dr. Strong was formerly professor of anthropology at the University of Nebraska and assistant anthropologist at the University of California.

"The earliest known traces of men in the Western Hemisphere have recently been discovered in the great plains of the United States," he said. "To understand the significance of these discoveries it is essential to work back into the past from the earliest historic sites in the region. In this way it is possible to establish a true connection between history and prehistory."

Dr. Strong said Columbia excavators would dig for fortified, historic and pre-historic village ruins in quest of weapons, pottery, hunting equipment and burial grounds.

ITALIAN POLICE PAVING WAY FOR HITLER'S VISIT

Checkup Begun of Everyone in Country Who Might be an Assassin.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 19.—Calling thousands of reserve plainclothes police back into service, Premier Mussolini has ordered Italy combed from the Alps to Sicily for that man or woman, conspirator or fanatic, whose bomb, pistol or poison flask might mar his third meeting with Chancellor Hitler of Germany when the Fuehrer comes to Italy in May.

For months police have been scrutinizing the records of Italians and foreigners alike, looking for the faintest traces of connections or interests which might mean an attempt on the Nazi chieftain's life. Germans and Jews have been especially watched.

Landlords have order.. to report to the police at once the arrival of every foreign lodger in Rome. Ordinarily this report may be delayed three days. Also landlords must note all visitors who call upon their foreign lodgers.

Hotel clerks have orders to report all irregularities of guests. Coming in very late at night, or inebriated, for example, may be "normal" ordinarily, but now is something that interests the authorities.

Weeks ago questionnaires were submitted to all foreign journalists, requiring them to state their past connections abroad and various other significant trifles. Jewish and German newspaper correspondents not vouched for by the Nazi party were told they would have to leave Rome, Naples and Florence during Hitler's stay.

Informed sources say that days before Hitler arrives, hundreds of persons with anti-Fascist records will be jailed, to be released again when he departs. The "anti-Fascism" of some of these persons dates back to the march on Rome. They have been politically inactive since.

Secret service operators have been scattered unobtrusively along the paths that Hitler will follow. When he arrives, they will seem to have been there always. They may appear as waiters, porters, taxi drivers or street sweepers. Most of them, however, will merely look like run-of-the-mine Italians taking a quiet coffee or sipping wine in the shops of Rome and other cities. Among them will be men who understand English, French, German, Spanish and various other languages.

Nazi Police Busy, Too.

Besides these, Nazi secret police have been quietly at work in Italy analyzing the German colony.

To the outside world, Hitler's visit will be a whirl of headlined parades, speeches, diplomatic talks, etc. To the Italian police it will mean the culmination of months of exhaustive investigation and search.

Hitler will not take one unplanned or unguarded step from the time he enters Italy until he crosses her border on the way out.

CROWD OUTNUMBERS BIRDS AT SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO

More Than 3000 on Hand to Watch Annual Return of Swallows on St. Joseph's Day.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Cal., March 19.—Spectators outnumbered the swallows which returned to the old mission today to fulfill a custom which legend says began 161 years ago.

About 3000 persons were here to see the swallows return from the South on St. Joseph's day. They depart annually on St. John's day, Oct. 23. Lodging facilities of the town were taxed. A few swallows arrived shortly before 9 a. m. and others straggled in during the day.

Juan Mendoza, the gardener, mixed adobe clay to help the birds restore their nests, which were damaged by rainstorms. The absence of nests forestalled the usual fights between the swallows and English sparrows that occupy the swallows' nests in winter.

WALLACE INDORSES BILL ON MARKETING AGREEMENTS

Backs Plan to Let Agriculture Department Approve Programs for Any Commodity.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace indorsed today the bill of Senator McNary (Rep.), Oregon, to permit the Agriculture Department to approve marketing agreements for any commodity.

The Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of last year permits such compacts for vegetables, fruits, produce and tobacco.

Wallace wrote Chairman Smith (Dem.), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, that the department believed benefits of such programs should be available to producers of any agricultural commodity or product.

"The very nature of these programs," Wallace said, "requires that they must be initiated and supported by the various agricultural groups interested in particular commodities."

GARDEN SHOW TO OPEN AT ARENA SATURDAY

Exhibits From Many Parts of Country—$25,000 in Prizes.

The Greater St. Louis Flower and Garden Show, with 145 classes of floral and landscaping exhibits, will open at the Arena next Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock and continue for nine days.

Prizes of $25,000 are offered. Exhibits will be made by individuals and floral companies from virtually all sections of the country.

Shaw's Garden has entered an exhibit of orchids collected from different part of the world, and hundreds of exclusively owned hybrids grown from seed by the process developed at the garden. The orchids will be exhibited in an artistic setting and some of the choice plants have been regulated for months under controlled lighting and heating at the Gray Summit arboretum so as to be in bloom during the show.

Various types of gardens from 100 to 3200 square feet in size will be one of the features of the show. They include rock gardens, woodland arrangements, plots of azaleas and rhododendrons, formal layouts, mass effects, bulb gardens, desert gardens, artistic color designs and rose gardens.

Another large class of displays will be the potted plants including schizanthus, calceolaria, tulips, lilies and the hardy philodendron vine, generally considered the easiest to grow of house plants.

Amateur gardeners, garden clubs, the Board of Education, the City Park Department, the Federal Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine and students of horticulture from Middle West universities will make displays.

The St. Louis National Air Mail Flower Show will be held Thursday, March 31, in conjunction with the show. Flowers sent by airplane from points in the United States, Canada and Central America will be on display.

After the opening day the show will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock in the evening.

CHANGING POPULATION, AND SCHOOLS' FUTURE

Prof. Newton Edwards of Chicago U. Predicts Trend Toward Junior College.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Further popularization of secondary education with a decided development of the junior college was predicted today by Newton Edwards, professor of education at the University of Chicago.

Prof. Edwards based the prediction on what he said was the changing pattern of the nation's population, with its trend toward fewer children of elementary school age.

Asserting that "the custom of family limitation" had been adopted to a greater or less degree by practically all elements of the population, he said that by 1940 the "absolute number of children of high school age will begin to decrease" and that the total of those of elementary school age—6 to 13—would be 1,500,000 less than in 1930.

"As the burden at the elementary school grows lighter, and as the rate of increase in high school enrollment falls off," he said, "it should be possible to improve standards, to staff the schools with better-qualified teachers, to organize more effectively the content of instructions and to extend the opportunity of a junior college education to a larger percentage of youth."

To meet the changing conditions, Prof. Edwards suggested:

1. Extension of the period of secondary or general education to include the years from the seventh grade through junior college, the pupils to receive their bachelors' degree at the end of this eight-year period.

2. Organization for all students of a group of required "core" subjects designed to give them a "broad general acquaintance with the achievements of civilization," the courses to be "completely divorced from professional or vocational content."

3. Provision of special preparatory courses for those who expect to attend higher institutions.

4. Decelopment of special courses preparatory to entrance into industrial and business life which would "stress vocational training of a broad rather than a narrow technical type" and which would seek the "common denominators of industrial and commercial operations and processes and concentrate attention on them."

The changing population pattern, Prof. Edwards said, shows a decline in the ratio of young to older persons, making it difficult for youths to enter gainful occupations.

"Even before the depression of 1929-1930 there had been, for two decades," he said, "a definite decline in the employment of children and youth," thus prolonging formal education for those of secondary and college age, and making the schools in some respects "custodial institutions."

"It is not too much to say," Prof. Edwards declared, "that forces playing on education from without, forces over which educators themselves have little or no direct control, are making it necessary for educational institutions to re-define their goals—to assume new and enlarged social obligations, to reorganize their instructional content and to cast their structural organization into a new mold."

He said he believed the population changes would not only profoundly affect the education of youths, but would also tend to bring an upturn in vocational education for adults.

"As the older worker feels more keenly the incidence of a failing rate of population growth and of technological change," he said, "we may expect an insistent demand for a program of vocational education for adults which will contribute to occupational adaptability and adjustment."

Pennsylvania Reaches Back Into the Past for Solution Of Modern Economic Problem

Tolls to Pay for 3 Per Cent Grade Highway Through Mountains Over Railway Route W. K. Vanderbilt Abandoned.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 19.

MEETING modern and urgent traffic needs in the depression period when existing taxes are an overwhelming burden, the State of Pennsylvania has completed financial and engineering arrangements for the immediate construction of 162-mile toll road through the Allegheny Mountains, on which the heaviest loaded truck can traverse the entire distance without changing gears.

To pay the bill the State has adopted the public policy of an earlier day when a growing country demanded conveniences and facilities and was without the wealth to pay for them. Fifty and a hundred years ago when need came for something better than a dirt road, private money built a toll road and the users of that road, through their tolls, paid for it. Though the toll road has largely disappeared, even in the present day the toll bridge is common.

Public policy has changed in recent years, it having become the custom to tax all the people, or at least all of the automobile owners, for the construction of roads costing $50,000 a mile or more, but which only a part of them used.

Only Users to Pay for Road.

Pennsylvania will build a $200,000 a mile toll road, connecting Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, the State capital, through the most difficult mountain terrain, and nobody who doesn't use it will pay anything toward the cost of its construction and maintenance. Owners of huge interstate busses and trucks, who are interested in lowering operating costs, and passenger car owners interested in saving time will pay the bill.

The need for an easier highway across the Alleghenies has become increasingly more imperative during the past few years. The mountains formed a barrier to modern traffic just as a hundred years ago they formed a barrier to the westward expansion of the country. To meet conditions it became necessary to build a highway without the 8 and 9 per cent grades of the existing roads, which made necessary the unloading of heavy trucks and the dividing of traffic loads, and which caused traffic congestion of long lines of cars behind heavy trucks moving at five and six miles an hour up long, steep grades and around sharp mountain curves. The road must go through the mountain, not over them. It must be a road of low grades and broad curves.

Dubious of Bond Issue.

It would cost about $52,000,000 and could be built only by means of a bond issue. As in Missouri bonds with State credit behind them can be issued in Pennsylvania only when voted by the people, and it was realized that under the present rates of taxation there was great doubt that there would be a favorable vote, and there was a very general opinion that the people should not be taxed, not even the automobile owners as a class, for costly, high type highway which would be used by only a part of them.

There grew up the plan for the creation of a special commission, authorized to issue revenue bonds to be paid by tolls on the road. After an inquiry by a legislative committee, the Legislature a year ago passed the act creating the commission and it was signed by Gov. Earle.

It is the expectation that work on the highway will be started within two months, and that it will be completed within three years providing a divided four lane toll road which in length will be more than half the distance between St. Louis and Kansas City, constructed through a precipitous mountain region and yet having no grade higher than 3 per cent, and no curve of more than 6 degrees.

Old Rail Route Used.

As the demand grew for an easier route through the mountains, there developed in the minds of Warren Van Dyke, Secretary of the Department of Highways, and Edward N. Jones of Pittsburgh, former W P A Administrator, a plan by which the road could be built at comparatively lost cost.

About 50 years ago William H. Vanderbilt and several associates conceived the idea of a southern railroad route through the Allegheny Mountains to compete with the Pennsylvania Railroad for Western business. They organized the South Pennsylvania Railroad, and began active construction work on nine tunnels through the mountains, building small bridges and culverts, and grading the right of way. After about $10,000,000 had been expended on construction, the Vanderbilts and the Pennsylvania Railroad came to an agreement, and construction of the new line was abandoned with tunnels partly bored and grading partly done.

It was this right of way that Van Dyke and Jones proposed to utilize for the new highway, and it will be followed except for a few slight deviations.

There have been rock slides in the tunnels, some grading has been washed away, most of the tunnels have been practically closed, in places, by slides and have half filled with water, but engineers from the Department of Highways who have examined the entire route have reported that the old railroad work can be utilized almost in its entirety. They have opened the tunnels and drained off the water.

Much of Work Already Done.

So when highway construction starts, the contractors can begin where the railroad builders left off. They will be compelled to widen the right of way, increase the width of the tunnels and complete the job of pushing them through the mountains, but they will find a lot of their work already done for them.

The east and west double lanes of the highway will be separated by at least ten feet of parking, and in some places the two lanes, because of topographic conditions will be much farther apart, possibly half a mile or more.

Though actually creating a new highway between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, a few miles of the present Lincoln Highway will be utilized a few miles out of Pittsburgh, and an existing highway for a few miles out of Harrisburg. Both of these old roads are now four-lane roads for the distances they will be used as a part of the new highway.

Elimination of Steep Grades.

There will be no material saving in distance between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg by the new route, but there will be a saving of from one to two hours in time because of the elimination of heavy grades and sharp curves. By the Lincoln Highway, the distance is slightly more than 200 miles, and by the William Penn Highway about 40 miles longer. The new route will be about five

Rise of an Obscure Austrian to World Power as a German

Career of Hitler FROM Braunau to Vienna

Disheartened in Youth, "Reborn" in Travail of the Great War

Opposition to Marxism Dates Back to His Youth, When Union Workmen Forced Him Out of Job as Bricklayer.

By ERNEST KIRSCHTEN
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

NOT since Napoleon has a man loomed so large in Europe—or in the world—as does Adolf Hitler today. This son of the third wife of a petty Austrian customs official, like Napoleon, has raised up the face of a nation broken and beset by enemies. Like Napoleon, he is at once worshiped as a god and cursed as a demon.

Whether he is hero or villain is something that will be finally judged in the perspective of history. Just now, his Anschluss of Austria to Germany—so far the greatest climax of his career—brings the events of his life into review.

It is a life that might well have furnished the themes for another "Ring" by Wagner, his favorite composer. It is made up of one wild drama after another, each with its thundering crescendo. Self-exiled from Austria, he was a wastrel—almost an utter failure—when the war brought him rebirth. His post-war role of politician seemed ended in the tragic-comic "beer hall" putsch of 1923. But in prison he built a better party and was voted into power almost in the glare of the burning Reichstag in 1933. And, having made himself supreme, he also made himself secure by the "blood purge" of June, 1934, the "Night of the Long Knives."

To these mordant "Ring" themes must be added his strokes of foreign policy. In the fall of 1933 he led Germany out of the League of Nations and away from the disarmament conference. In the spring of 1935 he presented the world with a rearmed Reich. A year later he reoccupied the Rhineland.

Some Minor Achievements in Diplomacy

There is still more material for the composer of a Hitler "Ring." There are such relatively minor triumphs as that of the Saar plebiscite, the Anglo-German naval treaty, the conquest of Danzig by Nazi votes, the non-aggression pact with Poland, and—on a more epic scale—the Rome-Berlin axis and intervention in the Spanish war.

Nor is there any lack of a leit-motif to bind together these developments. It is to be found in Hitler's goal of a unified, proud and powerful Germany—to be built by his Nationalsozialistische Deutche Arbeiterpartei (National Socialist German Workers party). This organization is a weird amalgam that finds no difficulty in running the whole gamut, from anti-Semitism and the Blood and Earth cult to simultaneous protestations of Socialist and capitalist principles.

"This is the greatest aim which our movement shall achieve: to give a new faith to these questing and erring masses that they will each of them once more find a place where their hearts will be at peace," said Hitler in 1932. "And that we shall achieve!"

There is another leit-motif for the Hitler saga. It is the man's inexorable logic. Many attempts have been made to explain him away as a neurotic, a mad man, but the authoritative Konrad Heiden—certainly no friend of Hitlerism—describes him as a great intellect and ascribes all his success to logic.

There has never been any vacillation about Hitler's ultimate objectives. Long ago, in "Mein Kampf" and in speeches, he served notice of his designs.

"The German Government has never left the British Government in doubt that the form of relations between the Reich and Austria can only be regarded as an internal affair of the German people which is no concern of third Powers," Von Neurath, chief of the new German secret council, was able to tell the Chamberlain regime the other day, for example.

Health None Too Good, But Energy Tremendous.

Hitler, now 49 years old and a man of medium height with a tooth-brush moustache and a lock of mouse-colored hair brushed across the top of his head, is not in the best physical condition. Weight that he has put on in the last few years has resulted in a certain flabbiness. His complexion is pasty, a fact that is attributed to his early lung trouble and the severe gassing of his war years. He is neglectful of his personal affairs. His desk is almost always covered by papers in this field that should have had his attention. Yet Hitler can and does call on tremendous stores of nervous energy, according to such authorities as Heiden, Gunther and Roberts. In an emergency — when he feels inspired—he works at a pace that few of his associates can maintain.

An Official Portrait

Hitler takes no physical exercise except walks across the guarded hills of his Bavarian estate. He does not ride, swim or fence like Mussolini. But he has a craving for speed. He never uses a train, always a plane. His greatest relaxation comes when he is speeding over the Nazi-built superhighways of the Reich in his big, black Mercedes-Benz. Shrenk, the chauffeur who died about a year ago, was closer to him than any Goebbels or Goering. On his death, Hitler declared a national day of mourning, created a special Schrenk division of Nazi soldiers and personally designed a banner for his group.

He loves to design flags. A flag or a band will win more followers than a speech, he insists. The Swastika banner was his creation, even if it was the brothers Strasser who made almost everybody in Germany wear it. For the most part, Hitler goes back to the standards of Napoleon and Caesar for his designs.

Although observers call him vain, his vanity does not display itself in fine clothes—quite the contrary. Immediately after the war when every German seemed to be in uniform, he appeared in a well-tailored, double-breasted blue suit. More recently he has adopted the Nazi brown blouse for almost all appearances. And he always has his rain coat and slouch hat.

Ate Only Scrambled Eggs at Banquet.

He lives a simple life. He does not drink or smoke, and no one may smoke near him. He eats no meat, but his vegetables are prepared by one of the best chefs in Germany. When he was feted by Mussolini he would eat only a double portion of scrambled eggs.

In Berlin Hitler lives in the new Reichkanzler's Palast and avoids the old Presidential palace, as he does everything that might remind the Germans of their republic. He helped to design the Chancellor's palace, which is furnished throughout with modern metal and glass. The walls are given over to murals depicting the Wotan myth.

The Fuehrer occasionally goes across the street to the Kaiserhof to sip chocolate, but he does not like Berlin. He is much happier in his apartment in the Brown House in Munich or in his alpine chalet, Haus Wachenfeld, at Berchtesgaden in the Bavarian Alps overlooking Austria. His Munich workroom is ultra-modern. Its buff walls are offset by green lamps and red rugs and furniture. There are not less than four pictures and a copy of the death mask of Frederick the Great in the room. One of the pictures is on Hitler's desk. A bust of Mussolini has been pushed into a corner. Most prominently displayed, however, is a picture of a part of Hitler's Bavarian regiment under fire on a bridge in Flanders. On the desk is an array of 72 push buttons.

Not a Reader, Even of Versailles Treaty.

Hitler reads very little, but has a remarkable memory and the ability to digest facts. State papers get more attention than anything else, but associates have said that they are sure that Hitler has never read in its entirety even the Versailles Treaty. He prefers to get his information in simplified form from his lieutenants, especially Goebbels. And he is quite happy when Goering comes to Berchtesgaden and the two of them can sit down and discuss affairs informally.

Hitler has few intimates. Even Goering and Goebbels may see him only by appointment. Hess, his personal deputy, may see him every day, and Schacht and Von Ribbentrop at one time had unannounced access to him at any hour. Goebbels and his wife and their little daughter, however, are most frequently the Leader's guests. He likes to hold the little girl on his knee.

Bruckner, his personal bodyguard, makes all normal access to Hitler impossible. He is constantly surrounded by SS men. In case of a parade or public appearance there are motorcycle and automobile detachments of SS men as well as solid ranks of them, facing alternately in and out.

Dislikes Life in Berlin, Preferring Munich or Mountains—Has No Money, Doesn't Smoke, Eats No Meat.

Gives His Money to Workers or Party.

Hitler has no money. He long ago ordered that his salary should be turned over to a workers' accident benefit fund. The profits on "Mein Kampf" must have passed $1,000,000. All of this is said to have gone to the party.

Only a word remains to be said about Hitler's speech—the instrument with which he welded his power. He may leave logic behind when he mounts the platform. His appeal is principally to the emotions.

Sometimes he screeches or is harsh in his tone. His delivery is not polished. His gestures have little relation to his words. His voice at times breaks. But in spite of all this, he has gained more followers than Mahomet or Peter the Hermit.

He and Other Dictators of Foreign Birth

There must be a rule requiring the foreign birth of dictators. Napoleon was a Corsican, Mustapha Kemal Pasha was born in Greece. Pilsudski was a Lithuanian. Stalin is a Georgian. Even Schuschnigg was born in Italy.

Hitler was born on April 20, 1889, in a furnished room of what is now a three-story tavern in Braunau on the Inn, in the Austrian Waldviertel (Forest Quarter), near the Czech border. It is a remote province, inhabited by poor, illiterate, God-fearing peasants.

His father, originally a cobbler, had become a minor Government functionary as well as a drunkard. The father at first went by the name of Alois Shicklgruber, the name of his mother, but was legitimatized at the age of 40. Perhaps that was fortunate for Hitler. "Heil Shicklgruber!" sounds rather impossible.

The dictator's mother was Klara Poelzl, his father's third wife. She had been a maid in the house before going off to Vienna for a decade. Also she was a distant cousin of her husband. She developed a cancer when young Hitler was 6 years old, but lived for 10 years.

A strangely repressed personality, she had a great influence on the boy, largely, perhaps, because he hated his father, who ceaselessly bullied him as "moonstruck."

Even as Schoolboy He Was Revolutionary

Hitler spent his early childhood in Passau, on the Bavarian frontier. Later the family moved to Linz, on the Danube—Hitler's first stop on his recent triumphal return to his native land. Here he was taught history by a teacher with Pan-German views that were regarded as revolutionary in the Austria of Francis Joseph. The boy did not play much with his companions. Twitted once because he was dreaming over a map, he shouted:

"I am pushing back the borders of Germany."

By the time he was 16 both of his parents were dead and he had recovered from a severe pulmonary illness.

Hitler was not a good pupil. He spent the last two years of his mother's life in idleness at home. But both he and she excused his failures by saying that he was destined to become a painter. However, later the principal of the Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna told Hitler that he was utterly devoid of talent. He suggested that he become an architectural draftsman. But Hitler was kept from this by his educational deficiencies.

In the Austrian capital what little money he had was soon gone—some of it for performances of the Wagner operas, for which he began to develop an enthusiasm that has not yet abated. He was at Bayreuth when Dollfuss was murdered. And now Wagnerian performances are sometimes given in the Kroll Opera House to conclude Reichstag sessions.

Without money, he had to take the first

Pendergast Election Workers Facing Prison Are Petty Wage Earners or City Jobholders

Kansas City Fraud Trials Disclose Price Political Machine Exacts of Rank and File of Its Men and Women.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 19.

MEN and women convicted in the vote fraud trials in United States District Court here represent the rank and file of city jobholders and petty wage earners comprising the nucleus of the Pendergast machine. Not important as individuals, they are significant as constituting a cross-section of the indispensable workers who enable the organization to function "365 days in the year," as Pendergast has said it does. They are the small fry who share only the crumbs of political victory, but who now must pay grim penalties for their part in "delivering the vote."

Disclosures at the trials have afforded also an insight into the internal workings of the machine. An intimate picture has been given of the price practical politics exacts of its rank and file. Men and women were drafted to get out the vote under the penalty of losing their city jobs if they refused. Firemen were expected to poll the precincts. Policemen were supposed to "look the other way." Wives of city employes would be deemed disloyal if they refused to serve as election officials—and keep their eyes closed and mouths shut.

12 Trials, 56 Convictions.

Forty political workers and election day officials are faced with penitentiary or jail sentences ranging from five years to a month. Twelve sentences already have been upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. In 12 trials to date there have been 56 convictions and no acquittals. Some who pleaded guilty or "no contest" and testified for the Government have been placed on probation.

More than 100 remain to be tried. Another trial is scheduled to begin tomorrow. A new grand jury is preparing to return additional indictments. The end is not in sight.

With one exception, those awaiting punishment are the corporals and privates of the dominant city-wide political organization. The sole exception is Mrs. Frances S. Ryan, the Pendergast boss of the Twelfth Ward and superintendent of the Jackson County Detention Home. She was sentenced on March 4, last, to three years' imprisonment at the Federal Women's Reformatory at Alderson, W. Va. Ten of the 12 trials have brought to light flagrant fraud in as many precincts in her ward.

Her rank was likened by United States District Judge Merrill E. Otis to that of "sergeant." She, too, he said, was a tool "in the hands of the others," whom he did not name. But directly under her, as in the cases of the bosses of the other 15 wards of this city of 400,000 persons, are the precinct captains. They were described by Judge Otis as the "corporals." They not only ruled the ranks with as stern a hand as any army "non-com," but evidence at the trials has disclosed they ran the polls as well.

They gave orders to election officials. Sometimes they picked them from the ranks. They altered ballots, announced the totals, intimidated anyone venturesome enough to protest. They "wrote in" votes or saw that they were written in. Usually, they didn't countenance a count but told the judges, most of them their accomplices, what results to put down and required all the officials to certify the votes long before the polls closed.

Many City Jobholders.

Precinct captains are usually jobholders. Those convicted include a fireman, five employes in the water department, a park employe, a W P A foreman, a courthouse janitor, a W P A timekeeper, a foreman in the street cleaning department, an employe of the City Assessor's office and a clerk in the City Treasurer's office.

In some cases the policeman on duty at the polls—who conveniently saw nothing and heard nothing amiss—was convicted. Democratic challengers convicted range from Mrs. Ryan's chauffeur to a park laborer.

The precinct election officials, it developed, were carefully chosen—from the standpoint of political expediency. Democratic judges were all amenable to the directions of the precinct captain. Sometimes the precinct captain's wife would serve as judge. Most of the judges were small wage-earners, truck drivers, poolroom attendants, clerks, ironmolders, mechanics and the like.

The Republican judges, some of them Republican in title only, were often impoverished women. Some were the wives of W P A workers who owed their jobs to Democratic politicians. Others were glad to serve for the fee, knowing nothing of their duties, willing to do as they were told. Others were wage-earning Democrats masquerading as Republicans. Some were almost illiterate.

Where active co-operation was required, the organization put in Democratic officials willing to aid in forging ballots and intimidating objectors. As a rule, however, judges were chosen for their readiness to "go along" with the precinct captain. The ward boss picked the officials.

Ignorant of Their Duties.

Once the key positions were filled, the official roster was deliberately completed with men and women ignorant of their duties or so glad to get the jobs they would do as they were told. Many had never served as election officials before. Some were pressed into service at the last moment, after officials "unsatisfactory" to the organization had been dismissed or induced to withdraw.

The typical pattern of a corrupt precinct polling place would consist of a precinct captain who "ran the works" and a Democratic judge who served as his Man Friday. The rest of the election day group, judges and clerks, usually were "stooges" who had no sense of responsibility and didn't realize until brought to trial the gravity of their duty as election officials.

Even the precinct captains, well aware they were breaking the law, but thinking themselves immune from prosecution, regarded themselves as skillful players in the time-honored game of practical politics as it has been played for years in this machine-controlled city. They regarded stealing a vote in the light of stealing second base in a baseball game. It was O K, quite within the political rules, if they could get away with it.

Educated in the Game.

Some of them had the reputation of being honest citizens—except on election day. As Frank P. Dixon, the Pendergast precinct captain of the Ninth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, said to the writer:

"We were educated that way; we never thought it was wrong to steal a vote. It was all in the game.

"You can get suckers like us for a dime a dozen. We are the small fry. It's greed that does it. It's all unnecessary. Well, I'm too old to rat now.

"At first I figured this Government investigation was just a gesture. I didn't take it seriously. But now it has gone all over the city. They even know about

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Case for the Professor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I, TOO, am a student at the University of Missouri, and I, too, take this history course under the same professor as the student who wrote the recent letter, captioned "Credulity in the Classroom." I regard this letter as very unjust to the professor and history class in question.

The anschluss of Austria and Germany was explained to the class in a manner quite different from that described by the first student letter-writer. The professor showed how the anschluss had been coming on for about 150 years; first being prevented by the desire of the ruling family in Austria, the Hapsburgs, for complete power over their domain; second by the Treaty of Versailles, in which France, seeking revenge for her defeat by Germany in the war of 1870, insisted that Germany be made weak and powerless so that France would no longer be threatened by the possibility of greater German strength.

In the way this popular professor put it, the students are enabled to see why Germans needed someone like Hitler to bring back their self-respect after the horrible defeat in 1918. Germans, resenting the fact that they had agreed for peace with Woodrow Wilson's Fourteen Points as the basis of the peace treaty, and, instead, received Clemenceau's Carthaginian peace—"to the victors go the spoils"—naturally would turn to the first available avenue of regaining their strength, self-respect and means of going on with the unification of the German people. And Hitler was the first to come along.

We are not being asked to be pro-German (far from it), but we are merely being given a background from an intelligent, thoroughly American man, who would have us look at news articles on the European situation with some idea about what has caused the present trends in Europe so that we will be better able to analyze, and explain, all actions to our own personal satisfaction.

Of course, we are not so naive as to to imagine that anything but might rules the world, nor is our professor, but we might ask our fellow-classmate exactly what else could rule the world besides might. And it might be interesting to know exactly why this student is wasting her time going to college if, to quote her, "education means nothing"?

I would prefer that you not print my name, as it might be thought that I was apple-polishing, as I am not at all, but merely trying to right a serious wrong.

A MEMBER OF THE CONTEMPORARY EUROPE CLASS.

Columbia, Mo.

To Our Danish Visitor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I SEE where Oscar Asmussen, a Dane who has been studying the social and economic conditions of the United States, laments the fact that Denmark is hardly mentioned in the news. Well, Denmark is like a well-behaved child keeping out of mischief, so is not mentioned in the news of the world often, but that is not to say that the influence of Denmark is not felt in all countries.

Here is a two-by-four nation, not quite one-fourth the size of Missouri, giving the world the following, just to mention a few things: Danish pastry, Danish embroidery, Danish dogs (Great Danes), Danish fairy tales (Hans Christian Andersen), literary expressions by Shakespeare ("Something is rotten in the state of Denmark" and "melancholy Dane"), literary works of Andersen Nexo and Gustav Bang, whose "Crises in European History" should be read by all history students. In fact, the last-mentioned puts Denmark in a class that is the envy of bigger nations.

Mr. Asmussen, you better stay another nine months in this country and perhaps by then you will learn things.

ERNEST NAUMOFF.

Granite City.

The Kansas City Coalition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WITHOUT desiring to attempt any defense of the Pendergast machine, as a matter of accuracy, I would like to correct a statement in your editorial entitled "What Will Kansas City Do?"

In it, you state, "There is in the field against the Pendergast organization . . . a coalition ticket of sound, responsible citizens. It can be the instrument of throwing off the yoke of Pendergastism."

As a matter of fact, the chief defect of the coalition ticket, aside from its lack of practical political organization, is irresponsible leadership. Even now, with a clear-cut issue of clean elections before it, it is pursuing a scatter-brained campaign marked by personal attacks on the Pendergast leaders and minor allegations not germane to the fundamental issue.

While it would be manifestly unfair to ascribe irresponsibility to all of the coalition leaders or any lack of honesty to any of them, it is a fact that some of them in previous campaigns have manifested a lack of balance which does not inspire confidence today. It may safely be said that there are many in Kansas City who would support an anti-organization ticket if it were to be composed of genuine Democratics and conservative business men. As it is, it smacks too much of "the amateur reformer," and the average citizen is apt to shy away from it.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

TRAGIC HISTORY OF A TREATY.

In his message to Congress on Jan. 22, 1917, President Woodrow Wilson laid down, as a moral basis for the settlement of the European war, the principle of "peace without victory." Within less than three months, the United States had entered the war, and within less than two years, the President was sitting at a table in Paris, at which the fate of the vanquished nations was to be determined.

The document which issued from that fateful conference was the Treaty of Versailles.

None but the most innocent could have supposed that the President's idealism would be wholly accepted by his associates. But not even the most pessimistic would have been justified in predicting that almost the exact opposite would prevail. It did prevail, however, and its specter now haunts Europe.

"Peace without victory" went into limbo when the United States became one of the belligerents. Its even more expressive corollary which said that "only a peace between equals can last" was repudiated by the exclusion of Germany from the conference. The spirit of the Fourteen Points, which demanded exact justice, even for those who seemed least entitled to it, was effectually done in by the "war guilt" clause and the subsequent reparations terms.

All that remained was the League of Nations, which, as events have proved, was doomed in the main to futility by the refusal of the United States to become a member.

Such was the "peace" that came out of Versailles. Its apologists have declared that it was intended as a document to be interpreted and that it provided for its own amendment. The spirit of its application can best be judged by the fact that it gave Hitler to the world.

When Hitler first showed himself in the beer halls of Munich, his only apparent gifts were his challenging voice and his untiring genius for saying the same thing over and over again. His developing career has proved he had another just as valuable—that of knowing the moment of his enemy's indecision. Whether he is a man of even greater parts is of no consequence. What he had was all he needed. The situation did the rest.

The German people felt that they had been forced to sign away their future while strapped to a board. Article 231 of the treaty, by its insistence on the sole guilt of Germany and Austria, had struck a blow at their moral foundation. The Brussels Conference, which fixed the amount of reparations at the staggering figure of 269 billion gold marks, was an indeterminate sentence to economic slavery.

Even so, the Munich "drummer" did not resolve into a menace either for Germany or for Europe until 1930—and this despite the degradation of the currency, the mounting tariff walls that prevented an exchange of goods, the French invasion of the Ruhr, the spreading unemployment and the wholly unrealistic attitude of the Allies, who went from the Dawes Plan to the Young Plan without ever scaling down the reparations to an amount that could be paid.

In other words, the Weimar Republic was still strong enough to be saved if the men of good will at its head could have commanded a reasonable support from France and England. But while the National Socialists, the Communists, the Social Democrats, the Catholic Centrists and several other groups made a responsible control of affairs a virtual impossibility, France—understandably putting her national security ahead of all other considerations—still insisted on the "moral obligation" of an unworkable treaty.

In the 1930 elections for the Fifth Reichstag, the Nazis polled 6,000,000 of the approximately 34,000,000 votes. Chancellor Bruening, in a desperate attempt to bolster the nation's economy and to forestall a further growth of the Nazis, proposed an economic union with Austria. France, supported by England, would not allow it. In 1931, Bruening pleaded in vain for a more humane treatment of his country if the world wanted to stop Hitler. In 1932, Hitler polled more than 13,000,000 votes for President against Von Hindenburg, and in the elections for the Sixth Reichstag, the Nazis won 230 out of 607 seats.

Hitler demanded full power, but was refused. For a moment it looked as if the tide had turned, for when further elections were held in the fall of 1932, the Nazi vote was reduced by 2,000,000.

In the critical days following these elections, Hitler's judgment of the forces that were at work was better than anybody else's. The Von Papen Government—which was virtually a conspiracy cooked up in the Herren Club of Berlin—had to give way and Hitler was appointed Chancellor. No doubt, the aging President's advisers thought he could be handled. But he quickly disillusioned them by immediately seizing control of the police.

Hitler was definitely on the march, and from then on, Germany and Hitler were identical.

On Oct. 14, 1933, he withdrew from the League of Nations.

On June 30, 1934, an incipient revolt within his own party was liquidated in the bloody purge, which accounted for the deaths of Van Schleicher, Roehm and many others.

On March 16, 1935, he denounced the military and naval clauses of the Versailles Treaty and issued his conscription proclamation, thus letting the world know that Germany intended to arm full strength.

On March 7, 1936, he marched an army into the Rhineland.

On Oct. 24, 1936, he slapped the League in the face by recognizing the Italian seizure of Ethiopia.

On Nov. 20, 1936, he kicked another prop from under the Versailles Treaty by denouncing the internationalization of German rivers.

And on March 12, 1938, he annexed Austria without firing a shot.

Where will it end? The apprehensive chancelleries of Europe would like to know. So would millions of people all over the world who have watched with fascination and repugnance the progressive regimentation of the German nation.

A CONCESSION BY THE CZECHS.

Czechoslovakia, openly marked by the German Nazis as the next goal of their lofty ambitions, is using two methods to avert absorption by the Reich. By bolstering their defenses, the Czechs hope to hold off an attempt at invasion until their allies, France and Russia, can get into action. By adopting a conciliatory policy toward Germany, they seek to avoid giving Hitler any excuse for overt steps.

The Czech Cabinet Council now has made another move to satisfy the grievances of the troublesome German minority, by providing that henceforth its members shall administer districts where Germans predominate, and shall receive other Government posts on a basis of population. The grant of autonomy for German districts sought by Konrad Henlein, the Nazi leader, is still refused, since it would imperil the nation's defenses, and would place many Czechs under German dominance.

It remains to be seen whether these efforts to avoid giving the slightest offense to the Nazis will have the desired effect. If Hitler decides to move, he can find a pretext or make demands that will enable him to claim justification for his action. Meanwhile, the Czechs are on their best behavior, are arming methodically, and hoping for the best.

MR. KENNEDY IN LONDON.

There were commentators on the news who viewed with alarm the appointment of Joseph P. Kennedy to be our Ambassador to Great Britain. Mr. Kennedy, they said, was a shrewd business man but was likely to get lost in the mazes of Old World diplomacy. They said the wily British would probably get his shirt.

We have felt all along that Mr. Kennedy would be able to take care of both his shirt and the nation's, and we are confirmed in that belief by the speech he made Friday to the Pilgrims' Club in London. It was a realistic and a sensible speech. There was no inferiority complex in it, and no provocative self-assertiveness, either. It was the speech of one good neighbor to another. In the not-too-official way dictated by the occasion, it said substantially what Secretary Hull said the other day in his excellent statement on our foreign policy to the Press Club at Washington.

Mr. Kennedy pointed out that the sentiment of this country is firmly against any entangling alliances. He thought it well—and it is well—that the traditional American attitude of retaining "an independent and unmortgaged judgment as to the merits of world crises" should be clearly understood abroad. But it was no head-in-the-sand speech that he made. He saw the Hull trade pacts as an instrument for peace, and he thrust at the isolationist school of thought when he said that America, in an active search for peace, "would be glad to join and encourage any nation or group of nations" in a peace program designed to limit armaments and revive "the sanctity of international commitments."

Mr. Kennedy, in fine, expressed the policies of Mr. Hull—policies which, we think, are approved by the great majority of Americans—in a way that leaves little doubt that our affairs at the Court of St. James's are in competent hands.

MEN AND MACHINES.

Hand mills are being dismantled, new strip mills are being installed and button pushers who can be trained in a few weeks are now replacing skilled craftsmen in Big Steel. Reports in the Post-Dispatch covering the activities of the Jones & Laughlin Corporation and the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation disclose that technological displacement, started some 12 years ago and now accelerated by the business slump, will ultimately mean that 85,000 of the 100,000 hand-mill workers in 59 different communities attached to the steel industry will lose their jobs.

What's to become of these men? Steel corporation officials and classic economists say they will be absorbed by new industries resulting from the new uses for steel. To the limited extent that this is true, it will be a delayed result which for the most part will not affect the same men. Those who already have been thrown out of their jobs in the Pittsburgh area have nowhere to turn but the relief rolls.

These sweeping technological changes in steel once more throw into high relief the whole bitter question of technological unemployment—a question that has been met so far with nothing but evasions and economic tags. Those who have comforted themselves with the belief that some wonder-working economic principle is taking care of everything can find little support in the facts.

According to the report of President Hoover's Committee on Social Trends, the period between 1921 and 1930 showed a greater differential in favor of displacement over replacement of workers than ever before. There is every reason to believe that this differential has been increased. In other words, the technological improvements during the depression have made it possible to achieve the same or greater production with a smaller number of workers.

The only condition under which the displacement and replacement of workers would balance each other would be that of a progressively expanding economy. The Brookings Institution says that an expanding economy within our system can only be achieved by passing on the gains of technological improvements in the form of higher wages or lower prices, with the latter preferred.

The problem stands as a constant challenge to the leaders of government and business.

INVENTIONS IN THE NEWS FIELD.

Startling things are happening in the field of news dissemination. Radio newscasts are by now an old story. The person with the time to do so not only can tune in on the news a few minutes after it happens, but sometimes can actually hear history being made. Does a dictator wish to soothe his own nationals and startle the world with the announcement of some new, audacious policy? The chances are that the speech will be broadcast for the whole world to hear, although those who do not know the language will have to wait until it is rebroadcast with a translation.

But there are more novel adaptations of the radio as a news medium. One inventor has patented a machine to broadcast a facsimile of printed material. Mass production, we are told, will put these receivers within the reach of families of modest income. If they like, they can get a new front page hourly.

Another ingenious man has given us a machine which reproduces a printed sound-track, like that which runs alongside a moving picture film and makes possible the talkies. If one suffers from eyestrain or for any other reason prefers hearing the news to reading it, he can put the sound-track on a little gadget, hook it up to the reproducing chamber of his radio and have the happenings of the day recited to him.

Where does all this leave the present-style newspaper? Is it becoming obsolete, about ready to join the medieval handwritten manuscripts on the dusty shelves of the museums? We think not. Neither the radio nor a sound-track medium can give the reader the news when he wants it and with the privilege of selecting the matter in which he is most interested.

Such developments, however, are likely to make a greater demand on the newspaper as an interpreter as well as simply a publisher of the news.

REVERIE IN A GARDEN AT DOORN.

Can We Win the Next War?

Victory in another world struggle would not bring international security much closer than it did last time, says writer; moreover, we would have to forego our liberties during the war and might never gain them back; thinks that the industrial mobilization plan pending in Congress carries the threat of a "plutocratic class dictatorship."

Elmer Davis in Harper's Magazine.

IT DOES not seem much more likely that victory (in another world war) would bring us what we were fighting for than it did last time—a little perhaps, but not much. And to the familiar costs of war, one more would be added; we should have to sign away our liberties while the war lasted, and we might never get them back.

To win a great war requires a concentration of national effort, and that means a concentration of power which may approximate a dictatorship. We had a taste of such concentration in 1918; but in that year, when this country came nearer to hitting on all cylinders than at any other time in its history, the co-operation was mostly voluntary.

After the disillusionment that followed, there might be less enthusiasm next time; but there will be far more concentration if the industrial mobilization plan worked out by the War and Navy departments is put into force. The bills embodying it have not been passed, but they might be jammed through Congress in the excitement of the beginning of war. This plan is the strongest of all arguments for isolation.

It gives the President control of business, industry, finance, labor—control far more drastic than we have ever known. He may fix wages and prices, regulate production, take over private property; censor the press (indirectly but effectively), suspend enumerated laws if he chooses. He can further draft as many men as he sees fit—leaving them at work in factories if they are more useful there, but sending them to the trenches if they strike or even complain.

The national administrator of labor is to be "an outstanding industrial leader"; labor leaders are only permitted to give advice which need not be taken. And conscription continues till six months after the President has decided that the emergency is over. A President who thought he could get away with it could find one excuse after another for postponing his proclamation indefinitely.

With this plan in effect, it would be ridiculous to pretend that we were fighting for democracy; for this is Fascism in spirit, if not in form and structure—with the difference that the rich in America would be far better off than they are in Germany and Italy today. One of the purposes of the studies that produced this plan was to take the profit out of war, but the army soon discovered that without profit, and satisfactory profit, there would be no deliveries.

As counsel for the Pittsburgh Ordnance District candidly put it, "Profit at the rate of 6 per cent would not tempt successful industrial companies" to help their country win the war; but at 10 per cent, he thought, their patriotism might begin to function. There has been talk of drafting capital as you draft men; but if you commandeered factories whose owners held out for too high a price, you must also commandeer men who could run them efficiently. In most cases, these would be the very men who had gone on strike against serving their country for a beggarly 6 per cent.

The army officers who drew up the plan reasoned from the experience of 1917-18 that you can draft men to fight, you can probably draft them to work at fixed wages, but you cannot draft the management of industry to work for less than it considers a satisfactory profit. As individuals, the members of this class average as high in patriotism as anybody else. If they are of military age they go to war, usually as volunteers; if over age, they send their sons and experience the same emotions as other men if those sons are killed; they serve the Government as dollar-a-year men, and by no means all of them use their official positions to advance their private interests. But when they start thinking and feeling institutionally, as members of a class, they hold out for all they can get.

The industrial mobilization plan makes them preferred stockholders in the nation at war; what else they might become depends on who might be President at the time. Under some Presidents we have had, and under some presidential possibilities, this war dictatorship would be turned into a plutocratic class dictatorship which could hardly be thrown off by peaceful means.

If we were defending our shores against a Fascist world, we could afford to sacrifice even democracy. But it seems out of all proportion to any war in which we are likely to be engaged.

Another world war will mean regimentation whether we go in or stay out; it might not amount to dictatorship, but it will look like dictatorship by contrast with peacetime, especially to those whom it restrains. Control to preserve neutrality would restrain rugged individualists who wanted to make money out of war trade regardless of the consequences; no conservative administration could bring itself to such interference with business.

It seems pretty clear that only a moderately radical administration could preserve neutrality against the combined attack of conservatives and Communists. The regimentation planned for wartime, however innocently intended, would drift toward a dictatorship by big business. The trend could be resisted only by a radical President strong enough and popular enough to make the wartime dictatorship something like a personal autocracy.

None of these prospects is pleasant, yet one of them is likely to become a reality in the next world war. Everybody will lose the next war—victors as well as vanquished, neutrals as well as belligerents; we are going to lose it whether we go in or stay out. I believe we shall lose it less disastrously if we stay out.

By going in (and winning) we could make the outcome somewhat less calamitous for the world; but for our interests, isolation is likely to be less costly than victory. Call this crass selfishness if you like; but would any other nation, situated as we are, even dream of sticking out its chin in an attempt to save the world?

As a choice between evils—which is all we have—it seems to me that the lesser evil for us is to keep out if we can. Twenty years ago, we went on a crusade which would have made sense if we had got what we wanted; but we failed to find the Holy Grail, and the experience ought to have cured us of our inclination to go grailing.

Will Hitler Believe?

From the New York World-Telegram.

HISTORIANS now agree that if Kaiser Wilhelm's Government had known England would enter the World War on the side of France, Germany probably would never have started her march through Belgium. But to the last, it is recorded, Germany's Ambassador in London kept assuring Berlin that England would not intervene. And being so advised, the Empire of the Hohenzollerns marched to its doom.

Adolf Hitler calculated, apparently with accuracy, that neither England nor France nor any other Power would do anything to stop the gobbling up of Austria. Now, while Nazi Germany is taking the time to digest what she swallowed so swiftly, Hitler is thinking of that next bite of territory—Czechoslovakia—and what England and France will or won't do to stop him from taking it.

Czechoslovakia is not another Austria, overripe for the Fuehrer's plucking. Austria 90 per cent of the population of German blood, but in Czechoslovakia 3,500,000 Germans are a minority. There can be no "bloodless" invasion of that Republic. It is prepared to fight.

Yet, standing alone, Czechoslovakia could not long hold back Hitler's war machine. When he gets ready to march, Hitler will not be thinking of Czech resistance, but of English and French and possibly Russian interference. If he believes that England and France will stand by, Hitler will not hesitate to resume his march into Eastern Europe.

It is inconceivable that England and France will stand by. Their combined power will almost inevitably be thrown against Germany's Western front, and that "next" general European war will be on. But the question is:

Will Hitler believe that?

Or will he consider England and France admonitions as just some more diplomatic talk?

THE ORIGIN OF TARIFFS.

From an Address by J. J. Hughes in the Canadian Senate.

THE first tariffs and customs houses began in a queer way. Long years ago, when the great rivers were the principal arteries of commerce in Europe, strong men who wished to live by preying on the industry of their neighbors, built their castles or forts on the banks of the Rhine, the Danube and other rivers, and levied fixed tolls on all the commerce that passed up and down these natural highways. In time this lawlessness became a custom, hence the name "customs houses."

After a while, Kings thought this would be a good way to raise revenue, and so adopted it, at the same time abolishing or greatly curtailing, the activities of the freebooters. Later still, governing bodies took over this method of raising revenue, exacting by law all others, and while the system was inherently bad, this change removed some of its evils, because the public got the money thus raised, or most of it.

However, keen-minded, covetous persons never lost sight of the personal advantage that might be obtained through the manipulation of tariffs; hence the continual pressure and the skillfully devised arguments brought to bear upon all governments to make the rates as high as possible.

AR GROUP SEEKS COURT SAFEGUARD IN CONSTITUTION

ew York City Association Asks Congress to Submit Amendments That Would Prevent Packing.

OULD SET NUMBER OF JUSTICES AT 9

etirement at 75 and Independent Fiscal Agency Also Requested in Plan to Keep Bench Free.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19.—A move to amend the United States Constitution to guarantee the independence of the Supreme Court was pressed today by an influential unit of the American bar. The Federal Legislation Committee of the New York City Bar Association, in a communication to the judiciary committees of both houses of Congress, asked for these three things:

1. A constitutional amendment definitely setting the number of Justices at the present figure, nine.

2. Another amendment making retirement of Justices mandatory at a set age, preferably "not less than 75" years.

3. Adoption of a law creating an independent agency to handle the court finances, which now go through the Department of Justice, an administrative branch of the executive arm of the Government.

Action should be taken now, said the Bar Committee report which accompanied the communication, so that the problem "can be considered calmly on its merits, free from confusion and controversy" which attended President Roosevelt's sudden court reform campaign of 1937.

Roosevelt's effort was characterized by the report as an attempt "to bring about retirements by other methods intended to be quick, not appraised by the people as dangerous."

Behind the committee report was the bar of the largest city in the country—4200 lawyers.

Would Prevent Packing Schemes.

The report pointed out that establishment of a specific number of Supreme Court Justices would "be an omission that has been in the Constitution ever since that document was written and would help prevent any President from pushing through Congress a court enlargement scheme such as the President tattempted unsuccessfully last year.

"Putting the matter beyond the reach of Congress," the report said, "is one of the surest protections against packing schemes.

"We urge the submission and favor the adoption of an amendment to fix the number at nine."

The proposal to make retirement of aged justices mandatory was in line with President Roosevelt's plan, but there were differences of detail.

The Bar Committee advocated, for example, that the compulsion not apply to justices now on the bench. The President proposed the opposite.

It advocated also that upon retirement of a justice, his post should automatically become vacant. This would eliminate debate such as occurred on the seating of Justice Hugo Black to replace Justice Willis Van Devanter, over whether a vacancy existed after a Justice retired.

Calls for Fiscal Independence.

It advocated that retirement become effective "not on the instant the Justice, attains the specified age, but at some convenient meeting date—such as at the end of the term of the court."

The Roosevelt plan called for retirement at 70. The Bar Committee said it should be "not less than 75."

The proposal to give the court an independent fiscal agency is the same as that advanced by Attorney-General Cummings.

It provides for an "administrative office of the United States courts," with a $10,000-a-year director subject only to the Chief Justice and completely free from executive and legislative agencies. The Federal Government's Budget Bureau would have no power to change the director's budget estimates, although Congress would still have the power to regulate appropriations.

Cloyde Laporte, chairman of the Bar Association, said he had sent copies of the report to both houses of Congress with a plea for immediate consideration.

Will Hitler Believe?

From the New York World-Telegram.

HISTORIANS now agree that if Kaiser Wilhelm's Government had known England would enter the World War on the side of France, Germany probably would never have started her march through Belgium. But to the last, it is recorded, Germany's Ambassador in London kept assuring Berlin that England would not interfere and being so advised, the Empire of the Hohenzollerns marched to its doom.

Adolf Hitler calculated, apparently with accuracy, that neither England nor France or any other Power would do anything to stop the gobbling up of Austria. Now, while Nazi Germany is taking the time to digest she swallowed so swiftly, Hitler will be thinking of that next bite of territory—Czechoslovakia—and what England and France will or won't do to stop him from taking it.

EDUCATORS TO OPEN CONFERENCE FRIDAY

Midwest Group to Convene — National Music Teachers' Meeting Opens Sunday.

A week of educational meetings will begin here Friday when the eleventh annual Midwest Education Conference opens at Washington University. Starting next Sunday and continuing for six days, the Music Educators' National Conference will be held at Municipal Auditorium.

Teachers and supervisors from Missouri, Illinois, Minnesota and Ohio will take part in the conference at the university. Friday afternoon sectional meetings will be held on education of the handicapped, character education, elementary schools, high schools and the social studies.

Erosion Movie to Be Shown.

These meetings will be followed by showing of the movie, "The River," produced by the Farm Security Administration to show the effects of erosion. Supper meeting discussions will be on high school and elementary education.

Saturday morning's program will include a discussion of progressive education, followed by a gathering of the Association of Teachers of Speech.

More than 3000 Ozark boys and girls, who sing and play hillbilly songs with as much gusto as modern tunes, will take part in the rural school jamboree March 31, part of the music teachers' meeting.

In all about 10,000 young musicians from all sections of the country are expected to take part in the festival. A pageant commemorating a century of public education in Missouri with a century of music education in the United States will be presented with 3000 players as part of the biennial conference.

26 Choirs to Participate.

Twenty-six high school choirs will come here from 15 states. One, with 60 voices, will come from Tacoma, Wash. Several college choirs will also participate. About 700 picked pupils will form three instrumental groups, each of which will give a concert.

Development of Catholic church music will be demonstrated pictorially and musically by 1000 parochial school pupils. That program will be directed by Dom Ermin Vitry, a Benedictine and an authority on Gregorian chant. Born in Belgium, he is a graduate of the Conservatory of Malines and the National Conservatory of Brussels.

Two major objectives of the conference are: Extending benefits of music education to rural and small village schools, and encouraging the carrying over of music education and participation from school into social life.

Sisters of St. Joseph to Hold Educational Conference.

The sixth annual educational conference of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Carondelet will be held Saturday at Fontbonne College. The theme will be the teaching of religion in schools operated by the order. Addresses will be given on "Do High School Graduates Get Sufficient Practical Instruction in Religion?" "Anemia of Some Religion Teaching" and "What Is the Elementary Schools' Responsibility in Teaching Religion?" Mother Joseph Aloysius, president of Fontbonne, is also head of the conference.

Lecture at St. Louis U. Today.

"St. Louis University and Educational Life" will be discussed by the Rev. William J. McGucken, S. J., director of the university's education department, in the fourth of a series of graduate school lectures at the school of commerce and finance auditorium at 10 o'clock this morning. The remaining lectures will be as follows: Next Sunday, "St. Louis University in Business Life," the Rev. Joseph L. Davis, S. J., regent of the school of commerce and finance, and April 3, "St. Louis University and Research," the Rev. Thurber Smith, S. J., dean of the graduate school.

Pennsylvania Reaches Into Past for Solution

miles shorter than the Lincoln Highway.

But by the use of tunnels the maximum grade will not exceed 3 per cent, while on the existing highways grades run as high as 9 per cent. Whereas drivers on the present routes find an accumulated climb of approximately 14,000 feet, the climb on the new road will be only 4000 feet.

Through the elimination of all grade crossings, both highway and railroad, and by by-passing all towns, the South Pennsylvania will be in truth a high speed highway. It will be carried over the four railroads which it crosses, and there will be cloverleaf entrances to it from all main highways and from roads connecting all towns near it.

Collecting the Tolls.

Toll houses will be established at Irwin and Middlesex, at either end of the 162 miles of new construction, and also at every entrance to the road. But a plan will be worked out, probably by means of windshield stickers, by which a car on which toll has been paid will proceed through to its destination without being stopped by a second toll taker.

Because of the low grades and construction on the south sides of the mountains, but with the roadbed well above any record high water of mountain streams, engineers have reported that it will actually be an all-weather road, and that no longer will it be necessary for mountain travel to stop because of fog, ice or flood.

In the 162 miles, eight of the nine tunnels started by the railroad builders will be utilized, making a total tunnel mileage of slightly more than six miles. Each of the tunnels will be lighted and each will have a ventilating system. The longest tunnel will be at Sideling Hill, near Burnt Cabins, Pa., one and one-quarter miles long. There will be two others of more than a mile in length, Allegheny, near New Baltimore, 5919 feet, and Laurel Hill, at the Westmoreland and Somerset county line, 5389 feet. Another, Tuscarora, at the Huntingdon and Franklin county line, will be 5225 feet, just under a mile. The shortest of the eight tunnels will be 700 feet long.

Charge Tentatively Fixed.

Though the fixing of exact tolls must await the completion of the highway and with it a determination of the annual sinking-fund requirements, the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, created by the Legislature to finance, build and operate the road, has tentatively fixed the tolls, basing its estimates of a traffic survey made by a New York engineering firm and on construction and maintenance estimates by the Department of Highways.

For the entire route, on the basis of these estimates, passenger cars will pay $1.25 for a one-way trip, heavy trucks $6, medium trucks $3, light trucks $1.50 and busses $4. Cars entering or leaving the highway at intermediate points will pay in proportion to the mileage of the highway used, and there probably will be some reduction for round trips.

Estimated Revenue.

According to the engineers' estimates these tolls will produce $2,670,000 the first year, and will increase each year until by the fifth the total revenue from the road will be $4,280,000. The traffic experts based their figures on estimates that the first year the road will be used by 1,000,000 passenger cars, 180,000 heavy trucks, 90,000 medium trucks, 20,000 light trucks and 10,000 busses.

The cost of operation has been estimated at $648,800 a year, exclusive of sinking fund requirements, by Chief Engineer Samuel W. Marshall, of the Department of Highways and Roger B. Stone, engineer for the Turnpike Commission. Maintenance of roadway was estimated at $430,000, toll collection $78,000, tunnels, including lighting and ventilation, $62,700, and personnel, $78,100.

Bond issue requirements will depend upon the amount of bonds issued. Though the estimated cost of construction is $52,000,000, the commission, allowing a safe margin, arranged to sell bonds up to $60,000,000. A movement is under way to obtain Federal aid, which, if successful, would reduce the borrowing to perhaps not more than $35,000,000. The bonds will bear interest at three and thirty-eight hundredths per cent, and will mature over a period of 40 years. Only the revenues of the road are pledged to pay them. No state credit is behind them and if the revenues should not prove sufficient, not even the roadbed is pledged.

A few days ago the commission signed a contract with a New York bond house, B. J. Van Ingen & Co., under which the buyer agreed to take the bonds up to the full amount of $60,000,000.

Additional Source of Revenue.

In addition to the tolls, the road is expected to produce a very substantial income as a result of the authority given the commission by the legislative act to lease the right of way adjacent to the pavement for telephone, telegraph, electric light and power lines, gasoline stations, garages, stores, hotels and restaurants and for advertising signs.

The Turnpike Commission is principally an authority to finance the construction of the road and to determine policies in connection with its operation. Actually construction and maintenance will be by the Department of Highways, which will be reimbursed from bond issue funds and from the road revenues, for its expenditures in connecton with the project.

Although the legislative act creating the commission and authorizing the construction of the road provides that when the bonds have been retired, or when there has accumulated a sufficient fund to meet the total bond and interest requirements, the commission shall cease to exist and the highway shall be turned over to the State to be operated free of tolls, this provision is subject to repeal if public opinion becomes settled in support of construction and maintenance of high type through roads by those who use them. It will be many years before that question will arise in connection with this highway, and it is not improbable that long before that time the toll system will become a fixed policy.

A Glance Into the Future.

The theory that the users of highways should pay for them has a very sound economic basis in the opinion of John D. Faller, general counsel of the Turnpike Commission. To a degree, he pointed out it is the theory of the present general highway financing by which automobile owners, through license fees and gasoline tax, build and maintain the roads. The fault with that system is that the cost also falls on the many thousands of automobile owners, whose cars never enter a State highway, and on trucking and bus companies whose business is confined within cities.

Faller expressed doubt that the new highway would ever be taken out from under the toll system, and suggested instead that the toll system was more likely to be extended. Modern highway construction is costly, and a system which places on all the people, or at least on all the automobile owners, the full cost of a luxury or convenience which many of them do not use, is beginning to be looked upon as unfair taxation even though it may be considered a public necessity by those who use it.

222 WINDOW FLOWER BOXES BEING PUT UP AT CITY HALL

Concrete Receptacles Made by W P A Labor, Using Materials Furnished by City.

The latest program for beautifying the City Hall got under way yesterday with the installation of the first of 222 concrete window flower boxes.

With the approval of Mayor Dickmann the boxes are being installed on ledges of first and second floor windows on the Market and Twelth street sides of the City Hall. Each will be planted with vines and blooming plants by the Park Department.

The boxes were constructed by W P A labor using material furnished by the city at a cost of $2 each.

FORECAST ON CHERRY TREES

Blooms in Washington Expected First Week in April.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Parks officials predicted today that Washington's single-blossom cherry trees would bloom the first week of April. The double blossom trees usually bloom 10 to 14 days later. The prediction was contingent on the continuance of good weather.

Gardeners gave the capitol lawn its first trimming of the year today.

Symposium on Communism.

A public symposium on Communism will be conducted by the St. Louis chapter of the National Federation of Catholic Alumni in the auditorium of St. Louis University, 3642 Lindell boulevard, at 8 p. m. Tuesday, March 29. Speakers will include Dr. R. Emmet Kane, Dr. George F. Donovan, president of Webster College, and Raymond E. Krings.

Hitler's Career, From Braunau to Vienna

job that came along. It was work as a bricklayer's assistant—a hod-carrier.

Forced Out of Job by Union.

On this job Hitler remembered the emphasis that his father, the petty official, had placed on class distinctions. Fellow workers urged him to become a member of their union but he vowed that he would never become a "proletarian." He was proud that his clothes were still tidy, he wrote, and he became more careful than ever of his language and his manners. He flatly refused to join the union and, as a result, he was forced to give up his job. He became an opponent of Marxism for life.

He was about 20 years old at this time. Out of a job, he began to learn architectural drawing. He also found time to hear Dr. Karl Lueger, the Mayor of Vienna, who was the champion of the anti-Semitic movement. The city was full of Magyars, Slavs, Italians, Rumanians and Jews, as well as Germans, and so was a hot-bed for Jew-baiters and Pan-Germans. But while the Mayor wanted to suppress Jewry by baptism, Hitler began to cultivate a biological anti-Semitism.

In 1912 the future dictator moved across the border to Munich, which he found much more pleasant than the Hapsburg capital. Although he called himself an architectural designer, the work that he actually got was painting houses. Physical unfitness had kept him from Austrian military service, but when the war broke out in 1914 he joined the Sixteenth Bavarian Infantry Reserve Regiment.

Hitler exulted in the war. He still calls it his "redemption." "I sank down on my knees," he wrote, "and thanked heaven from an overflowing heart."

He reached the front in time for the first battle of Ypres. In the next four years he fought in 48 battles, but for much of the time—from October, 1915, when he was promoted lance corporal, he was at the regimental base as an orderly. His drawing ability enabled him to decorate menus for the officers' mess and so stood him in good stead.

Wounded at Front.

But he did see his fair share of action. He was awarded an Iron Cross, second class, in December, 1914. In a foray at Le Barque on Oct. 5, 1916, a grenade splinter took him away from the front for five months.

On Sept. 17, 1917, he was awarded the Military Service Cross, third class, with palms. Later he received a regimental mention for his part in the attack on Fontaines on May 9, 1918. In the great push of 1918 he received the Iron Cross, first class, for bravery at the bridge of Montdidier on Aug. 4. Two weeks later he got the Dienstauszeichnung (Service Distinction).

There is a story about his winning of the first Iron Cross which never has been denied at the Brown House, Nazi party headquarters in Munich.

Hitler had been sent across a supposedly unoccupied salient, with dispatches, so the story goes, when he heard French voices. Whipping out his automatic, he began to shout orders as though he were commanding a good-sized detachment of men. Seven Frenchmen climbed out of a shell hole, their hands above their heads. At gunpoint, the lance corporal marched them into the German lines.

"I could not have done it," Hitler is reported to have said, "if these seven had been Americans or Englishmen. They would have got me."

Although he won more than a non-commissioned officer's share of decorations, was twice wounded and severely gassed, Hitler was not a favorite among his comrades. He held forth as an idealistic patriot, while the average man in the trenches groused and grumbled.

Comrades Not Present Favorites.

It is understandable that privates did not like such airs in a Corporal. It also is understandable that Hitler elevated only one of his fellow-soldiers, Sergeant - Major Max Amann, to power in later years—this despite his reliance on the army, the Reichswehr.

Hitler persisted in this attitude after the Armistice and while revolution flared across Germany. He was in the hospital at Pasewalk, blinded by gas, during those days. He was unconscious for two weeks, and when he recovered somewhat he was chagrined to hear as much mutinous talk in this Bavarian retreat as he had heard in the trenches in the latter days of the war.

This talk of Socialism, Communism and revolution turned him more than ever against Marxism, and he was glad to be sent to a camp at Traunstein in the mountains to recuperate.

"On Nov. 9, 1918," he said, "I resolved to become a politician."

"How are nations founded?" Hitler once asked, and himself answered: "By glorious leaders and by a people that deserves to have a crown of laurels bound about its brow."

Out of uniform and hospital, the ex-soldier, thanks to his service record, was able to find work as a labor spy through his regimental officers. That was the real beginning of the N S D A P (Nazi party), for in this capacity he met Anton Drexler, who, on Jan. 5, 1919, had founded the miniature German Workers' party, one of the scores of political organizations that sprang up in Germany after the war.

Birth of the Nazi Juggernaut.

Hitler had heard Dietrich Eckart, Gottfried Feder and Alfred Rosenberg hold forth against Jews and capitalists in the Munich beer halls. He was impressed and late in the summer they led him to Drexler, a kindly locksmith. After some hesitation, they made Hitler the seventh member of the little group that eventually was to become the Nazi juggernaut.

Another of the committee members was a burly ex-soldier, Capt. Ernst Roehm, later to be the head of Hitler's private army of Brown Shirts until the blood purge of 1934. Roehm already was a street fighter who had adopted the simple system of: "Be a patriot or be a corpse."

On Feb. 24, 1920, Hitler, who had been propaganda chief since the preceding October, supplied the party with the "Twenty-five Points" that still are supposed to be the basic Nazi platform. They were a demand for a Pan-German state, abrogation of the Treaty of Versailles and the return of colonies. They restricted citizenship to those of German blood, condemned parliamentary methods and advocated a centralized government.

There also were planks demanding a decent living for all; abrogation of unearned incomes; forfeiture of war profits; a share for the State in the profits of large industries; creation of a sound middle class, preference for small tradespeople and agrarian reform.

Free education, maternity welfare centers, a ban on child labor, regulation of newspapers, freedom of religion so far as it does not interfere with the State and the party, and recognition of the principle of "the good of the State before the good of the individual" also were advocated.

Country Welcomed Nazism.

Nazism was now in the open. Hitler had adopted its present name and acquired its first newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter. Its platform was before the people, and its private army was beginning to grow. Although slowly at first, it was well received in Germany. After the war the whole country was neurotic. The physical basis for this was the near starvation of the population in the latter war years. On top of this came the humiliation of defeat and the oppressive reparations payments. Then came the depression and even before that enormous inflation.

The Weimar republic, which has been called the most democratic in all history, was virtually helpless. Still in the mood of the war, the Allies would not aid its Stresemans and Bruenings. And these did not advertise their real accomplishments. They were too aloof. So the Germans came to hate their treaty-created government as the badge of their servitude. And it was easy for Hitler who became party president in 1921, to preach not compliance, but defiance.

He made his first bid for power in the abortive Munich beer hall putsch of Nov. 8, 1923. During more than two years of street brawling Hitler had rallied some 15,000 members to his standard with the cry of "Deutschland erwache!" (Germany awake!) Financial aid came, too, some of it secretly from the Army; some of it from French sources which believed they were encouraging Bavarian separatism; more of it from industrialists like Von Borsig, the locomotive builder, and young Ernst Hanfstaengl, whose family was quite anti-Hitler. Ludendorff also joined Hitler as the latter's name spread beyond Munich.

The Beer Hall Putsch.

Disorder was rife all over Germany in the fall of 1923. In Munich, Von Kahr was planning a coup. Accompanied by Ludendorff, Hitler and several thousand partisans surprised him during a speech in the Buergerbraeukeller and forced him to proclaim a new Reich government. Once free, Kahr recanted, collected troops and crushed the Hitlerites. A few dozen police summoned from the country really were enough to overcome them in a brisk encounter at the Feldherrnhalle on Nov. 9.

Hitler threw himself to the ground at the first burst of fire and in doing so broke his shoulder. He escaped by automobile, but was arrested at the country home of a friend a few days later. Ludendorff, too, was seized.

The treason trial that ensued provided some of the best publicity that Hitler ever received. With him in the dock were Ludendorff, the war hero, Roehm, Frick and other Nazi leaders. Goering had fled the country. Reporters from all parts of the world were present and Hitler was permitted to harrangue them from the witness stand.

"Be assured that I do not look upon the achievement of a position in the Ministry as worth striving for," he told them prophetically. "I do not consider it to be worthy of a great man to be content that his name should merely be recorded in history as having been a Minister.

"The vision that stands before my eyes was of far higher value to me from the very beginning. I wished to be the destroyer of Marxism. I will achieve this task, and once I have done so the title of Minister will be ridiculous in my sight."

Despite his oratory, Hitler was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the fortress of Landsberg. However, not daring to convict Ludendorff, the court decided that he was so overcome by emotion during the putsch that he did not see or hear what was going on.

Hitler was permitted to receive mail and visitors during the nine months he served, and used the time to write "Mein Kampf" and to reorganize his party. In the May, 1924, elections the party won 32 Reichstag seats. This success was short-lived, probably because of Ludendorff's violent quarrel with the Catholic church.

As soon as he was free, Hitler broke with the General, and on Feb. 27, 1925, he announced the now famed Fuehrer Prinzip—autocratic leadership principle.

Hitler's own involved definition of it may be restated somewhat as follows: The political leader should not seek uniformity among his followers, but should admit the widest diversity in his ranks, supplying the unifying function in his own person. Roughly, this is a reversal of the democratic rule. Authority is not to be maintained by agreement among the governed, but is to be imposed from above by the governor.

The following years saw the selection of new Nazi leaders, presumably in accord with this principle. Outstanding among these new men was Paul Joseph Goebbels, who as Minister of Propaganda today is Germany's No. 2 Nazi. Unlike Goering, he is a member of the secret party council. These years of reorganization also were marked by the departure of many an early party leader.

Roehm and the Brown Shirts.

For example, Hitler broke with Roehm — the man who has been called his only real friend. This led directly to the weakening of the SA (Brown Shirts) with which Roehm had sought to gain control of the army. Hitler transferred many of their functions to the new SS (Black Shirts), a select, armed praetorian guard.

Despite many a palace intrigue, the influence of the party began to make itself felt. The depression brought members hand over fist. In the summer of 1929 the Nazis mustered 120,000 votes. By March of the next year they polled 210,000. And in January of 1930 they put their first man, Dr. Frick, in an office other than the Reichstag. He became Minister of the Interior in Thuringia.

During all this time Hitler was not a German citizen. With Frick in office it was decided to make a German of the Fuehrer by taking advantage of a law that automatically conferred citizenship on any person taking an oath of office. It was planned to appoint Hitler Commissioner of the Gendarmerie of tiny Hildburghausen in Thuringia. Opponents, however, heard of the scheme and laughed it down. It was not until some time later that Dietrich Klagges was able to name Hitler as counselor of the Brunswick legation in Berlin (an altogether picayune post).

A pact between Hitler and Hugenberg, the Nationalist publisher, opened the latter's newspapers and radio stations to Nazi propaganda in 1929 and also put new funds in the party coffers. Hitler was not far from power.

Dwindling Power of the Republic.

Meanwhile, the darkest days of the Weimar republic had dawned. Bruening, called the greatest German Chancellor since Bismarck, was forced to govern by decree. From 1930 to 1932 the Reichstag did not pass a single law. But these constitutional tricks were of no avail to the man who is now an exile at Harvard. He was merely forging weapons for Hitler.

Franz von Papen, representative of the industrialists, and Kurt von Schleicher, the army's political general, were called to office in turn by the aging President von Hindenburg. But with almost 14,000,000 votes for Hitler as President, and more than 200 seats in the Reichstag (which was always dissolved as fast as its members were elected) the Nazi opposition in 1932 was too great.

The Nationalists were finally forced to deal with Hitler. They offered him the chancellorship on his own terms after he had spurned an earlier proffer and had crushed their efforts to split his party. Still they hoped, by retaining eight of the 11 cabinet seats, to clip Hitler's wings. But they reckoned without their man. He had come to power by constitutional means, as he had promised. Now he meant to exercise that power.

Hitler took office on Jan. 30, 1933. His party had 196 votes in the Reichstag. Even by counting on the 51 Nationalist votes, the Fuehrer was not assured of a clear majority of the 584 members. If the 100 Communist delegates could be eliminated, things would be safer. Hitler ordered a new election for March 5.

In power, one of Hitler's first acts was to give his followers their day against the "international" Jews. A 24-hour boycott was proclaimed during which the Brown Shirts had almost complete immunity as they picketed and placarded Jewish business establishments and otherwise harassed members of the race.

Howevere, this was only a prelude to a more systematic anti-Semitism. Soon Jews were deprived of citizenship, refused the right to employ or marry Gentiles, and barred from such professions as medicine and the law. Conductors were driven from the podium, university professors from the platform, editors from their desks, and civil servants from their offices.

And, as wholesale arrests filled concentration camps, thousands—among them such eminent men as Dr. Einstein, discoverer of a new physics and mathematics; Thomas Mann, greatest German man of letters since Goethe, and even Erich Maria Remarque, chronicler of the war-weary, disillusioned German trench fighter—sought exile in Holland, in Switzerland, in France and in the United States.

Goering, meanwhile, had gained command of the Prussian police—always handy in elections. The fight against the Reds had become the Brown Terror. Electioneering was done with bullets and blackjacks.

Historic Burning of the Reichstag.

Then on the night of Feb. 27 the Reichstag building burst into flame. It was a clear case of arson. From 20 to 30 chemical fires had been set, according to the Berlin fire department.

"It is a gift from heaven!" exclaimed Hitler as he arrived on the scene. He blamed the "Reds." His partisans have since been accused of setting the fire. In the trial that dragged on in Berlin and Leipzig there was evidence that pointed to the Nazis despite the fact that Van der Lubbe, a half-witted Dutch Communist, was eventually convicted and executed for high treason. Four Communist leaders were acquitted.

But Hitler made immediate political capital of the blaze. Socialist and Communist papers already had been suppressed. Now in a decree dated Feb. 28 President von Hindenburg rescinded all sections of the Weimar constitution pertaining to liberty of person, freedom of press and assemblage, secrecy of postal, telegraphic and telephone communications, inviolability of dwellings and the sanctity of private property. The death penalty was decreed for treason, arson, poisoning and conspiracy against the life of the authorities. And all such cases were to be decided by the police. There was no appeal.

The Nazis got 17,200,000 votes and 288 Reichstag seats in the March 5 election. Their Nationalist allies won 52. The only other blocs of any size were the Socialists' 120, Communists' 81 and Catholic Center's 74 in a house of 647 members. Although they had received but 44 per cent of the total vote, the Hitlerites had a working control of the Reichstag. To make this even greater, the Communists and Socialists were barred from the rump session of March 21-23, which voted Hitler dictatorial power for four years.

Last Days of the Constitution.

Meeting in the Potsdam garrison church, this Reichstag by a vote of 441-94 also passed a "Law to Combat the Misery of People and Reich." This provided that laws might be enacted by the Cabinet as well as by constitutional methods; that such Cabinet laws might deviate from the Constitution provided that they did not affect the Reichstag, and that treaties need not have the approval of the Legislature.

Another law provided for the coordination of the provinces — Gleichschaltung. This meant the end of the German federal system and vested all power in Berlin. In Bavaria alone there was a futile gesture against this "rape of the states." It collapsed with the approach of Von Epp, who had been designated by Hitler to govern this former Center stronghold.

Hitler's "Staatstreich" (coup) was complete. He had indeed come into power without a revolution. Now he made himself secure by making the Nazis the one legal party in Germany. Between March 31 and July 7 the four parties of the Left were abolished. The parties of the Right and Center, meanwhile, committed suicide under pressure. They all announced their dissolution and a decree (July 14) prohibited the formation of any new political organization.

The labor unions already had been taken over, and the totalitarian State was a fact. Its accomplishment in that spring of 1933 was described by one observer as a "cold-blooded, long-drawn-out, diluted St. Bartholomew's Eve."

Hitler had to wait only for the death of Von Hindenburg to merge the offices of president and chancellor in his own person as Reichsfuehrer. But with the nation under his thumb, or at his back, as one pleases, the party threatened to get out of hand. Some of the more ambitious or more radical Nazi leaders began to clamor for the fruits of victory.

Blood Purge and "Executions."

All opposition was speedily and brutally crushed in the purge of June 30, 1934. Hitler himself gave the signal for this blood bath by his personal arrest of Roehm near Munich. Goering was in charge of matters in Berlin. At least 73 persons were murdered or summarily executed, but Hitler never placed the number above 37.

Among the victims were Gen. von Schleicher and his wife, Dr. Erich Klausner, head of Catholic Action, and four other Catholic leaders, and at least eight Brown Shirt leaders, including Roehm.

Home Foes Conquered.

The purge seemingly put an end to internal political problems, although it left Germany with many a hard economic nut to crack. Now, while he was being made into a mythical hero at home, Hitler could look abroad.

With a shrewd eye on the changing international situation, he began to undo the peace treaty. By way of a prelude Germany left the League and the disarmament conference on Oct. 14, 1933. On March 16, 1935, Hitler admitted that an army of 36 divisions had been formed contrary to treaty prohibitions and that universal conscription was being introduced. On March 7, 1936, German troops marched into the demilitarized Rhineland. On Nov. 30, 1936, he seized control of the German rivers. On Jan. 30, 1937, he repudiated the Versailles pact altogether. And now, after a bloodless army purge, he has annexed Austria. Each event was received by the world as a thunderbolt—but long ago Hitler had promised to do all of these things.

Perhaps they have served to distract attention from the fight with the churches, the Reich's agricultural difficulties, its financial jugglings or the hardships of economic self-sufficiency. In any event, plebiscite after plebiscite has indorsed them and Hitler. When he orders an election nowadays he can count on about 40,000,000 votes—not quite 100 per cent of the total.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

By a Protege Of Gorky

THE LARGER VIEW. By Benjamin Kaverin. (Stackpole Sons, New York.)

ELEMENTS of the old order were still present in the Russia of 1929. Some of the intellectuals and scholars, such as Academician Bauer, placidly accepted the new regime and performed under it their familiar duties. There were also the maladjusted aristocrats who strove desperately to maintain their former customs. Petty speculation was rife. The city of Leningrad still had its drinking bars and resorts patronized by seedy but feverishly gay survivors of a caste that no longer existed as a positive component of the national life.

Student Trubachevsky found employment with Prof. Bauer, excavating among dusty archives. At first he was repelled by the stuffy atmosphere, but soon became inspired with the fervor of a true explorer when he learned that Bauer's Pushkin collection was the largest in existence. He was disturbed, however, to find that Bauer's dissolute son, in conspiracy with an unregenerate White, was systematically plundering the collection of its choicest items, marketing them, and living riotously off the proceeds. Trubachevsky's growing affection for the aged scholar deterred him from exposing the son's treachery.

When a crisis was precipitated by Bauer's fatal illness, Trubachevsky was falsely accused of filching documents from the archives. Only the most determined efforts of his friend Kartashikhin, a medical student, roused him from his suicidal lethargy. He had moved too long among those people who "think they're alive only because they can see their breath in cold air." He decided that the people of the Soviet Union should be divided into two categories: "Those who on Nov. 7 walk on the road and those who stand on the sidewalk." Resolving to march on the road to tomorrow, he packed off to Dneprostroy, in order to come to grips with reality while working on the mighty power project destined to galvanize sleepy villages with the pulse of modernity and progress. "And when he came back . . . he had found himself. In the larger view. How one life cancels another!"

Benjamin Kaverin, a protege of Gorky, has used a comparatively small group of people to symbolize a transitory period of Soviet history long since left behind in the swift tempo of its development. Though the characters and events of the novel are too circumscribed in their territory and activities to give a coherent sense of this era as an entity, they are skillfully and convincingly portrayed.

Notable Dutch Novel

BEGGARS' REVOLT. By Maurits Dekker. Translated from The Dutch by Irene Clephane and David Hallett. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

FOR the setting of his story Maurits Dekker has chosen the dramatic mid-sixteenth century in Holland when the struggle between the established church and the newly formed Calvinist creed was at its height. There were many cross-currents of discontent throughout the country. Nobles, merchants, and peasants hated the dominance of Spain and were in a frenzy of rage against the officers of the Inquisition who had been sent by Philip to suppress heresy and who tortured and exploited the people. The culmination of this unrest was the revolt of a relatively small group of peasants who took matters into their own hands and won cessions of which the nobles had only cautiously dreamed.

Mr. Dekker has presented a kaleidoscopic picture of this time, giving glimpses of events from shifting points of view. He has included a multitude of characters from all levels of society: Philip of Spain, cold and bigoted; the lonely and proud Governess of the Netherlands, Margaret of Parama; William, Prince of Orange, cautious and logical to a fault; the scheming Cardinal Granvelle, and a host of peasants and craftsmen of whom the most notable is Vincent, the iconoclast and rebel. The story, however, has no hero; the protagonist is rather the period itself. By presenting a series of character sketches and descriptions of events the author seeks to create an impression of the whole movement toward freedom of thought and speech.

The result may be described as an animated historical essay. Here are vivid reports of battles and uprisings, discussions of the complicated intrigue indulged in by church and state in that day, and realistically drawn miniatures of various representative people. There is, however, no central figure who binds together the scattered accounts into one unified impression, no synthesis of emotion to give depth to the drama of the struggle against oppression. This shortcoming is especially noticeable in the case of the potentially interesting Vincent, who is never properly developed and remains disappointingly indistinct in outline.

Contains 31 of Stringer's Irish poems, all very much worth reading.

Writes of Life In U. S. S. R.

BENJAMIN KAVERIN.

Two Centuries Ago In London

EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY LONDON LIFE. By Rosamond Bayne-Powell. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

WITHOUT offering any interpretation of the material which she has assembled in this volume, Mrs. Bayne-Powell presents an intimate picture of the eighteenth-century Londoner's life much as it might have been viewed by the writers of the "Spectator" and the "Tatler." Her discussions of the political, literary, and economic developments of the day are limited to brief outlines.

Mrs. Bayne-Powell has culled from old newspapers, legal documents and private letters for the material of her gossipy chronicle. In discursive style she catalogues such interesting items as the amount of liquor consumed by the Londoner of that period, the average wages paid to servants, the cost of postage to Birmingham, and the number of pickpockets arrested in 1739. There are informative chapters dealing with the medical situation, housing problems, and educational facilities.

The book is replete with bits of information not found generally in the history books. A section of curious interest is that dealing with periodicals, in which the author mentions the quaint system whereby newspapers, whose purchase price was usually beyond the reach of the average Londoner, could be rented for an hour or so at a nominal fee, the cost per hour being higher in the morning than in the evening. An item which may astonish housewives is the author's report that Mrs. Glass, a recipe expert of the day, recommended six pounds of butter as sufficient for the crust of goose pie.

It is not an altogether pleasant picture that Mrs. Bayne-Powell has drawn. "The inhumanity of the eighteenth century," she remarks, "is a thing which strikes us with horror." But in spite of our great advancement in many respects, it is not for us of this chaotic time to sit in reprehensive judgment on that century. Aware of this, the author has maintained an objective attitude in her chronicle.

Lenin and Stalin In Contrast

THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION. By V. I. Lenin and Joseph Stalin. (International Publishers, New York.)

THIS volume opens with one man's analysis and closes with a state's decree. The analysis is Lenin's famous "April Theses," the first declaration upon his return from exile on April 16, 1917. Succinctly he sums up what he believes to be the situation: "a transition from the first stage of the revolution—which . . . placed power into the hands of the bourgeoisie—to the second stage, which must place power into the hands of the proletariat and the poor strata of the peasantry." By Jan. 19, the last remnants of "bourgeois power" are cleared away with the dissolution of the Constituent Assembly.

Here we have the theme and plot of the book. It is fitting that this volume should open and close with a selection by Lenin. But it is to be regretted that the publishers found it necessary to insert some 80 pages of Stalin's uninspired and unoriginal contributions. It seems to be the purpose of the book to improve on history, for this Joseph was not its favorite child. His brothers and the other Bolshevik leaders seem to have received more attention in 1917. Stalin's faithful editors have seen to it that history does not repeat its mistake in this collection of papers and speeches. They have exercised the censor's prerogative of eliminating all that was unpleasant to Stalin even in the slightest degree.

The editors were apparently too busy cutting to include a glossary and notes for the uninitiated. As a result, the reader who is not familiar with the history of the Russian revolution will be puzzled rather than enlightened by this volume. But those who have some acquaintance with the events relating to this period will find the book of great value, for here Lenin, the magician of the Russian revolution, reveals the cunning of his art. It is an art based upon the political and economic theories of Karl Marx. But to Lenin, Marxism was never a dogma. It was always a guide to action.

Common Lives In Ireland

A PURSE OF COPPERS. By Sean O'Faolain. (The Viking Press, New York.)

THE spirit of the Irish countryside, the towns, and the people is revealed in this collection of short stories by an author whose sensitive preceptions and simple, sturdy language have marked him as one of the finest writers of our times. It is a treat to read of characters who speak and move as naturally as Sean O'Faolain's, and who fit so perfectly into their various settings. For the people he creates seem no less real than the surroundings in which he places them.

Rare imagination, wisdom and humor are all contained in these stories, although they concern but "a handful of modest life out of Ireland—much rubbed." It is difficult to choose a best among them, but perhaps the honor should go to "Kitty the Wren," a tale of a French soldier, an ostracized peasant girl, and a village priest, told with remarkable beauty and simplicity of style.

Although he writes about modern Ireland, Mr. O'Faolain does not expound a cause. For example, although 10 of these 14 stories are concerned with priests, nuns, or with religious prejudices, he expresses no personal opinion about the relationship of the Church and the Irish people. Nor does he reveal his ideas on politics and economics when such questions arise in the course of his narratives. He does not, however, evade these issues; the actual problems of the people are at the heart of all the stories. He seeks, rather, to present a dispassionate picture of various points of view and thereby to give a clear and true account of the causes from which they arise. The final effect is not exciting, yet the insight and the great sympathy with which he creates his plots and his characters make each of the stories memorable.

Booms and Slumps Of Fifty Years

THE MARKET PLACE: Reminiscences of a Financial Editor. By Alexander Dana Noyes. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

AT 76, the financial editor of the New York Times looks back over his half-century and more in American journalism to give us a lively, readable and informative autobiography. The book is one which builders of journalism libraries will want for their shelves, while the passing reader will find its long view illuminating.

On graduating from Amherst College, young Noyes went first to the New York Tribune as a "space" reporter. Next he was financial editor of the old New York Commercial Advertiser for five years. For 29 years thereafter, he was with the Evening Post, transferring to the New York Times in 1921. From each editorial watch tower he has followed the world of public affairs—particularly that part of it which centered in the market place.

Reporting, as he does, on events since Cleveland's defeat of Blaine in 1884, Mr. Noyes recounts the history of American depressions and booms over a third of the nation's life. It is an impressive recital. For while the writer at no time gives so much detail that the reader is wearied, he is almost continuously tracing the course of the business cycle, up and down, up again and down again, to the present. The American people, it seems, have either ridden the crest of the wave or floundered in a trough of despondency.

Among the delights of the book are its crisp characterizations of the personages of the times: Godkin, Dana, and Bryant, Ochs, Blaine, Cleveland, Bryan, Morgan, and Harriman, the Roosevelts and scores of others. It does not take Mr. Noyes long to describe John W. Gates, whose reckless speculations set Wall Street on its ear as the century ended, but his picture of the little rubicund promoter, with his breezy assurance and impudence, is one that does not soon fade.

The final chapters—"The Depression of the Thirties" and "Franklin Roosevelt and the Era of Experiment"—are significant as sincere efforts at appraising the decade since the crash. Mr. Noyes approves the way in which the banking crisis of 1933 was handled; but much of the rest of Mr. Roosevelt's conduct he finds hardly that of a statesman. The lag of 1937 does not worry him. He is reassured by the fact that his "country is once more in the position of world economic leadership, and that all past experience has shown its people as a whole to be tenacious of the country's best traditions."

—Irving Dilliard.

THEN CAME OIL. By C. B. Glasscock. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., New York.)

Thumbnail sketches of men who made oil history in the Oklahoma fields take up the greater part of this book. Included in that group is Lew Wentz, who was interested a few years ago in purchasing the Cardinals. Replete with anecdotes, Glasscock's oil feature at times is extremely amusing.

NAZIS CALL HIM THE RED PRINCE

PRINCE HUBERTUS ZU LOEWENSTEIN.

A Rebel of Imperial Lineage

CONQUEST OF THE PAST: An Autobiography. By Prince Hubertus zu Loewenstein. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

HAD it not been for the World War and the Nazis, Prince Hubertus zu Loewenstein would be residing quietly today, amid somewhat musty grandeur, in one of his ancestral castles in Southern Germany or the Austrian Tyrol. Instead, he is an exile, banished from Austria and proclaimed by Hitler a traitor to the German Reich. How it came about that this young aristocrat sacrificed family ties and traditions to become a devoted fighter for democracy is the theme of his autobiography.

The history of Prince Loewenstein's family goes back to the eighth century. In its veins runs the blood of the Carolingian, Hohenstaufen and Franconian Emperors, the Hapsburgs, Plantaganets, Wittelsbachs, the houses of Savoy and Aragon. The young Prince, impressed with this distinguished lineage early in life (and much of his awe remains), was taught to look down upon folk of ordinary birth. "Don't behave like a commoner," he relates, was his father's most severe form of reproach.

The war and the inflation brought poverty, but aristocratic pride survived. Amid the tensions and crises of the time, young Hubertus groped for a sanctuary of faith. His account of this search makes his book more than the story of one individual, for it expresses the restless seeking of the whole bewildered "lost generation" of the defeated nations.

Hindenburg and Ludendorff were for a time his heroes. He heard Hitler speak, came under his spell for a few moments, then was repelled. He abandoned his Catholic faith and returned to it. A stay at Geneva taught him the meaning of internationalism. At first he despised the German Republic, until he captured the vision of its founders and threw his fate with that of Weimar's defenders as a youth leader in the Reichsbanner, the Republican Front.

As the "Red Prince," the epithet applied by the Nazis, he was a tireless, daring speaker and organizer. When the writer reaches those crucial days, before and after the Republic's overthrow, he drops his detailed narrative style for a crisp diary form. It is obvious that he leaves out far more than he includes. The diary ends on April 30, 1933, when at last, after many perils, the Prince flees with his wife from his beloved Germany, the "crushed, profaned, sacred land that I walked in as a boy, that in spirit I shall walk in always, wherever I may be."

Prince Loewenstein now is in this country, engaged in establishing the American Guild for German Cultural Freedom, to keep alive his country's best traditions and counteract Nazi propaganda. In connection with this work, he and his wife visited St. Louis last year. He has written several previous books which supplement this personal history in giving greater definition to the writer's political views.

A Drama of Early Kentucky

ROBIN LANDING. A Play in Three Acts. By Stanley Young. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

PUT out of commission early in its running, Stanley Young's poetic drama of life in a Kentucky trading post during the late eighteenth century doubtless will never see the light again as a professional production. The piece holds much promise, however, for the more ambitious non-professional groups of actors.

It is a blood-and-thunder affair about two brothers and the woman they both love, about primitive villainy and pasts which catch up with people. In plot and most of the characterization, it shows the ineptness of the author. But Young need not apologize for the play, for the best of the poetry that he has put into it sets him far up in the list of today's writers for the theater.

"Robin Landing" reads exceptionally well. It abounds in color and atmosphere, it creates the feeling of the wilderness and the isolation of the settlement where the drama takes place. The poetry is not only lyric but virile, clever and, at times, almost dazzlingly original. Into the character of Mike Fink, largely by the lustiness of his language, Young has woven much of the legendary quality of that almost fabulous Ohio River boatman. For these reasons, though "Robin Landing" may wander into the wilderness itself and be lost, the future of Stanley Young will be carefully watched.

NOTES ON THE WAY. By Viscountess Rhondda. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

Lady Rhondda, widely known as editor of the progressive weekly, Time and Tide, here comments on life in general and the way we live it. The book begins with a description of Jerusalem and ends with a meditation on survival after death. In between come notes on Leonardo da Vinci, T. E. Lawrence, Bernard Shaw, Winifred Holtby and others, together with comments on social institutions, political inventions, democracy, etc.

World of Wonders In the Sea

SEA-HORSE ADVENTURE. By Else Bostelmann and Irmengarde Eberle. (Holiday House, New York.)

HERE is a tale of a sea horse—and in case you don't know what one looks like, you can easily learn from the drawings in this little book for children. You see him pictured in his native haunts beneath the sea, along with the flounder, the trunk fish, the puffer, the pipe fish, and many other inhabitants of the deep. The drawings give an impression of the strange submarine colors and the story explains the ethics of the ocean—how a moray eel will eat a sea horse, and a sea horse will eat a shrimp. The story also concerns itself with the various fishes' methods of securing food in the struggle for survival. Even the sea anemone, "who really hasn't a brain at all," knows enough to ally himself with the crab and ride around on the crab's back—a kind of "business partnership" in which the crab provides the locomotion and the sea anemone does the grabbing. Our hero, the sea horse, finally reaches a peaceful haven of sea weed, where he talks with his relatives "in the soundless language of fishes."

To produce this tale of adventure under water, Mrs. Bostelmann herself became a deep-sea diver, gathering her material as a member of four oceanographic expeditions of the New York Zoological Society, under the direction of William Beebe. Her story and drawings are scientifically accurate, being based on her own observations through the diver's helmet.

A Discouraged Virtuoso

CONCERT PITCH. By Elliot Paul (Random House, New York.)

ROBERT MAURA had spent the greater number of his 20 years at the piano, and he was a competent musician; he had developed a virtuoso technique and a mature artistic concept of interpretation. But his career as a concert artist was doomed to failure before it began. Even if he had survived the machinations of the critics, he was powerless against trends, unwelcome in a world "tired of conventional sounds"—a world whose ears were dulled by the raucous blare and whine of machinery.

This story of frustration, with its scene laid chiefly in Paris, reflects the social and artistic tendencies of the present era: the uncertainties, the questionings, the unrest, the economic problems of musicians and artists everywhere. And through it all the author stresses his contention that the piano is a declining instrument and music is a waning art.

It is a debatable question as to whether or not "Concert Pitch" will impress Elliot Paul's readers as did his "The Life and Death of a Spanish Town." Although rather depressing, the story is well constructed and written in the author's characteristically fluent style. Certainly musicians will ponder his philosophical discussions, for his statements anent music are forceful.

While Mr. Paul taxes the reader's credulity with his suggestion that a "statophone"—an instrument to amplify the noises of the air—will eventually supplant the concert orchestra, he is plausible in his theory that a revival of the harpsiehord and the music of its era will only temporarily supersede the piano and its literature. Thus he sounds the only hopeful note in the book concerning the music of the future.

J. M. Barrie's Autobiography

THE GREENWOOD HAT: Being a Memoir of James Anon. By J. M. Barrie. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

IT is typical of Sir James Barrie that his only autobiography has little to say about the successful author of "Margarat Ogilvy" and "The Admirable Crichton." Compiled a few years before the renowned author's death in 1937, "The Greenwood Hat" is a nostalgic glance backward at Barrie's first years in London. He was then James Anon, recently of Kirriemuir, Scotland, "gauche . . . inarticulate . . . thin as a pencil," his expression an "uncomfortable blank," his manners "full of nails like his boots." He lived on buns and cheese, opened a bank account when a hole appeared in his waistcoat pocket, and wrote—in less than two years—some 800 little essays on rooks and schooldav pranks, little folk and pathetic things. A hundred forty of these were published without signature, principally in the "St. James Gazette," and then, in 1887, an editor put the name, Barrie, at the end of one of them and James Anonymous was no more.

Barrie opens each chapter of his memoirs with one of those airy products of his literary adolescence, following it with a brief comment on how it came to be written, what became of the people mentioned in it — some of them famous — and what the author himself was doing and thinking at the time. The self-confidence of the writer of 75 is shown not only in the superior writing found in the comments but in the fact that he revives his 1885-1887 articles without apology. Some of them, to be sure, are mildly amusing, but most are supercilious, and all are dated.

The haphazard character of the comments is deceiving, for in their totality they give an intimate, full-length picture of Sir James. Little by little, we see this whimsical and lonely man, who hated sentiment "as a slave hates its master," and to whom the shadows of imagination were more real than facts. Barrie was never concerned with what was going on about him. He listened to political talk only long enough to pick up a few ideas for his writing, and he confesses that when, in his old age, he read a number of books about the great social events taking place in the London of his youth, it was like reading about a foreign country. He joined half a dozen clubs, but the only one he felt close to was one that met late at night after all the others had closed. Its members were very illustrious and very dead —David Garrick, Dr. Johnson, Boswell, Pepys, Rousseau. It is the club, undoubtedly, to which posterity will assign Sir James. —Milton Lomask.

THE DEATH OF MARK. By R. E. Spencer. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

Readers familiar with R. E. Spencer's previous work, "Felicita," will be disappointed by "The Death of Mark." The drama of a dominant, vigorous man, permanently paralyzed at the height of his power, is an appealing one, but Spencer never quite brings it off. Instead of a story with universal application, we have Mark, his wife, his brother, his mother all circling around each other and talking so much they never come to grips. In spite of moments of exquisite writing,

Tells How Arnold Got That Way

FRANK O. HOUGH.

Dramatic Life Of a Traitor

RENOWN. By Frank O. Hough. (Carrick and Evans, Inc., New York.)

THE story of Benedict Arnold is a dark and curious chapter in American history, and the Traitor has become almost a legendary figure in our national folklore. As material for an historical novel, Arnold's life offers fascinating possibilities, many of which Mr. Hough has realized in a fine delineation of this ambitious, passionate man and his life-long quest for Renown.

With the revolt of the American colonies, Arnold's rise to fame was rapid. Soon the obscure New England merchant had become a national hero, acclaimed the "sword arm of the Revolution" and decorated by Washington himself as his "most valued General." Nevertheless his abilities as a commander often were dominated by a proud, quick-tempered disposition and a thirst for glory—traits which led to his disaffection and eventual treason.

Mr. Hough's account of the West Point conspiracy is both dramatic and convincing. Arnold, motivated partly by personal grievances, partly by a sincere belief in reunion with England, fell an easy victim to flattering British diplomacy, tempting him with the renown of ending the war. The secret correspondence with the enemy, the midnight meeting with Maj. Andre on the banks of the Hudson, the discovery of the plot and Arnold's flight to the British, all combine to produce a powerful climax. Through it all runs the indispensible thread of romance between Arnold and his wife, the Tory-minded Peggy Shippen of Philadelphia. Although her actual part in the conspiracy remains doubtful, her devotion is beyond question, for she stood by her husband to the end of his life.

Some may not agree with Mr. Hough's sympathetic leanings toward Arnold. Few, however, will be unmoved by the story, and especially by its closing scenes where the real courage and pathos of Arnold are revealed best, in his brave but futile struggle against defeat during the long years after the war.

IF YOU are a parent

if you are curious about human problems today, you must not miss Sinclair Lewis' new novel, THE PRODIGAL PARENTS.

LEWIS GANNETT declares, in the N. Y. Herald-Tribune: "It may well become Sinclair Lewis' most successful book, for there are in America some thirty or forty millions of us puzzled parents wondering whether we've done anything like the right thing by our children."

And CHARLES C. CLAYTON says, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "Sinclair Lewis has turned the barbed darts of his satire not on the ordinary man but on the forces which bewilder him and threaten his peace. In The Prodigal Parents he champions the revolt of the parents against the revolt of youth."

BONDS PUSHED DOWN SHARPLY IN WEEK'S TRADE

Foreign Obligations and Domestic Rails Are Most Vulnerable — Partial Recoveries as Period Closes.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Bonds of all classes were pushed down sharply this week by a selling wave inspired by European war fears. Most vulnerable of all were foreign obligations and domestic rails, in which losses were unusually heavy. Other groups took a less severe hammering.

Sharp recovery was scored by foreign dollar bonds today. However, as European war clouds partially lifted and better sentiment pervaded all securities markets. The domestic corporate list boasted more gains than losses despite the further upsets among the secondary rail bonds. In U. S. Governments all but three of the actively traded issues ended 2-32 to 9-32 of a point higher. There was a preference for shorter term obligations.

Best performers in the foreign dollar group were Poland 8s of 50, up 3 at 50; Australian 5s of 57, up 2 at 101; Denmark 4½s of 62, 1 at 99½, and Japanese 6½s of 54, ¾ at 75½. Czechoslovak 5s of 52 lost 4¼ at 65⅞.

Domestic Bonds Rebound.

Domestic obligations ending fractions to more than 1 point better included Southern Pa 4s of 1935 at 65½, Nicke 4½s of 1978 at 35, Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s of 1962 at 37½ International Telephone 5s 55.

Western Maryland 4s of 1952 dropped 3 points to 80. Other losses included United Drug 5s of 53 and Penn Dixie Cement 6s of 81.

The Associated Press average of 60 foreign bonds gained .9 of a point at 62.7, recovering most of the ground lost Friday. Other groups used in the compilation, with the exception of the industrials, gained modestly. Transfers of $3,699,075, par value, compared with $3,421,825 a week ago.

Averages Off for Week.

Despite Saturday's upward turn the Associated Press bond averages for the 20 rails closing the week 10 points under last week, the 10 industrials 1.3 points below, the 10 utilities .1 below, the 10 foreign bonds 3.4 below, and the 10 low-grade bonds .9 under.

Most damage to values occurred in the late-week sessions, as the scare reached an acute stage over the threat of hostilities between Poland and Lithuania.

Domestic rails, on the skids since the close of February, showed feeble attempts at recovery at the start of the week, but were bowled over by a fresh flow of selling and finished at the lowest levels in five days.

Future of Rails.

The White House conference held by President Roosevelt to discuss plans for tiding the railroads over their difficulties brought forth assurances of immediate Government aid, but failed to check the selling. However, financial circles see prospects for remedial action, mutually in the President's appointment of a committee of experts to draft proposals.

Tension created by the course of events in Europe in the wake of Germany's annexation of Austria was well reflected by the panicky behavior of foreign issues. In the quietest trading in years loans of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Austria, Norway, Serbia, Belgium and other European nations plunged to the lowest depths since early 1934.

War Rumors on Many Fronts In Central Europe Tumble Stocks To Lowest Average Since 1935

Liquidation by Foreign and Domestic Holders, Seeking Cash, Wither Prices on Exchange—Price Rebound as Week Ends.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19. — War rumors on many fronts in Central Europe threw jittery domestic securities and commodity markets into turmoil this week, and sent stocks careening to new post-depression lows.

Liquidation by both foreign and domestic holders, clamoring for cash, sent a wave of selling orders rolling through the Stock Exchange with withered prices.

Steels, rails, chmicals, oils, communications, aircrafts, electrical equipments, motors, mail orders, and specialties all joined in the retreat.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped to the lowest level since the summer of 1935.

Financial markets, however, finished the week with a recovery push today, heartened apparently by a break in Europe's ominous war clouds.

Rally at Week-end.

Stocks got off to a rallying start in the short session following word Lithuania had accepted the Polish ultimatum unconditionally, thus averting, at least for the moment, a possible military explosion on the continent that could have embroiled virtually all world Powers.

At the best share gains ran 4 or more points among favored steels, motors, rubbers, gold mines, aircrafts, farm implements, mail orders and specialties. Top marks were lowered a trifle by profit selling near the close.

The Associated Press average held a net advance of .7 of a point at 40.9 against a drop yesterday of 1.5 points. Transfers totaled 442,070 shares compared with 299,850 last Saturday. The average on the week showed a net loss of 1.4 points. The turnover for the six days was the largest for any similar period since the latter part of January.

The Tax Question.

Overnight study of the statement of Senator Barkley, majority leader, that a tax revision bill that would please industry would pass Congress within a month was a cheering influence as was the enactment by the New York Legislature of a measure cutting the State's capital gains taxes in half and otherwise lightening imposts on speculative and investment dealings.

Action of Mexico in expropriating the country's petroleum industry failed to disturb oil shares in the brief session. Standard Oil of New Jersey and Consolidated Oil, both with important interests in the Southern republic, closed behind plus signs, the former up 1¼ at 47¼ and the latter ⅛ at 8⅝.

Bonds reflected the latest peace gesture with general improvement, rail loans being in demand and foreign obligations moving up sharply. Most major commodities leaned forward, although wheat futures, strong the day before on war talk, fell back ⅞ to 1⅛ cents a bushel. Corn was off ⅛ to ¼. Cotton, on the other hand, usually weak when the troops begin to march, regained 95 cents to $1.10 a bale on its Friday's setback.

Flight of Foreign Funds.

The flight of foreign funds to dollars, pronounced in recent sessions, slowed down perceptibly and sterling turned up 1 13-16 cents at $4.96 9-16, and the French franc improved .00¾ of a cent at 3.07½ cents.

Dome Mines was one of the strongest stocks of the day, gaining 4 points at 51⅞ in response to announcement share owners would be asked to vote on a 2-for-1 split-up.

Other climbers in the final session included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Kennecott, Westinghouse, duPont, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, Homestake, Santa Fe, New York Central, Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical and Allis Chalmers.

Stocks suffered the most severe beating of the week on Friday. The general average fell to a new two-year bottom, while the rail composite broke through to the lowest level since 1932.

The week opened with an onslaught on foreign bonds as the markets digested the week-end news of absorption of Austria by Nazi Germany.

Total stock sales during the week amounted to 4,873,870 shares, compared with 3,444,580 a week ago and 10,375,840 corresponding week a year ago. Sales from Jan. 1 to date were 49,116,550 shares, compared with 148,683,556 a year ago and 167,543,553 two years ago.

Foreign Bonds at New Lows.

Austrian Government 7s of '57 in the week's opening trading session lost over half their value, tumbling from 74 to 36½. Several more points were lost as the week progressed.

Traders saw Germany eyeing Czechoslovakia as the next object of Nazi expansion, with France insistent that Czechoslovakia autonomy should remain inviolate. Another war threat was Poland's clamor against Lithuania. Intensified military operations in Spain with continuous insurgent air raids on Barcelona added to the tension in the market places.

The Associated Press average of foreign bonds fell to a new low for the year.

New lows were also registered by the railroad and industrial bond averages.

Holders of rail liens received little cheer from White House conferences "to do something for the ailing railroads."

Domestic Business Picture.

The domestic business picture was a little brighter, though actual gains were small. Railroad carloadings of 556,664 cars advanced 3748 over the preceding week, but the rise was less than seasonal. Electric power output was down more than seasonally. Automobile assemblies gained, but the increase was not as large as is normally expected at this time of the year. Steel operations advanced 2.2 per cent to 32.1 per cent of capacity this week, but substantial new orders by large users, such as railroads, rail equipment companies and auto makers failed to develop.

Most major commodities tumbled lower, though there were rallying tendencies in wheat and other grains, based largely on belief that European War threats might develop into a scramble for basic foodstuffs.

Wholesale Price Index at '34 Level.

The Associated Press index of 35 weighted wholesale staple prices dropped to the lowest level since the fall of 1934.

Cotton futures sold lower. Metals were nervous.

Domestic industrial operations during the week tapered a bit further, the Associated Press index of industrial activity easing to 68.4, against 68.5 last week and 105.9 a year ago.

Neither retail nor wholesale buying showed any gain, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

Reflecting the grave European war threats, a renewed substantial flow of gold from the United Kingdom and the Continent to this country began early in the week.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY 35 PER CENT UNDER '37

Cotton Manufacturing Continues to Pick Up—Now 12 Per Cent Above Year's Low.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The general industrial tempo slowed moderately this week, although some groups chalked up gains.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index, based on latest statistics, dropped to 68.4 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 68.5 a week ago and compared with 105.9 last year.

The current level is 35 per cent under the comparable figure in 1937, when the recovery boom was nearing its peak.

Indices of automobile assemblies and electric power output slumped to new low ground for the year. Total freight carloadings also dipped after correction for normal seasonal factors, although the industrial classification—miscellaneous freight—was unchanged.

Cotton manufacturing activity continued to pick up. The latest figure was 12 per cent above the low for the year touched late in January. Steel mill operations also moved up, as buying from miscellaneous sources came into the market.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted figures based on the latest available data, compared as follows:

	Latest Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Composite index	68.4	68.5	105.9
Automobile production —*	49.9	51.3	87.9

COMMODITY PRICE INDEX LOW SINCE '34

Declines Among Items Making Up Group Outweigh Gains Better Than 2 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Commodity prices gave ground this week as traders apprehensively eyed the troubled European situation and crashing stock quotations.

Measured by the Associated Press weighted index of 25 important staples, prices tumbled to the lowest level since November, 1934. Volume, however, was not heavy on the drop.

Declines among commodities making up the index outweighed advances better than two-to-one. Industrial and agricultural items were chief losers, both groups touching new lows for the current recession.

Although war threats, actual and potential, dominated news from abroad, commodities normally considered military necessities—wheat, copper, lead, etc.—were not bid for with any enthusiasm.

Eggs, cocoa and flour—items entering the market basket—were up sufficiently to offset moderate declines in sugar and coffee. This was the only important classification registering a gain on the week.

Another group resisting the deflationary trend was live stock. Strong demand for cattle sent this staple sharply higher, while hogs and lambs dipped. Underlying the strength of cattle, analysts hold, is the progressively smaller number of the animals being auctioned off at the various market places.

Other products of the farm were weak. Cotton plunged under the nine-cent a pound level as supplies pressed on the market. Corn, wheat and rye also gave ground. Oats chalked up a small gain.

Industrial commodities were weak. Rubber, bituminous coal, turpentine and zinc fell back. Tin alone in this category showed an upturn.

Textiles were lower, both wool and silk selling off.

The Associated Pre index dropped to 70.15 per cent of the 1926 average from 70.71 a week ago and compared with 95.36 last year.

The index, with its components based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

	March 18.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
35 commodities*—	70.15	70.71	95.36

Pendergast Workers Facing Prison From Rank and File

it in Washington. It looks as though there was no stopping it."

Dixon, a 43-year-old mechanic in the Water Department, was sentenced to four years at Leavenworth penitentiary.

The rewards of the "small fry" now on the road to the penitentiary are trifling. Most of the city employes received less than $150 a month and in many cases received only half of their stipulated salaries during the closing months of the city's fiscal year. This periodical pay-cut in the politically swollen ranks of city jobholders was put into effect by City Manager Henry F. McElroy as a means of balancing the annual budget.

One of those convicted and put on probation was Joseph Hobdy, a captain in the Fire Department with an excellent record for more than 20 years. At the time of his trial, a year ago, he was drawing only half his pay. It amounted to less than $80 a month.

Other defendants have observed they made barely enough to obtain the necessaries of life. One precinct captain stated that, although he received veteran's compensation in addition to his pay from a City Hall job, he couldn't support his family of five and keep out of debt.

Must Grease the Wheels.

Besides the constant fear of "emergency" pay-cuts, city employes are subject to all manner of political assessments. They are expected to contribute to the organization that gave them their jobs. They must "chip in" for the treasury of their ward political clubs. They are subject to special assessments during hard campaigns. All the year round they are expected to patronize picnics, card parties, dances and other activities designed to raise funds to grease the wheels of the machine.

Yet for the meager reward of such jobs men and women are accustomed to get out on the political firing line and run the risks attendant upon delivering the vote as it is delivered in this city. They regard most elections as personal issues. They are fighting for their jobs. Some of them, now on the road to the penitentiary, have come to realize that practical politics means stern taskmasters.

Many who have appeared in court have manifested signs of poverty. Some have a hard time to make both ends meet. Several have told the writer they didn't know what would become of their families if they were convicted. Yet, as the record shows, many have stood by their guns. In the vernacular, they have refused to "snitch." Some were actuated by a sense of loyalty, others by appreciation of past "favors," still others by fear.

It was not until March 7 last that all defendants from a precinct gave up and confessed wrong-doing at the outset of their trial. These defendants, election officials from the Ninth Precinct of the Tenth Ward, pleaded guilty or "no contest." They will be sentenced March 28.

Sentences Affirmed.

Those whose sentences have been affirmed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and to whom the Supreme Court has thus far refused to grant a writ of certiorari are:

John T. Little, a Democratic judge from the Nineteenth Precinct of the Twelfth ward, two years in Leavenworth penitentiary. He is 36 years old and an employe of an automobile factory.

Forest C. Holman, a Democratic clerk in the same precinct, a year and a day at El Reno Reformatory. He is 30 years old, married, and unemployed.

Gilbert Stevens, the Pendergast precinct boss, three years at El Reno. He is a 32-year-old fireman.

Edson M. Walker, a Democratic judge of the Thirteenth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, two years at Leavenworth penitentiary. He is a drug clerk.

John H. Drummond, the precinct captain, two years at Leavenworth. He is an employe of the City Water Department.

Frank Ditsch, captain of the Twenty-sixth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, three years at Leavenworth. He is employed at Swope Park. He is 40.

George Neeper, captain of another faction, three years at Leavenworth. He is 35 years old and a W P A foreman.

Lorne E. Wells, a Democratic judge at the Seventeenth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, two years at El Reno. He is an interior decorator. He is 29 years old and married.

Frank H. Adams, Republican judge, three years at Leavenworth. He is a 53-year-old W P A worker.

Joe R. Wells Jr., a Democratic clerk, a year and a day at El Reno. He is married, a 27-year-old painter.

John A. Luteran, the Pendergast precinct captain, three years at Leavenworth. He is a foreman of the city street cleaning department. He is a 40-year-old World War veteran and is married.

Leo B. Roach, a policeman at the polls, six months in Platte County jail.

Waiting on Appeals.

Others convicted and awaiting the outcome of appeals, besides Mrs. Ryan, the Twelfth Ward boss, and Dixon, one of the precinct captains under her, are:

Marie Ogden, Republican judge of the Twentyeighth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, four years at whatever institution may be designated by the Attorney-General. At 28 she has been thrice convicted of forgery and has been arrested many times.

Joseph Maher, the Pendergast precinct captain, five years at Leavenworth. He is 28 and works in the City Treasurer's office.

Don Depasco, a Democratic worker, three years at El Reno. He is 28 and a chauffeur for Mrs. Ryan.

James Callahan, Democratic judge at the Eighteenth Precinct of the Third Ward, three years at Leavenworth. He is a 38-year-old truck driver.

Frank Geier, Democratic judge, two years at Leavenworth.

James Carter, precinct captain, four years at Leavenworth. He is a clerk in the City Assessor's office and is 45 years old.

Mike Cummings, a Pendergast worker, four years at Leavenworth. He is a park laborer.

E. D. Shannabarger, a Democratic judge at the Twenty-second Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, six months in Clay County jail. He is a pool hall attendant and elevator operator. He is 26.

Mrs. Irene Brennan, Democratic judge, two years at Alderson.

Mrs. Nancy Bodenhammer, Republican judge, six months in Clay County jail.

Everett Pippin, a Democratic clerk, a month in jail. He is a machinist, 25 years old, married.

Mrs. Bessie D. Adams, Republican clerk, a month in jail.

Charles H. Kaiser, a Democratic precinct captain, three years at Leavenworth. He is a Water Department employe.

James McNamara, another precinct captain, three years at Leavenworth. He also is in the Water Department.

One a Restaurant Owner.

Gene Riley, a Democratic judge at the Seventh Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, two years at El Reno. He is 29, a restaurant owner.

Mrs. Irene Irvin, a Republican clerk, 60 days in Platte County jail.

Robert Strohm, Pendergast precinct captain, five years at Leavenworth. He is the janitor on the night shift at Jackson County Courthouse. He is 40.

Thomas Audley, a Pendergast worker, three years at Leavenworth. He is a stock clerk in the Water Department and is 52 years old.

Ellis Buck, Democratic judge at the Fifteenth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, one month in jail. He was a striking General Motors employe at the time of the election.

Sam Brenner, a Democratic judge, two years at Leavenworth. He has a police record.

Mrs. Ruth Tucker, a Democratic clerk, a month in jail. She is a waitress in a tavern.

Ernest Williams, Pendergast precinct captain, two years in Leavenworth. He is a 34-year-old timekeeper on a W P A project and is married.

Herman Supofsky, Democratic worker, six months in jail. He was a law student under Judge Otis.

Weeden Henderson, Democratic judge at the Ninth Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, three years at Leavenworth. He was an unemployed salesman. He is 37.

Glenn Barnard, a Democratic judge, three years at Leavenworth. He was an unemployed accountant, 49 years old.

Suspended Sentences.

The remainder of the defendants who pleaded guilty or "no contest" received suspended sentences and were placed on probation. In imposing sentences Judges Otis and Albert L. Reeves followed a recommendation of clemency from the jury in several instances.

The defendants were represented by attorneys recruited by the Pendergast organization, most of them serving without compensation. Bail also was furnished by the organization. In almost every case testimony has been to the effect that, when the Federal investigation began, precinct captains urged others involved to "keep mum," assuring them that the investigation wouldn't amount to anything and that they would be given ample protection.

Untermeyer Theorizes

PLAY IN POETRY. By Louis Untermeyer. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

IN this printing of the Henry Ward Beecher Lectures, delivered at Amherst last October, Mr. Untermeyer comes to grips with one of the mysteries of poetic appeal. His real topic is poetic metaphor, the "nimble magic in which writer and reader conspire to escape reality." Not very far removed from the figures of everyday speech, it has been used, as he points out, in amusing tribute to the lady loved by the Cavalier, or as a statement of the mystic's hunger for God, or simply to display a writer's cunning with words and rhymes. There is amusement for the reader in the apt mis-rhyming of Ogden Nash as in Vaughan's or Crashaw's fantastic figures of speech. For Mr. Untermeyer, apparently, the prosodic "play" in the one case is of the same piece as the figurative bewilderment of the other.

But is not this too large a concession to make, even though college students form the audience? When the poetry-lover hears Mrs. Meynell's lines,

Flocks of the memories of the day draw near
The dovecote doors of sleep,

he is not tickled agreeably at the neatness of the parallel between the homing doves and the crowding memories of the day's events. There is no time for noticing the cleverness of the image. Wit and its analysis come long after, for the professor and lecturer to point out. The reader of great poetry is given a new experience, not offered an instance of verbal gymnastics.

Of course, as Mr. Untermeyer might have said, a poet has a sense of the ridiculous, and likes to play tricks with words, his tools: but, if he approaches the point, as Browning did, where he himself fails to distinguish between verbal clowning and sincerity of impression, readers of his verse are going to continue to suppose that poetry is a silly form of amusement.

A Woman Feared And Hated

THE PRIVATE LETTERS OF PRINCESS LIEVEN. Translated and Edited by Peter Quennell. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

IN HER day, the publication of the private letters of Princess Lieven, which held half the guilty secrets of the highest European circles, might have created international scandal of the greatest consequence. In the lifetime of her last surviving son, who died in the '80's, publication still might have proved a dangerous undertaking. For this reason, the son willed that they remain unexamined for a further period of 50 years. By 1919, however, war and revolution having intervened, there was no longer any danger in retracing the path of "one of the most intelligent, most feared and worst hated women" of her time. The letters, then first published, are now offered to the English-speaking world.

The beautiful daughter of an ancient and illustrious Livonian family, much in favor at the Imperial Russian court, from the beginning the future Princess moved always toward more power. At 15, under the direction of the Empress, she contracted a loveless "but entirely suitable" marriage to the then Count Lieven, who, still in his twenties, had already achieved an exalted military rank; and this marriage, in spite of numerous infidelities of Madame Lieven, was to constitute her passport to the courts of Europe for more than 40 years.

These letters cover the period from 1820 to 1826, and were addressed to Prince Metternich, the Chancellor of Austria-Hungary. At this time, the Princess was in London as the Russian Ambassador's wife, and was at the very height of her influence. Among the many personages whose motives and manners she revealed were the King, the Duke of Wellington, Sir Walter Scott and Chateaubriand.

Auto News and Notes

THE FEDERAL MOTOR Truck Sales & Service Corporation has just been organized with headquarters at 4022 West Pine boulevard to distribute Federal trucks in St. Louis and adjacent territory. The new concern is headed by Roland G. Wilms, formerly distributor for two years of Auburn cars, who is its president. The vice-president and general manager is C. S. Clinton, a former St. Louisan, who has been in the truck and bus business for the past 20 years. He was sales manager for nine years for the Commercial Auto Body Co., and then successively distributer in St. Louis of Studebaker busses for nine states, manager for two years of the Studebaker factory branch in Detroit and wholesale and retail manager for Studebaker out of Cleveland and Buffalo. A. C. Klimas, who has been selling Federal trucks here for 17 years, is assistant general manager. Harry Dudley, for 11 years in Federal truck selling, is service manager. Eddie B. Sachse is manager of the parts department. The firm's building, containing more than 30,000 square feet of floor space, has been redecorated and equipped with modern machinery and factory-trained mechanics. The complete line of Federal trucks is on display, and the firm has a $20,000 stock of parts. In addition to distributing Federal trucks, the firm will be distributer of Bender streamline cruiser busses and Stutz Pak-Age-Cars, and will carry large stocks of parts for Hercules motors, Timken axles, Spicer universal joints, Werner & Clarl transmissions, Borg & Beck and Lipe clutches.

SENSITIVE INSTRUMENTS for scientific analysis of engines and their adjustment before cars leave the factory have been installed by De Soto to supplement dynamometer tests for power and performance. The De Soto apparatus permits scientific analysis of hundreds of engines daily. Before a new De Soto engine is placed in a chassis, it goes to one of 10 motor analysis roms for dynamometer power testing and then testing for vacuum rating and analysis of exhaust gases. Together, the tests reveal as little as 1 per cent loss in operating efficiency from the prescribed standard. An engine may be tested every six minutes in each room, so 100 engines can be analyzed each hour.

ADVERTISING AND MERchandising plans for the new quick-stopping tire introduced by Goodrich were discussed at a meeting of dealers and company field representatives held Wednesday at the Melbourne Hotel by Hoyt Price, assistant district manager, and E. M. Jones, district sales promotion and advertising manager. Perfection of a new cotton tire cord for Goodrich tires and a new method of building tires made possible by it, were described as revolutionary. This new "hi-flex" cord, it was stated, does not stretch more and more in use, and prevents a tire from increasing in size on a car and thereby shortening tire life. Instead, it was declared, special treatment of the cord before it is coated with rubber and built into a tire, causes the cord to return to its original length every time it stretches naturally as a car rolls along. There is no slipping of fibers against one another, it was said, so friction and internal heat are minimized. The new cord, it was said, makes the elasticity of the whole tire better, and, having greater flexing resistance than older types, tends to prevent shoulder and side-wall breaks due to excessive tire flexing. As the cord is more compact than other types, it was declared, more rubber can be used between the cords in a tire in which it is used, giving greater cushioning with the same cord strength.

AN ELECTIVE ELEMENTARY course in traffic safety and safe driving for seventh, eighth and ninth grade pupils is being given in the junior high school at Lansing, Mich. In addition to daily drill in safety conduct, the pupils are trained in fundamentals of safe operation of a car. For this latter purpose, a special unit provided by the Oldsmobile factory is used. This is the forward half of an Oldsmobile car including all controls. "The children in this safety education class obviously are too young to be allowed to drive cars on the streets," Principal H. E. Gardner said. "But as a result of this training, we believe, they will understand the proper and intelligent use of automobile controls when they become old enough to learn actual driving."

AS A RESULT OF THEIR work before and in National Used Car Exchange Week, Chevrolet dealers are in a position to accept new car business in volume, W. E. Holler, general manager for Chevrolet, says. In February, Holler reports, Chevrolet dealers' used car stocks decreased by 7813 units from the January level. Chevrolet used car sales in February were 116,925, compared with 115,518 in the same month of 1937. For 36 consecutive months, Holler reports, Chevrolet used car sales have exceeded 100,000 a month, and in the three-year period Chevrolet dealers delivered a total of 5,230,108 used cars.

A station wagon was delivered recently to Otis Brown of the Westwood Stables, by the Weber-Deibel Motor Co., Ford dealer.

ARTHUR R. LINDBURG, INC., has been appointed distributer of Willys cars in the St. Louis territory, and will handle the line in addition to its Studebaker car distributers hip. A two-door sedan is being added to the Willys line, which already includes a coupe, four-door sedan in in standard and de luxe types, and commercial cars, half-ton trucks and pickups, and an exclusive type semi-cab-over-engine panel-body model. The Lindburg firm, whose president, Arthur R. Lindburg, has been in the automobile business for many years, will distribute Willys cars in Eastern Missouri, Illinois south of Jacksonville, and in the Paducah (Ky.) area. It is showing the complete Willys line and has put in a full line of parts as well as added factory-trained mechanics to its service department.

H. W. PREHN of St. Louis is the chairman of an organization committee appointed at a meeting of dealers Wednesday at Jefferson City and instructed to draft a constitution and by-laws for a Missouri State auto dealers' association. Roland H. Record, president of the Kansas City Motor Dealers' Association, is vice-chairman of the committee, and Joseph E. Schlecht, secretary-manager of the Greater St. Louis Automotive Association, is secretary. The committee is to report at a meeting to which dealers from all parts of the State will be invited.

The preliminary meeting at Jefferson City was attended by representatives of dealers in 11 cities, David E. Castles, George M. Berry, Prehn, F. H. Reismeyer and Schlecht going from St. Louis and J. E. D. Travis Jr. from St. Charles. Castles was appointed temporary chairman and Schlecht secretary. On the organization committee are Prehn and Berry of St. Louis, two representatives from Kansas City, Springfield and St. Joseph and a representative each from Cape Girardeau, Hannibal, Jefferson City, Joplin and Trenton. It is estimated that there are about 1500 new car dealers and 400 used car dealers who are eligible to join a State association as well as a large number of dealers in auto accessories.

A NEW SIX-PASSENGER SEdan model of the Studebaker President line, just announced, has two extra wheels carried in fender wheels. The trunk at the rear contains 22.5 cubic feet of luggage space. Among mechanical features are planar front suspension, automatic hill holder, rotary door locks, horizontal transmission and variable ratio steering.

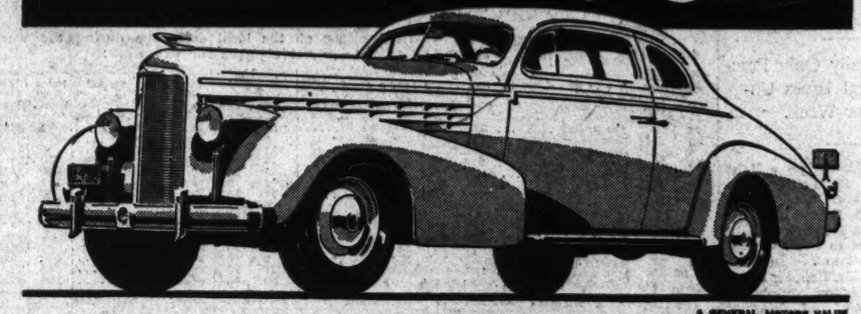
LA SALLE V-8

CADILLAC MOTOR



A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

It's easy to PAY more ...

but where can you GET more?

THERE ARE ELEVEN motor car manufacturers who have models costing more than a new LaSalle. Yes—it's easy to pay more—but where would you get more?

Where would you get more performance? More comfort? More safety? More style? More prestige?

Barring Cadillac, you'll look long and hard to find even LaSalle's equal, let alone its superior.

So—before you go above LaSalle in price—better look at LaSalle.

LaSalle is really a great and distinguished car in all ways—and its price is so low that it is a genuine bargain. Why not come in today for a demonstration?

P. S. Before you spend $1000 or more for your next motor car, by all means ... LOOK AT LASALLE!

FAKIR OF IPI STILL KEEPING BRITISH ON EDGE IN INDIA

Though Soldiers Rout Him From Sanctuaries Among Border Tribes, He Proves as Dangerous on Move.

AGAIN STIRRING UP RAIDS ON FRONTIER

Chain of Forts in Border Country Sought to End War That Has Lasted 90 Years.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

BOMBAY—Britain is at war along a rugged boundary of mountains on India's northwest frontier and its problem never has been solved.

The enemy is an estimated half million tribesmen with modern rifles. Hordes beyond India's borders join them—to raid, pillage and murder in the plains that lie below their hideaways.

From lonely outposts on stony hills, sunburned British soldiers try to keep the peace but every week or so a surprise attack by fanatical followers of some fakir demonstrates how shaky is Britain's control over this segment of her empire.

Britain still is at war with the Fakir of Ipi, a truculent old man who set the frontier ablaze more than a year ago.

Bombing planes and troops have driven the Fakir into a wandering search for sanctuary among the many tribes in this turbulent area. As soon as he settled down, the British send the tribe protecting him an ultimatum to expel him or guarantee that he will behave.

The tribes cannot give such a guarantee and they are afraid of the penalties that follow disobedience of an expulsion order. So each tribe in succession politely, and probably hesitantly, shuttles the Fakir elsewhere. But the Fakir is just as dangerous on the road, maybe more so.

Winter held him back for a while, but now the most turbulent of the semi-nomadic tribes are moving back into the mountains from the British-administered plains district where their cattle have been grazing. This puts them within the orbit of the Fakir and his exhortations.

Fakir but One of Many.

The Fakir of Ipi is not original. Every few years one of these frontier fanatics starts trouble. The Fakir found his chance to do so when the civil courts of Bannu in the administered area, ordered a young Hindu girl restored to her parents after a Moslem youth had lured her away for conversion to Islam.

The Fakir said this restoration was a British act against the Moslem religion and began a religious war, crying that Islam was in peril. The cry attracted a blaze of fervor that threatened a repetition of the scenes of 1930, when even Peshawar City was captured and looted by the tribes.

For a few days the Fakir played havoc with frontier villagers. Unsupported by some of the larger tribes, he did manage to get together the natives who always are ready for a fight.

A small British punitive expedition sent against him had the effect of driving him into the mountains, for a while and the Government of India stopped its military operations in January of 1937 in the expectation that the tribes would settle down. But the daring Fakir then led his raiders into the more populous regions.

Reinforced, the British troops and planes came again in a definite campaign in which an estimated 700 rebels and 183 British troops, mostly natives, were killed in action.

The campaign was successful in that it drove the Fakir far into the interior, away from his cave home, which was captured. But he remained at large, and most of this winter he carried on, inciting fanatical Madda Khel tribesmen to stir up trouble on the borders of Afghanistan. Finally the Madda Khel tribe received plain warning to oust the Fakir. And once more he is on his own.

Tribal Sympathy Expected.

Whether this ouster was wise remains to be seen. Many consider the Fakir less dangerous in a known refuge than as a fugitive able to stir up tribal sympathy because the Madda Khel tribe was forced to disobey its code of honor. This code enjoins upon the tribe the granting of asylum to all who seek it, friend or foe.

Thus the war is still on and British troops still are massed in Waziristan where the Fakir is still threatening to raise a widespread revolt. And the Government of India still seems unable to make up its mind as to how to solve the problem. British blunders and British changes of policy have been frequent in the Waziristan wars.

This frontier war has been going on 90 years and there probably is no part of the Empire where the British have so little influence or acquired so little knowledge of administration.

A few districts have been brought under control and now form part of the newly-made Northwest Frontier Province, but there remains a long strip of tribal territory under the nominal but very limited control of British political agents—actually a dangerous no-man's land where the King's writ certainly is not law.

For the last 15 years the British policy has been one of military control sufficient to hold the truculent tribes in check, together with the applications of "civilizing influence" to the wild mountain villages.

It was hoped this "civilizing influence" would gradually overcome the tribesman's ignorance, wean him from his barbaric cruelty and lessen the chronic economic stimulus which drives him to raid more prosperous villages for food.

The "civilizing" includes education, medical service, roads and improvements in agriculture, irrigation and forestry.

But the policy has run up against India's impoverished purse. Each new military incident has made heavy demands on India's funds, for it is India, not Great Britain, which foots the bill in the mountains.

Six Major Errors Charged.

The view is therefore growing that more tribal territory should be brought under more direct and complete domination, even though this probably would involve the permanent establishment of British troops in the higher tribal territory close to the Afghan Border.

Advocates of this plan blame the British for six major blunders:

1. Failure to systematically disarm the tribes, or to build a chain of military forts all over the tribal country to prevent raids.
2. Permitting isolation of tribes for so long that spasmodic attempts in recent years to interfere in their affairs have been jealously resisted.
3. Conducting punitive military operations until recent years, when they were improved as a means to complete pacification.
4. Allowing tribesmen to arm themselves to an alarming extent and only lately making any attempt to stop the influx of arms.
5. Treating the tribal country too long as a no-man's land, failure to take steps for a long time to bring about economic amelioration or advancement of the people.
6. Putting too great a reliance in the beginning on the tribal militia and the Khassadars.

On the other hand, today's unrest is based on these largely unchanged factors:

1. The extreme poverty of a people living in barren and rocky ground, where even the rainfall is insufficient. Famine is so common that the people almost are compelled to prey upon the villages.
2. Religious superstition and fanaticism. From medieval times these tribesmen have rebelled periodically at the bidding of some zealot.
3. Political forces at work among the tribesmen, situated as they are in a troubled part of Asia.
4. The mountainous nature of the country which engenders a warlike people, and prevents the appearance of any single chieftainship or organized state. This has led to tribal jurisdictions, jealousies and bickerings.

MORE THAN 600 DOGS ENTERED IN ANNUAL ALL-BREED SHOW

Mississippi Valley Kennel Club's 28th Competition to Open Saturday Morning.

The twenty-sixth annual all-breed dog show of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club will open for two days next Saturday morning at Municipal Auditorium. Entries for more than 600 dogs have been received from fanciers and breeders.

A silver cup and $5 cash prizes will be awarded winning competitors in all breeds, and cash awards and ribbons will be given as class prizes, with the amount of cash increasing in proportion to the number of entries in a class.

The owner of the dog adjudged best of all entries will receive the president's trophy, donated by John K. Wallace, president of the club. In competition, there will be six group classes, sporting, sporting hound, working, terrier, toy and non-sporting. Judging will be conducted in the forenoon, afternoon and evening each day, with special features and demonstrations arranged for each afternoon and evening.

The show will be open from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., with admission at 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

40 GIRLS RIDE 400 MILES IN BUS TO DANCE WITH 40 BOYS

Rockford (Ill.) College Young Women Guests of Kenyon on Commons at Gambier, O.

By the Associated Press.

GAMBIER, O., March 19.—Forty men of Kenyon College danced on the commons with 40 girls from Rockford (Ill.) College tonight as the climax of the mass blind-date experiment by this 114-year-old school.

Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, president of Kenyon since last spring, and former president of Rockford, said his purpose was two-fold—to provide a sister college for Kenyon and to build up the social environment for the 300 students at Kenyon, a non co-educational college. Hitherto only two dances a year have been held here.

Recruited by letter, the 40 game women traveled 400 miles on a chartered bus and arrived on the campus last night after a 13-hour trip. Pairings were made immediately by Dr. Paul Titus, economics professor, and the men escorted their partners to morning class. Miss Mary Mutschler, dean of women at Rockford, accompanied the girls.

Lecture at Webster College.

An illustrated lecture on "The Magic of Communication" will be given by Irvin Mattick of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. before the student body of Webster College in the college auditorium at 10:40 o'clock tomorrow morning.

CANADIAN DIVORCE REFORM BILL ON LINES OF BRITAIN'S

Measure Would Add Cruelty, Desertion and Insanity to Grounds for Legal Separation.

QUEBEC LIKELY TO OPPOSE IT

Catholic Members of Parliament Might Make Passage Difficult, Though in Minority.

From a Correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune.

TORONTO, March 19. — Wider grounds for divorce in Canada are provided in legislation brought before the Senate in Ottawa with the unanimous support of its divorce committee and patterned after the act sponsored by A. P. Herbert, author, humorist and member of Parliament, and passed by the British Parliament last summer.

Under the existing Canadian law, adultery by either party or unnatural offenses on the part of the husband are the only grounds for divorce. The new bill would add cruelty, desertion for three years and insanity and also establish for the first time that divorce could not take place within three years of the date of marriage.

It would be applicable to all Canadian divorce courts, but not to petitions to Parliament for divorce from Quebec and Prince Edward Island, provinces which lack such courts. All provinces in the Dominion have the right to grant divorces but Prince Edward Island has never established such judicial machinery. Nova Scotia obtained the right in 1738, New Brunswick in 1791, Ontario in 1930, Manitoba in 1870, Saskatchewan and Alberta in 1905 and British Columbia in 1350.

Exceptions Listed.

Under the three-year time restriction, there are exceptions covering hardship or depravity and misrepresentation or concealment and there is nothing in the new legislation to prohibit presentation, after lapse of the three-year period following marriage, of a divorce petition on matters which have occurred before its expiration.

The bill also deals with decrees of nullity, specifying the following grounds for such action:

That the marriage had not been consummated owing to willful refusal of the respondent.

That either party to the marriage was of unsound mind or a mental defective within the meaning of any statute in force in the province of the court concerned or subject to recurring fits of insanity or epilepsy.

That the respondent was at the time of marriage suffering from venereal disease of a communicable form.

That the respondent was at the time of marriage pregnant by some person other than the petitioner.

Quebec Opposition Expected.

Quebec's opposition is expected to be strongest, as nearly all the members from that province are Catholics, and this big bloc may make the bill's passage through the House of Commons very difficult, although considerably in the minority of total membership.

Strongest public support is being accorded the insanity clause, although the clause in the legislation stating the respondent is incurably of unsound mind and has been continuously under care and treatment for five years preceding the petition, is regarded by some as socially dangerous. A shorter period would lessen the possibility of lunatic children, they point out.

One of the chief factors weighing in favor of the bill's adoption by Parliament is its similarity to the British bill.

13 COMMANDMENTS FOR JAPANESE PEOPLE

Part of Program of 'Spiritual Conditioning' for War in China.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

TOKIO. — Thirteen commandments have been laid down for the Japanese people by the Central Federation of General Spiritual Mobilization as a code of proper conduct during war time.

"Spiritual mobilization" was instituted in the early months of the China fighting. It is designed to condition the people, mentally and spiritually, for the duties and sacrifices the Government believes necessary.

The "thirteen commandments" are:

1. "Every morning, give prayers to the imperial grand shrine and pray for the safety of the imperial family.
2. "Hoist the national flag properly on holidays.
3. "Worship the deities and endeavor for the harmony of the family.
4. "Live on a budget, pay cash, save regularly and buy national bonds.
5. "Wear simple clothes and avoid foreign-style hair dressing.
6. "Observe wedding, funeral and other home affairs simply but solemnly.
7. "Reform the bad custom of late to bed and late to rise.
8. "Economize on metal, wool, cotton, paper and fuel and utilize waste and other buried things.
9. "Endeavor to prevent fire and prepare for air raids.
10. "Rear the children to be strong in mind and body.
11. "Have bodily exercise every day to train the mind and body.
12. "Economize in drinking (rice wine).
13. "Be friendly to neighbors help one another."

British Public Apathetic To Air Raid Defense Plans

Survey of Area About Big War Industries Area of Manchester Show Towns Have Not Solved the Problem.

From the Manchester Guardian.

The Air-Raid Precautions Department of the Home Office was fully established in 1935, but it was not until 1937 that it was finally agreed that local authorities must prepare schemes and carry them out and that the Government shall bear most of the cost. Democracy works slowly in these matters. The schemes in 40 Lancashire towns and cities are at too early a stage to see if democracy promises to work well, and all schemes are dependent upon the extent to which the public responds in the provision of the trained volunteers necessary to make them workable.

Manchester, for example, needs about 2500 auxiliary firemen, to mention only one item; Liverpool aims at 20,000 air wardens; Bolton will require, on estimate, over 1200 trained and semi-trained men and women for the first-aid posts and stretcher parties, and the strength of the one existing organization in the ambulance district St. John is 600, with at least a third of that number likely to be called to the military or nursing services.

An elaborate system of reconnaissance and listening corps has been worked out to supply information of the approach of air raiders, but the most warning that any district is likely to get is seven to 10 minutes.

The air-raid posts for the volunteer and municipal services of factories have therefore to be planned close to where their personnel work or live, but the time is so short that not a minute must be wasted in passing out the warning immediately on its receipt at the local headquarters. The warning must be distinctive, and it must reach everybody, waking or sleeping. Bolton and Blackburn are the only Lancashire towns which report work on this first principle for any scheme.

Sirens to Give Warning.

It is for sirens, supplemented perhaps by cars passing along the main roads sounding some special alarm, to summon all air-raid services not already on duty to "take post" and to warn all others to take cover. No less important, it will be the signal for complete "black-out" instead of the state of permanent "semi-black-out." Arrangements to insure the "black-out" do not appear in the schedule of provisions to be made in general schemes.

With a scheme organized and personnel trained, there must be first-class control if raiders come. A survey of Lancashire cities and towns suggests that here lies a fairly general weakness.

In Lancaster, Manchester and Warrington the town clerk appears to be the co-ordinating or liaison officer with the Chief Constable to take charge of the machine if the need arises. It would seem wiser if the man who makes the machine has also to run it, and in six of the cities and county boroughs—Liverpool, Blackburn, Bootle, Burnley, Oldham and St. Helens—the Chief Constable appears to be both organizer and executive officer. In Bolton and in Bury it is the town clerk.

In 12 places no appointment at all has been made for control, and the majority of non-county boroughs place the responsibility on the Chief Constable of Lancashire, represented locally, of course, by a superintendent.

Attitude Seems Casual.

At the moment there is something rather casual about the whole attitude to the problem of control.

The making of brief, clear reports, verbally or in writing and under terrifying conditions, is no unskilled job, and the returning of short but complete, unmistakable, and prompt orders in response, is no less important. A great deal of training in this matter is given to officers in the services for good reasons. But only four towns in Lancashire have any communicable ideas on intelligence.

Another important headquarters section to which only Liverpool, Manchester, Bolton and Bootle appear to have given attention is that for gas detection. This must be a small section of first-class chemists and specialists who would be called upon to determine the type of gas met with when doubt existed or if a new or an unfamiliar gas were used. They would have to decide how to deal with it.

When the shortness of the warning is considered, it is clear that all large business houses, factories and works must provide protection for the employes who live more than a few minutes away from their employment and, in the interests of property and plant, provision for fire fighting and decontamination should be made. Both for fires and for decontamination immediate action is essential and broken roads or water mains might prevent any aid from the local services. Each undertaking should have a miniature of the town's scheme adapted to the smaller community.

Except at Bolton, where the Chamber of Commerce issued the instructions on factory schemes to all its members, Liverpool, where lectures were organized, and Manchester, where a committee has been formed, nothing has been done, with the exception of Ashton, where the Chamber of Trade members are prominent among the volunteers.

Public Proves Apathetic.

The instruction of the public is a rock upon which almost every authority seems to break with little effect, and, of course, authority blames the public as not merely apathetic but stupid.

Efforts to reach the public generally have taken the form of public meetings, but a whole series in different parts of Manchester is having an average attendance of no more than 50 or 60, and the attendance decreases. Similar reports come from other towns.

1938 FORD V·8

Now that National Used Car Exchange Week has reduced dealers' used car stocks, this is an opportune time to buy the new 1938 Ford V-8 you have been wanting. There are three excellent reasons for acting now.

First, the ability and desire of your Ford dealer to accept additional cars in trade—now.

Second, the fact that spring arrives officially this week, and it's a real thrill to meet it with a new car.

Third, the 1938 Ford V-8 itself. It is a great value at its present low price—and the value seems even greater when you learn how much equipment is included in the advertised price.

The big 85-hp. De Luxe Ford V-8 offers a new standard of luxury at a low price. The newly styled Standard Ford V-8, even lower in price, is available with either engine size. With the 60-hp. V-8 engine it is "Public Economy No. 1"—owners are reporting 22 to 27 miles per gallon.

You are invited to see your Ford dealer this week for an appraisal on your present car—and a chance to drive a new 1938 Ford V-8—the Quality Car in the Low-price Field.

823 LOCUST STREET SITE FOR 6-STORY SINGER BUILDING

Sewing Machine Co. Structure, First to Be Erected in Downtown Section Since 1929, to Be of Concrete and Steel.

By Berry Moore

Noteworthy as its initial building venture in St. Louis, the Singer Sewing Machine Co. yesterday took out a permit for the erection of a six-story structure at 823 Locust street.

Plans announced recently by the architects call for concrete and steel construction, with a stone facade in classical design. There will be display windows in the first and second floors. The cost given in the permit is $100,000, with completion scheduled for next autumn. Klipstein and Rathman are the architects.

A five-story building, which formerly stood on the 25x111-foot lot, was razed by the Singer Co. The building was occupied by the I. Miller Shop.

The Singer company, represented by Arthur S. Martin & Son recently acquired the site from Mrs. Camilla S. W. Burrows of Davenport, Ia., a client of Cornet & Zeibig, Inc.

In order to even out the site, the Singer Company has purchased 4½

WYDOWN-DE MUNN CORNER ACQUIRED FOR RESIDENCE

A wedge-shaped lot at the southwest corner of Wydown boulevard and DeMun avenue, owned by the Kansas City Life Insurance Co., has been purchased by an undisclosed client of Cornet & Zeibig, Inc. Plans are being made for a handsome residence for the site, which comprises approximately an acre of ground, with a frontage on Wydown of 181 feet and on DeMun of 173 feet.

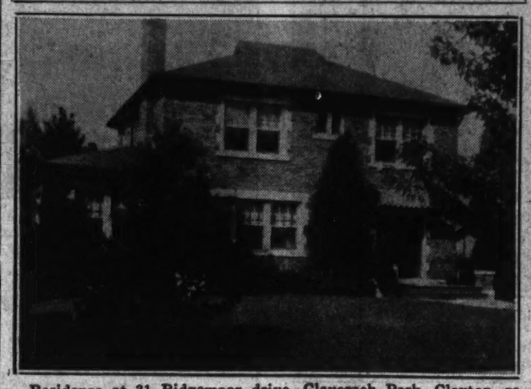
Cornet & Zeibig acted for the purchaser in the negotiations. The Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Real Estate Co. represented the insurance company.

Wydown boulevard, extending from Skinker boulevard in the city to Hanley road in Clayton, is a succession of handsome residences.

Sale in Webster Groves.

The residence at 429 Somerset avenue, Webster Groves, has been acquired by Walter B. Donnell. It consists of nine rooms and two baths. The Webster Groves Trust Co. and Mary Potter Love, Inc., jointly handled the transaction.

Home in County Sold



Residence at 31 Ridgemoor drive, Claverach Park, Clayton, recently acquired by Robert W. May, general manager of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana in the St. Louis district. The Slonim Realty Co. represented the purchaser, the Chauncey P. Heath Co., the seller.

INDUSTRIAL CONCERN BUYS BUILDING GROUP

United Wood Heel Co. Acquires Half Block on Seventh Between Russell and Allen.

The United Wood Heel Co. has acquired the group of buildings and vacant ground formerly occupied by the Claes & Lehnbeuter Mfg. Co., cabinet makers, on the east side of Seventh boulevard, between Russell boulevard and Allen avenue. Comprising approximately a half block, the site has a frontage on Seventh of 304½ feet, with a depth on both Russell and Allen of 131½ feet.

The improvements consist of a modern two-story daylight brick factory, 132 by 131½ feet, containing 32,000 square feet of floor space, and three smaller subsidiary buildings, with a total of 5000 square feet. Equipment includes sprinkler systems and a central heating plant, in the main building. There is a large freight elevator in the main building.

The building group occupies only part of the site, thus leaving a large amount of yard space available for the storage of lumber and for other purposes.

The purchase includes all the machinery, equipment and material on hand, fixtures and office furniture of the buildings.

The real estate was owned by the Sylvester Realty Co., a holding company of a former officer of the Claes & Lehnbeuter Co., which owned the machinery, equipment, etc.

The United Wood Heel Co. now occupies the entire third floor, or approximately 33,000 square feet, of the building at 2705 Olive street. Louis D. Dozier Jr. is president and treasurer, and Justin P. Quirk, vice-president and secretary, of the corporation.

Griffith & Groves, real estate agents, handled the negotiations for the property.

MORTGAGE BANKERS SEE NO BUILDING BOOM

Cite High Construction Costs and Current Decline in Business Activity.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19.—A majority of the mortgage bankers polled by the Mortgage Bankers Association of America believe the new construction volume this year would be smaller than in 1937, a survey showed today.

Seventy-one per cent of the bankers participating in the survey expressed belief that residential construction would decline, despite somewhat lower building costs and increased Government activity in the field. Seventy-two per cent expected a decline in the total new building volume.

A. D. Fraser, president of the association, said a decline in total new building was least expected in the Middle West, where 62 per cent of the bankers expect a lower volume. In the South, 72 per cent of the bankers anticipate a decline; in the East the majority is 77 per cent; in the Far West and mountain states, 88 per cent.

Fraser said principal reasons given were construction costs and the current decline in business activity. Financing is not a factor because construction money is cheap and readily available, both private and Government funds.

He said 88 per cent of the members replying in the survey declared building costs were holding back new construction. This opinion was strongest in the Far West and mountain states. Ninety per cent of the members in the South, 80 per cent in the East and 86 per cent in the Middle West said this was the principal deterrent factor.

AEOLIAN CO. OF MO. TO OPEN DISPLAY ROOM ON LOCUST ST.

The Aeolian Co. of Missouri has leased the west store of the Town Club Building at 1124 Locust street. It will be used as a sales and display room for the Bendix division of the Aeolian Co., which has its main store at 1124 Olive street.

The Town Club Building is owned by the Sayman Estate, of which the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. is executor, and which arranged the lease.

The National Typewriter Co. recently acquired a lease of the three-story building at 1125 Locust street for a sales and display room, to be operated in connection with the concern's main offices and warehouse. Arthur S. Martin & Son arranged this lease.

FRED A. FREY LOAN SPECIALIST WITH METROPOLITAN ST. LOUIS

Fred A. Frey, formerly assistant escrow officer of the Title Insurance Corporation of St. Louis, has become connected with the Metropolitan St. Louis Co. He will handle local real estate loans in his new position, for which 12 years of service with the title company has equipped him.

The Metropolitan company is one of the largest lending concerns in the local real estate field, financing business and industrial, as well as residential and apartment properties.

H. A. & A. T. O'ROURKE OPEN COUNTY OFFICE IN CLAYTON

H. A. O'Rourke, president of the H. A. O'Rourke Real Estate Co., Inc., and his son A. T. O'Rourke will open a county office at 14 South Central avenue in Clayton. The new office, wnich will be operated under the name of the H. A. and A. T. O'Rourke Realty Co., will conduct a general real estate brokerage business, handling sales, exchanges, loans, rental and insurance.

A. T. O'Rourke, vice-president and former salesmanager of the H. A. O'Rourke Co., with offices at 5471 Gravois avenue, will have entire management of the new company, which will deal exclusively in West End and county real estate.

TWO APARTMENTS IN MOORLANDS ADDITION BOUGHT

Newly-Built 15-Unit Structures at 7532-36 York Drive and at 793-05 Westwood Acquired by Jack Adler.

Involving a reported cost for construction of $250,000, two newly-built 15-unit apartment buildings in Moorlands Addition, Clayton, have been acquired by Jack Adler, president of the Metals Products Co. The price paid in the present transaction was not revealed. Ray R. Dolan, president of the John P. Dolan Realty Co., negotiated the deal.

Located at 7532-36 York drive and at 703-05 Westwood drive, the buildings are among the most attractive, recently completed in this area. Each comprises three stories exclusive of basement and is of semi-fireproof construction.

Both buildings are of the same general design with center courts. There has been a liberal use of glass brick in the construction, which gives added light in the halls and entrance ways and which tends to enhance the appearance of the building.

Indirect Lighting.

Each building has three four-room, nine five-room and three six-room apartments, with living room and dining room in pastel shades. Indirect lighting is an attractive feature. Ample closet space is provided in each suite. There are tiled

SHRINKAGE AT NEW YORK LOWERS BUILDING TOTAL

Permit Values Outside Metropolis Actually Larger in February Than in Either of Two Preceding Months.

Volume of building permits dropped heavily during February from the enlarged January and December totals. The decline was due entirely to the precipitous fall in permits in New York, which followed the adoption of a new building code in that city late in January. Permit values outside the metropolis were actually larger in February than in either of the two preceding months.

Permits issued at 215 cities of the United States during February called for an estimated expenditure of $54,065,213, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. This was the smallest amount reported for any month since February, 1936, and contrasted with $146,866,125 in January, a decrease of 63.2 per cent, while 37.0 per cent under the February, 1937, figure of $85,829,336.

New York permits shrank to the lowest level since February, 1935. The February total was equal to only $8,085,752, as against $106,072,040 in January and $30,606,510 in February last year, representing respective declines of 94.3 and 80.1 per cent.

Permits Outside New York.

Outside of New York permits rose from $40,794,085 during January to $47,979,461 in February, giving an increase of 17.6 per cent. Compared with the corresponding 1937 figure of $55,222,826, however, there was a loss of 13.1 per cent.

Comparisons by groups between February and January, as well as between February this year and last, revealed advances and declines evenly divided at four each. The largest drop from a year ago, of course, was registered by the Middle Atlantic states, followed by the East Central, Mountain and New England sections. The biggest gain was made by the South Atlantic group, with moderate increases reported in the South Central, Pacific and West Central regions.

Group totals of building permit values for 215 cities for February this year and last, together with percentage changes, are shown in the following table:

Groups.	February, 1938.	February, 1937.
New England	$ 3,145,987	$ 3,809,093
Middle Atlantic	11,368,962	37,930,270
South Atlantic	10,100,621	8,498,705
East Central	6,988,329	14,132,506
South Central	7,825,802	7,121,370
West Central	3,139,913	2,979,629
Mountain	834,315	1,414,557
Pacific	10,661,304	9,943,206
Total U. S.	$54,065,213	$85,829,336

Two Months' Gains.

For the two months of the current year total permit valuations for the 215 cities aggregated $200,931,338, as compared with $154,341,654, or an increase of 30.2 per cent. Excluding New York, however, contemplated building expenditures were about one-fifth below the like two months of 1937.

The two months' record of building permit values by geographical groups for 1938 and 1937, for the 215 cities, as compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., is given herewith:

Groups.	Two Months. 1938.	1937.
New England	$ 5,356,064	$ 13,961,134

baths, with showers and dressing tables with extra mirrors.

The six-room apartments have two baths, with stall showers. Kitchens are equipped with the latest type electric refrigerator and electric stoves.

The first floors and foundations of the building are of rock and concrete. The basements include a 22-car garage, with entrance doors operated with electric control. The building on Westwood drive occupies a lot 140x113 feet and that on York drive, a lot 130x110 feet.

The building on York drive was sold for the account of Joseph and Ann Sherman and that on Westwood drive for Sam Brown and Sam Rosen.

Construction of both buildings was financed by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co.

No Dearth of Buyers.

Apparently there is no dearth of buyers for new buildings of this type in Moorlands Addition, as evidenced by negotiations pending and offers reported by real estate agencies.

Apartment construction is rapidly absorbing the remaining available ground in this addition, which is regarded as particularly attractive for buildings of this type by virtue of its location. Extending from Wydown boulevard to Clayton road and from Glenridge drive to Westwood drive, it is accessible for a single fare both by the Clayton street car line, operated in conjunction with the University car line, and by bus which has its terminus at Wydown and Westwood.

The Pilgrim Realty Co. is negotiating with the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co. for a loan for a 15-unit apartment building, designed for a site, 130x110 feet, on the north side of Byron place, between Westwood and Glenridge drives.

Negotiations have been concluded through the Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co. for an 18-unit apartment building, but details are withheld in this instance pending execution of final papers.

Offers have been submitted for a 30-unit apartment building at 6655 Berthold avenue and for a 24 unit apartment building at 6121 Southwood avenue, both owned by Lichtenstein Estates, Inc. The Berthold building, which is just south of and overlooking Forest Park, was acquired several years ago by its present owner from the Prudential Insurance Co., through Franciscus-Maginn, Inc. The Southweed building was also acquired from bondholders. Both buildings are 100 per cent occupied.

inches of ground from the Ruff estate, Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., trustee, which owns the building at the northeast corner of Ninth and Locust streets, and four and one-half inches of ground from the Missouri Baptist Orphans Home, which owns the property on the east. Quitclaim deeds were executed in both instances.

The new building will be occupied by the Singer Company as its main store and offices. The concern has 15 or more stores and repair shops in the city and its suburbs, including the East Side cities. With headquarters in New York, it has stores or branches in all large cities of the United States and Europe.

The Singer project is conspicuous as the first of its type to materialize in the downtown district since 1929.

There have been a number of inquiries by prospective lessees for the three-story building at the northeast corner of Ninth and Locust streets, owned by the Ruf estate. Daly & Craib, New York Stock Exchange house, recently dissolved, formerly occupied the building under a 15-year lease executed in October, 1936. It has a frontage on Locust of 27½ feet and on Ninth of 111 feet.

The Ruf estate also owns the three-story building, 25 by 104½ feet, occupied by Peck & Peck, a women's apparel shop, at 817 Locust street, at the northwest corner of the north and south alley of this block.

Leases Store on North Ninth.

Joseph Raia has leased a store room in the building at 505 North Ninth street for a barber shop. The entire ground floor of this building is now occupied under leases negotiated by the Briett & Naumer Realty Co. for the account of Hellrung & Grimm House Furnishing Co.

THE 1938

"HILL-TOP Home"

—SCHILLER-BUILT—

Located in beautiful Greenbriar Country Club grounds, Kirkwood. This charming four-bedroom house commands an excellent view overlooking the rolling hills of the Greenbriar golf course. Built with utmost precision and close attention to detail as well as construction—this Early American Colonial represents perfection in comfort and design.

This hill-top Colonial joins a group of fifty other attractive homes which already are in the club grounds. While enjoying the rugged beauty of the countryside, the "Hill-Top" and its companions have Kirkwood accredited schools, Kirkwood police and fire protection, shopping center, and ten-cent transportation to downtown.

The "Hill-Top," which is remarkably priced and amply financed, is offered to discriminating St. Louis as proof that ownership is less expensive than rent.

Drive to Lindbergh and Big Bend Road, Kirkwood, and follow the markers.

SUBURBAN PROPERTY FOR SALE—Kirkwood

YOU HAVEN'T LIVED
UNTIL YOU'VE LIVED IN KIRKWOOD

City of Homes—No Soot—No Dirt—No Grime. Schools you will be proud to send your children to; a public library second to none in the county; our own light and water plants and best of all a city administered by a mayor and councilmen who during their 8 years' tenure in office have reduced light rates as much as 50%; water rates as much as 31%; the general tax rate 14½%; two new sewage disposal plants, valued at $92,647.00, have been built without cost to taxpayers. During this time $50,000.00 of outstanding City of Kirkwood bonds have been purchased on the open market prior to their maturity to save interest rates.

The City is now engaged in completing a public sewage system which will cost $1,141,579.46—BUT THE COST TO THE TAXPAYERS OF KIRKWOOD WILL ONLY BE $150,000.00. Wouldn't you like to live in a community such as this. Come out to Kirkwood today. You may come for just the ride, but you will want to stay for a lifetime. WHAT IS CHARM?

We can't describe it, but you'll know what it is the minute you step into this beautiful little colonial; it begins to get you when you spot real log burning fireplace; it grows as you see the very large sunroom paneled in knotty pine, the kitchen with its bay window breakfast nook; its pine paneled walls, but when you've seen it all with its air conditioned gas fired plant, lot 65x115, and know the price of $6500 you'll know why we say hurry, see 7489 Rupert.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

About the cost of funerals

IN OUR protest against over-expenditures for funerals we are not advocating cheapness.

Far from it. Intrinsic worth of casket is insisted upon. The price necessarily varies with the material and the workmanship, but in our practice these elements are true to representation throughout.

For this reason we invite critical inspection of our caskets. Each is by a responsible maker and, whether simple or elaborate, is the best obtainable at the price. Even those priced the least are true in every detail. Quantity purchases, however, enable us to compete with less worthy offerings.

The casket, however, is only part of the funeral cost. There are to be added: interest on building investment, taxes, insurance, upkeep, organization, cortege, and incidentals. As nearly as possible these items are assembled in a fixed sum constituting the operating costs, an equitable portion of which is included in the price for each funeral.

Over-expenditures may be avoided by keeping the funeral expenses reasonably in accord with one's station in life, with our assurance in every instance of intrinsic worth of casket and excellence of service.

To arrange for a funeral in advance—to select the casket, to decide on the kind of vault, to determine on the items of service and on the all-inclusive cost—is the logical thing to do.

The response to the Robert J. Ambruster Pre-Arranged Funeral Plan fully justifies the effort we are making to spare the survivors from the distress and over-expenditures of last moment transactions.

Interviews may be made by appointment.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN FOR A PERMANENT POSITION

My company has authorized me to employ 5 men immediately who live in St. Louis and vicinity, test them out for several days while in training without any expense or cost whatsoever to these men and place them immediately in our St. Louis branch on a permanent basis with liberal participation in the profits with no investment.

Steadiness and good character needed—not ability to talk, or a clientele or any previous experience; we are not advertising for salesmen—because our method of putting the prospects into the market is so unusual that it must be taught especially—but it is so simple to learn that no time need be lost in getting started; while getting started men of average ability must be willing to get along on reasonable weekly earnings; you learn from practical men earning substantial incomes every week.

We do not require men with sales experience because this work is so different from sales jobs as interpreted by the great majority of men; however, to be accepted you must be willing to work hard and study to qualify for the larger pay schedules. Apply to personnel manager, Suite 512, Paul Brown Bldg., at 9th and Olive sts., St. Louis, on Monday from 9:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m. only.

A LIVABLE INCOME

Must be enjoyed in order to do justice to yourself, your family and the company you represent.

We know salesmen must be kept in a selling frame of mind, free of financial worries, or they would spend most of their time with us looking for another job.

We know a salesman must be equipped with the proper tools in order to produce.

We need you if you need us, and you have an alert mind, a knack of meeting people and can talk.

We worry more about our salesmen than we do about our business.

YOU WILL RECEIVE A LIVABLE INCOME AT ONCE If you are the man we want.

Call Mr. Smith for an appointment Monday, 9 to 5:30 p. m.

FRANKLIN 1000

Central western company rated AAA-1, manufacturing high class indoor and outdoor metal advertising signs and merchandise displays, has opening in St. Louis territory for salesmen with advertising experience and successful sales record. Will consider only applicants willing to work hard to develop annual business that will yield a steady income, and whose affairs are such as to enable them to meet their financial obligations on moderate earnings over a considerable period of time.

Give complete outline of experience, references, present employment, earnings in first letter; personal interview will be arranged with all correspondence treated strictly confidential. Box J-60, Post-Dispatch.

ATTENTION MEN!

Several who can meet the public and assist our dealers in promoting a new product that has already met with public acceptance.

This is a permanent position for the men selected and offers advancement for the future.

Selling experience helpful but not essential, as we will train these men for their part in this work and assist them in increasing their compensation as the season advances.

Interviews granted only 9 a. m. to 12 noon, Monday, March 21.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TULSA, Ok., March 19.—Sturdy Palangio evaded Porky Levine's defense for a split second late tonight and that one second was enough to give the hard-driving St. Louis Flyers a 1 to 0 overtime victory over the Tulsa Ice Oilers and put Johnny MacKinnon's Minneapolitans in the finals of the American Hockey Association playoffs.

The Minneapolis will be the Flyers' opponent in the final four-game series which opens Sunday night here at the Arena in St. Louis. The Oilers reached the finals by defeating Wichita, 5-2, tonight at Wichita. The second game of the final series will be played at St. Louis Tuesday, then the teams go north to finish the set.

The Oilers, needing but a tie to enter the league's final series, played defensive hockey 100 per cent, but the driving tactics employed by the MacKinnonmen were too much.

Levine, veteran Tulsa goal tender, was one of the game's outstanding performers despite Palangio's final drive after three minutes of the first overtime.

Just a few seconds before Pete Reset Tulsa's hopes, Fido Purpur had an open set-up shot at Levine but the diminutive visiting winger couldn't produce. Palangio had opened the extra minutes with a stumbling shot from 20 feet out which Porky blocked with plenty of effort.

Standouts were numerous on each team. Dapper Billy Hudson and the slippery Purpur, both of whom had assists on Palangio's tally, played nicely on the offensive. Leo Carbol and Joe Matte were magnificent at the blue line and Stopper Nelson didn't have many difficult jobs to perform.

Levine Was Oiler Star.

Levine was most of the show for the Ice Oilers. The rotund goalie looked more like a circus trickster with his helter-skelter efforts. It was a shame for him to have to bow to defeat but fate wouldn't protect the lacings.

The fans were unusually quiet most of the game, hoping the chips would fall lucky for Tulsa. Referee Bob Trapp and Hubert Davidson gave both squads stern advice on obeying rules at the beginning and their warnings proved helpful for two periods. The players forgot about the referee's verbal exercise in the last canto, however, and the play was hectic with hard falls prevailing frequently.

Les Whittles, aggressive Tulsa wing, attempted to slip in an extra check on Matte just as the final bell rang before the overtime began but Arbiter Trapp eyed the situation and Les spent two minutes of extra period cooling off.

The Flyers were happily discussing the contest in their dressing room after the game. Although the loud-speaker gave Hudson credit for the goal it didn't make any difference to Palangio, who was trading powerful but friendly slaps with his teammates.

It was a different story with the Oilers, who went down in a scintillating piece of defense maneuvers. Sonny Boy Wakeford and Lloyd Gross, two fellows who had been instrumental in a late season Oiler rally, were sorrowfully undressing along with their fellow players.

Radley Saves the Day.

St. Louis obtained its first real break of the contest after ten minutes of the second period when Joe Matte and Bill Kendall caught the Tulsa defense off guard after Purpur had been sent to the TULSA, Ok., March 19.—Sturdy Pete Palangio evaded Porky Levine's defense for a split second late tonight and that one second was enough to give the hard-driving St. Louis Flyers a 1 to 0 overtime victory over the Tulsa Ice Oilers and put Johnny MacKinnon's Missourians in the finals of the American Hockey Association playoffs.

Minneapolis will be the Flyers' opponent in the final four-game series which opens Sunday night at the Arena in St. Louis. The Oilers reached the finals by defeating Wichita, 5-2, tonight at Wichita. The second game of the final series will be played at St. Louis Tuesday, then the teams go north to finish the set.

The Oilers, needing but a tie to enter the league's final series, played defensive hockey 100 per cent, but the driving tactics employed by the MacKinnonmen were not much.

Levine, veteran Tulsa goal tender, was one of the game's outstanding performers despite Palangio's final drive after three minutes of the first overtime.

Just a few seconds before Pete beat Tulsa's hopes, Fido Purpur missed an open set-up shot at Levine but the diminutive visiting winger couldn't produce. Palangio had entered the extra minutes with a crushing shot from 20 feet out which Porky blocked with plenty of effort.

Standouts were numerous on each team. Dapper Billy Hudson and the slippery Purpur, both of whom had assists on Palangio's tally, played nicely on the offensive. Leo Marbol and Joe Matte were magnificent at the blue line and Stopper Nelson didn't have many difficult jumps to perform.

Levine Was Oiler Star.

Levine was most of the show for the Ice Oilers. The rotund goalie looked more like a circus trickster with his helter-skelter efforts. It was a shame for him to have to bow to defeat but fate wouldn't protect his lacings.

The fans were unusually quiet most of the game, hoping the chips would fall lucky for Tulsa. Referees Bob Trapp and Hubert Davidson gave both squads stern advice on obeying rules at the beginning and their warnings proved helpful for two periods. The players forgot about the referee's verbal exercise in the last canto, however, and the way was hectic with hard falls prevailing frequently.

Les Whittles, aggressive Tulsa wing, attempted to slip in an extra shot on Matte just as the final gong rang before the overtime began but Arbiter Trapp eyed the situation and Les spent two minutes of the extra period cooling off.

The Flyers were happily discussing the contest in their dressing room after the game. Although the loud-speaker gave Hudson credit for the goal it didn't make any difference to Palangio, who was trading powerful but friendly slaps with his teammates.

It was a different story with the Oilers, who went down in a scintillating piece of defense maneuvers. Sonny Boy Wakeford and Floyd Gross, two fellows who had been instrumental in a late season Oiler rally, were sorrowfully undressing along with their fellow players.

Radley Saves the Day.

St. Louis obtained its first real break of the contest after ten minutes of the second period when Joe Matte and Bill Kendall caught the Tulsa defense off guard after Fido Purpur had been sent to the

The Old Sarge's Slogan.

SAN ANTONIO, March 19.

IF the Browns of 1938 show us something, it will be because of Manager Gabby Street's spring training slogan: "We must have speed, pep and condition at all hazards."

"Speed will get you started, enthusiasm will make you keep trying and condition will help you carry on. Without these three no baseball player is capable of delivering 100 per cent." That's the Street philosophy.

"So far my players have worked with me fine." Gabby continued. "And you'll see that they are in there trying. They'll have that extra step needed to beat out the throw or pick a fly off the outfield fence."

But even trying and perseverance can't make Oscar Melillo hit like Joe Medwick, it was suggested.

"No, but it will help him do the best with what nature gave him — and that's all we can ask of anybody," Gabby commented. "I know we haven't an all-star outfit. But I think we have enough high rank men to enable us to put up quite a fight—if the boys will keep fighting.

"It's a great temptation to weaken when a losing streak continues. After a while even the most enthusiastic players become affected. But the better the team's physical condition, the harder it is for it to reach the quitting point.

"And for that reason I'm driving my boys hard now. I expect they'll thank me for it, later."

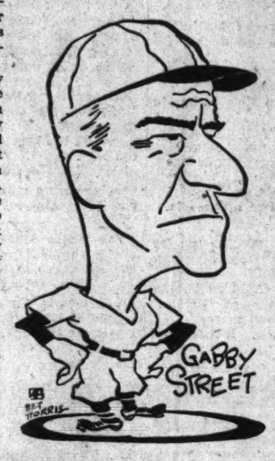
The Keystone Battle.

A BALL PLAYER'S CLIMB to the top is no primrose path. Only rarely is there a DiMaggio to spring from the minors to the peak of major league fame and fortune in a year.

Often the struggle results in more heartaches than successes.



Take the case of the young men of the Browns' roster now battling for an infield post. There are nine of them, not counting Melillo and two of these are fixtures — McQuinn at first and Clift at third. That leaves seven men for two jobs at the keystone — second base and shortstop — and for a utility berth. At least three of the youngsters trying to make the grade will be turned back again—as some of them have been turned back before.

Several of the 44 players here have been striving for years to get a toehold on a major league job, only to be sent back anually.

And some of them are likely to make the sad return journey once again.

San Antonio papers, looking to the future of the local club—a Browns' property—already are figuring that when Street trims to the league limit of 23 players, the following will be found with the San Antonio team: Sam Harshany, catcher; Sig Gryska, shortstop; Mel Mazzera, outfielder; Les Tietje, pitcher; Harry Kimberlin, pitcher; Ollie Bejma, John Barkley, infielders; Bill Miller and Bob Muncrief, pitchers.

If that prediction comes true then the Browns' infield will have the following survivors—McQuinn, Carey, Hughes, Heffner, Kress and Clift.

And that apparently is just about what it will simmer down to.

FENSKE RUNS FASTEST INDOOR MILE IN MIDWEST

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 19. — Charles (Chuck) Fenske, Wisconsin's great distance star, tonight raced the fastest indoor mile in Mid-Western track and field history—4 minutes, 8.9 seconds—in the feature event of the tenth annual Armour Tech relay games.

Fenske, who won the Big Ten title with a 4:11.1 performance last week, set out to beat 4:10 tonight in preparation for his meeting with master miler Glenn Cunningham next week in the Chicago relays, and did it with astonishing ease.

Paced through the first half-mile by his teammate, Walter Mehl, the bespectacled Badger star then moved out on his own, winning by about 70 yards. The other two starters in the driverstity division of the event, Ernest Klann of Kansas University, and Charles Mitchell of Kansas State College, never were contenders.

Fenske followed Mehl through a 61-second first quarter, and took the lead after a 2:04.5 half-mile. He sped past the three-quarters post in 3:06.8, and finished with a fine 62.1 quarter, slowing up a trifle at the finish. His spectacular mark wiped out the meet record of 4:14.1, established by Henry Brocksmith of Indiana in 1932.

His 4:11.1 last week was the fastest previous mile indoors in Chicago.

BROWNS WIN FROM TULSA IN ELEVENTH INNING, 4-3

By John E. Wray
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 19.—That vaunted punch of Gabby Street's Browns faded away to bush league proportions today. The team which yesterday rolled up 20 hits for 32 bases was forced to 11 innings to win from the Tulsa Oilers, in the second game of their series here today. Tommy Heath's long fly with Barkley on third base brought in the tally that gave the Browns a 4-3 victory.

The game seemed all wrapped up for the St. Louisans in the regulation time, with the score resting at 3 to 2 in the Mound Cityans' favor. Then Bill Miller, the third pitcher of the day, became wilder than the gentleman from Borneo and walked three batters in succession. After his third pass, Gabby Street sent him to the showers and Trotter was sent in as a forlorn hope. He was far from being forlorn. The next batter hit into a double play which let the tying run in, but that was no fault of Trotter's.

The reduced efficiency of the Browns' batting was evident in the final half of the ninth. Trotter, first up, singled, but Mills, Heath and Valci failed to advance him.

Two Walks Pave Way.

Two walks, issued to Barkley and Silber, a pinch-hitter, paved the way for the finale, which saw Heath do his stuff.

The Browns, although garnering only nine hits, in 11 innings, opened the game as though another slaughter were in prospect. With Mills and Sullivan out, McQuinn went all the way to second base on Jansco's wild throw. Bell punched out a home run over the left field fence, where the sign reads "356 feet" and two runs were in. Kress, next up, rapped a savage double and fans were all set for an annihilation.

It never came. From that point, the Tulsa right-hander, Twardy, settled down and held the enemy to one hit in the next two rounds. The Browns added another tally on three singles off Pitcher Zahn in the fourth.

Then the St. Louis attack slowed to a whisper despite numerous bases on balls by the opposition throwers.

Walks Four, Fans Three.

Gabby Street started big Jim Weaver against the Oilers. He went well and had the enemy swinging and missing in the first two innings. Then he lost control.

Four walks resulted in a run without the enemy making a hit. Weaver, however, showed he still has his stuff by fanning three batters in his time on the mound.

Bartlesville Signs Pugh.

BARTLESVILLE, Ok., March 19.—Peter Mitchell, owner of the Bartlesville club of the Western Association, said today he had signed Earl Pugh, recommended by scouts as the best semi-pro infielder in Iowa, as a third baseman. He said Pugh would report here April 12.

First Link in the Cardinal Chain

CHARLEY BARRETT, as chief scout of the St. Louis National League club, is the actual head of the vast talent-seeking organization which passes upon the thousands of applicants for baseball jobs. Barrett was photographed as he watched the young Redbirds perform at the Winter Haven, Florida, "school" camp of the Cardinals. If Barrett puts his "okay" on a boy he is sent to one of the St. Louis club's minor league teams, which form the chain system.

Frankie Frisch, in Radio Talk, Shies From Pennant Predictions

Frank Frisch, manager of the Cardinals, is enthusiastic over the way Stuart Martin is stuffing himself to add weight to his slender frame, over the showing of Pitcher Max Lanier, Shortstop Don Gutteridge and Third-Baseman Art Garibaldi, he told J. Roy Stockton of the Post-Dispatch sports staff over Radio Station KSD in an interview from St. Petersburg, Fla., yesterday.

He would not predict a pennant for the club, however, and seemed to think that flag talk at this stage of the game is useless.

"Everybody you talk with," said Frank, "talks pennant, pennant, pennant, until I think they get the players too pennant-minded. I like to go out opening day, try to win that game, then win the next, etc. That's the way I have found that you usually win pennants."

In response to a question as to whether he had read the story in the Saturday Evening Post calling the National League just another minor league, he said:

"I thought that was too silly to talk about. There are good players in the American League and in the National League. Of course, the Yankees are the outstanding team."

Stockton asked Frisch if he didn't think that the story would react to the benefit of the National Leaguers and reminded Frank that the story had been hung in the Cardinal's dressing room.

"Some feeling might be engendered by it," he said.

Praises Stuart Martin.

Frisch took occasion to pay tribute to Stuart Martin, young second baseman who apparently is showing up very well this spring after having been retarded by illness for the past two seasons.

"I don't claim much credit for things," Frisch laughed, "but I told Jimmy Brown to take care of Martin and see that he eats plenty. I understand Stuart is eating steaks, lamb chops and drinking plenty of milk. He reported to me today that he weighs 160 pounds. That's fine.

"I have liked the spirit of the club here. Gutteridge has been playing good ball at shortstop and Garibaldi has shown up well at third base. The team is in fine physical condition and we have had no trouble at all. The players have all gone about their conditioning exercises without a complaint.

"They have been playing these exhibition games to win. Some people tell me that exhibition games don't mean anything, but I say that you should plan to win no matter what kind of a game it is.

"Our outfield has looked very good, but I have been worried somewhat about our infield. We have made mistakes and errors, but I think they'll soon overcome those weaknesses."

Had Eye on Lanier.

Stockton then asked Frisch if he was not pleased with Lanier and Frisch replied:

"I've had my eye on him for more than a year. I batted against him when he was with Columbus. He has a fine fast ball and a good overhand curve. I'm not predicting he'll win 20 games or anything like that, but I like his spirit and think he has possibilities."

Frisch also said that Brooklyn and Cincinnati had improved their clubs and might threaten the first divison monopoly of the Cardinals, Pittsburgh, the Cubs and the Giants. The last named three teams, of course, are the ones Frisch picked to fight it out with the Cardinals for the National League championship.

Joe Medwick, slugging Cardinal outfielder, was also on the program, arranged by Frank Eschen, program director of the station. Joe, who won the National League batting championship with .374 last year, said that while it was his ambition to hit .400 he would rather that the Cardinals win than that he be the big hero of the 1938 season.

ST. LOUIS SKEET CLUB TO OPPOSE COLUMBIA IN TELEGRAPH MATCH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 19. — Members of the Columbia Gun Club here have accepted a challenge of the St. Louis Skeet and Trap Club to a telegraphic contest to be fired on home courses tomorrow.

The St. Louisans will be led by Ted Dahlke, State champion, while Columbia's leader will be Blakemore, runner-up to Dahlke in the State shoot here last fall. The match will be a 50-bird affair, with scores wired by each team to the other.

MOSCONI WINS, GOES INTO THREE-WAY TIE FOR BILLIARD LEAD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Willie Mosconi threw the world's pocket billiards championships into a three-way tie for the lead tonight by defeating Andrew Ponzi, a fellow Philadelphian, 125 to 118, in the last regularly scheduled game of the tournament.

Mosconi's triumph, his ninth in 11 starts, deadlocked him with Ponzi and Jimmy Caras of Wilmington, Del. As a result, the three players will start a round-robin tomorrow to determine the champion.

Mosconi's victory was scored in 28 innings as he handed Ponzi his second straight setback after the ex-champion had won his first nine matches.

Mosconi, who was beaten by Caras last night, took the lead early in the match and then held on to win. His best run was 36, while Ponzi ran 38.

YIELDS ONLY TWO HITS IN FIVE INNINGS ON THE HILL

Macon, With Sore Arm, Makes Poor Showing but McGee Quells Late Rally; Homer for Terry Moore.

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 19.—Frankie Frisch's Cardinals, playing for victory as though in the middle of a championship race, took a 2-to-1 lead in their Grapefruit League series with the powerful New York Yankees this afternoon by taking the third game, 9 to 7.

Discarding the usual spring training practice of letting the pitchers weather any storms they encountered, Manager Frisch sent in Bill McGee to relieve Max Macon when the young lefthander developed a sore arm and McGee had just enough to stop a final thrust by the powerhouse world champions.

For a time it seemed that the game was going to be a runaway for the Redbirds, as they bunched seven hits with walks and errors to score eight runs in the first two innings. Meantime Lon Warneke, the old Arkansas Humming Bird at his best, was turning back the Yankees with consummate ease. In five frames the Yanks made only two hits, a single and a double, and so the score was 8 to 0 in favor the Cards when Macon took over the pitching in the sixth.

Macon Off Form.

Max, a brilliantly and smoothly-working southpaw against the same Yankees a week ago, was plainly off form. Instead of throwing with rhythm and grace, he seemed unable to follow through with his arm. His control was bad, his speed only ordinary and the Yankees quickly pounded him for three runs. He finally ended the frame, however, and Frisch, steaming over recent suggestions that his was just another Minor League, called on McGee. Fiddling Bill started poorly, yielding four hits and three runs in the seventh, but he had just enough to weather the late inning storms and hurled a scoreless eighth and struck out the great Lou Gehrig for the final out in the ninth, with a runner on second base.

Joe McCarthy of the American Leaguers started Joe Beggs, but the Newark recruit was wild and ineffective and McCarthy indicated that he wanted to win the contest by relieving the right-hander with one out in the second. Kemp Wicker took over the pitching job and held the Redbirds in check with his left-handed slants through the fifth inning, when Spurgeon Chandler went to the hill.

Except for left field and second base, Frisch went through the game without replacements. Stanley Bordagaray relieved Joe Medwick late in the game and Jimmy Bucher took over Stu Martin's second base duties at half time. Martin is gaining strength and has removed much of Frisch's worry about the infield, but he is still under weight and Frisch doesn't want to overwork him.

Homer for Terry Moore.

The Cardinals bunched three walks with singles by Medwick and Owen and an error by Joe Gordon to score their five-run cluster in the first inning and in the second Terry Moore led with a home run and singles by Stu Martin, Medwick and Mize added three more, an outfield fly driving in the final run of the frame. In the seventh, doubles by Bordagaray and Mize produced the Cards' ninth run.

The fourth game of the series will be played tomorrow with Frisch picking his pitchers from a group including Bob Weiland, Guy Bush, Si Johnson and Roy Henshaw.

Macon, whose poor showing was a disappointment to Cardinal followers, reported after the game that he was suffering from a sore arm since his game with the Yankees last Sunday. He said he had suffered from a similar ailment every spring and that he was confident he could work the kinks out of the arm before the opening of the National League season.

The third game with the Yankees attracted 3042 cash customers.

Dizzy Back in Uniform.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 19.—Thoroughly rested after spending several days in bed to shake a cold and a slight sinus infection, Dizzy Dean, St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, was back in uniform today.

The Cardinal ace worked three innings against the Yankees last Sunday and gave up one hit.

WASHINGTON U. RETAINS MISSOURI VALLEY SWIM TITLE

CLAIRE STALEY OF BEARS WINS THREE EVENTS

Star of Winners Also Sets Only Record of Meet — Fiala of Oklahoma A-M Takes Close Race.

By Reno Hahn.

Washington University retained its Missouri Valley Conference swimming championship and captured its thirteenth title in the last 14 meets last night in its Wilson Pool. Claire Staley, free-style artist, starred for the Bears, winning three firsts and setting the only record of the meet.

Claire established the new mark in the 220-yard event, winning it in 2:27.8, which lowered by six-tenths of a second the record set by Fred Varney of Washington in 1935. Claire also captured the 100 and 440-yard races, but not in record time.

Claire's brother, Ivan Staley, helped the Bears to score their 64 points by finishing third in the 150-yard backstroke event.

Grinnell, whose representatives finished one, two, three, in the 50-yard race, came in second with 53 points. The Oklahoma Aggies were third with 30 and St. Louis U., fourth with 17. They were the only schools competing.

It was the second triple for Claire Staley in five days since he captured three firsts last Wednesday as Washington retained its Ozark A. A. U. championship.

The closest race of the evening was that won by Victor Fiala of Oklahoma A. and M., who defeated Bill Brand of Washington by a fraction in the 200-yard breast stroke event. The two exchanged the pace-setting position in the last quarter, but Fiala tagged the wall a split second ahead of Brand.

Fiala's time in the preliminaries, 2:42.3, was not allowed as a record for the event because he swam only in swimming trunks. His time in the final, when he wore a regulation swimming suit, was 2:46.

PERFECT SET-UP: Ready to Bowl 'em Over for St. Louis in the A. B. C.

Nelson Burton of Dallas (left), co-holder of the A. B. C. doubles championship, has teamed with Ray Newton of St. Louis for this year's two-man event, and also will bowl with the Budweiser five in the five-man competition. The "big two" were photographed before departure of the Classic League tenpinners yesterday for Chicago, to begin bowling today in the classic of the maple alleys.

Nelson Burton, Dallas (Tex.) tenpin star, departed with the Budweiser team of the Classic Bowling League (St. Louis) yesterday afternoon to compete in the annual American Bowling Congress tournament at Chicago. Burton will bowl with the Budweisers in the team event tonight at 10:30 o'clock and will defend his A. B. C. doubles title tomorrow afternoon with Ray Newton, Budweiser anchor man, as his partner. Burton paired with Virgil Gibbs, Kansas City, to win last year's laurels. The pair counted 1359 with Burton scoring 694 and Gibbs 665.

In a tuneup match at the Gravois Recreation Wednesday, Burton trounced Max Stein, member of the Mystery Men team and present A. B. C. all-events champion, in a five-game match, averaging 222 per game. Burton bowled 724 in his first three games and finished with a total of 1111. Stein counted 988 for an average of 197.

The entire Classic League will bowl at Chicago tonight. In addition to the Budweisers, the Say-It-With-Flowers, captained by Otto Stein Jr., former A. B. C. all-events champion; Allhoffs, Hermanns, Witeks, Club Plantations and Mystery Men are scheduled to compete. Other local teams to bowl tonight are the Classic Specials and Ed Schaefers.

MOLINE BOWLER SHOOTS 746 IN A.B.C. SINGLES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Knute Anderson of Moline, Ill., reached the heights of a 30-year bowling ambition—to lead an American Bowling Congress tournament—when he crashed through with a sensational 746 total in the singles division of the A. B. C. meet here tonight.

Anderson, who manages alleys in his home town and makes the game his work and recreation, turned in the highest total of the meet in crashing the setups for games of 244-225-277. The score has been high enough to win 34 of the past tournaments and is three pins short of the 749 total which won the singles championship for Gene Gallardi, Mount Vernon, N. Y., last year.

Anderson shot a near-perfect series, having neither split nor error in the three games. With the crowd sensing the chances of a new champion and cheering him on, "Andy," as his mates know him, started with spares in the first two frames of the last game and then followed with 10 consecutive strikes. His ninth shot, a crossover "Brooklyn," was the break that meant a possible title.

The singles record, 774, was shot by Larry Shotwell, Covington, Ky., at the Cleveland tournament in 1930.

Leaders in the doubles division continued to tumble. Pete Schweigert and Irving Christenson of Battle Creek, Mich., rifled their way into the lead with a 1254 total on counts of 494-350-400. The pair scored high doubles game in the opening sessions and had the public score marker running out of cross marks in chalking up games of 252 and 242. Schweigert followed with 214 and 201 while Christensen slipped to 146 in the second game and then added 199.

Walter Shackett, Grand Rapids, took third in the All-Events class when he hung up a score of 1875—a 208.3 average—to take third place. Shackett, former Detroit star and veteran A. B. C. campaigner, totaled 622 in the five-man event, 662 in doubles and 591 in singles.

Phillips Oilers Take Third in A.A.U. Tourney

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, March 19.—Kansas City (Kan.) Healeys rallied in the second half tonight to beat the Denver Safeways, defending champions, 40 to 38, and win the National A. A. U. basketball championship.

DENVER, March 19. — Oklahoma's Phillips Oilers from Bartlesville, balked for the second straight year in their pursuit of the national A. A. U. basketball crown, found a little solace tonight in beating the Wichita Gridleys, 45 to 32, for third place in the thirty-first national meet.

BROWNS WIN FROM TULSA IN ELEVENTH INNING BY 4-3 SCORE

threes innings, was also in good shape and the only run scored against him came in the sixth on two hits, one lucky, a walk and an infield out.

Bill Miller and Trotter wound up the combat.

Tulsa offered a much better brand of pitching until the last inning, when Blackburn was wild and put the winning run on base.

Street shifted his lineup to start the game, putting Sullivan in behind the bat and sending Heffner to third. In the sixth Gabby took out six of the starting players and sent the younger battalion to the trenches. It was while the kids were in the game that the Oilers tied the score and forced the game into extra innings.

BROWNIE NOTES.

Tomorrow will be San Antonio day and the same teams will meet in the final game of their series. Kimberlin, Mills and Muncrief are the probable pitchers. Ramon and Garland are the probable Tulsa throwers.

The game scheduled here with the Chicago Cubs for April 7 has been canceled because of the Cubs' inability to reach this city in time.

Sam Harshany, who has been in St. Louis for dental treatment, is expected to return here Monday.

Gabby Street is so pleased with the conditioning progress made by his men that he has promised them a day of rest Monday, provided the weather tomorrow permits playing the final game with Tulsa.

Tuesday the club will go by bus to Laredo for a two-game series there.

WRAY'S COLUMN

will be baseball's handsomest player. He is Billy Sullivan, whose personal pulchritude would make many a movie idol appear homely by comparison.

Yes, he's married—so that's that.

Handsome is as handsome does and Billy will make himself 100 per cent good-looking by doing a good job behind the plate. And Manager Street thinks he will—and Street himself was one of the great catchers. He ought to know.

The reserve catching strength is more or less puzzling to Street and his second stringer is not yet apparent. Harshany has a bad arm; Giuliani and Heath haven't shown much better than in previous appearances; Huffman's throwing has been bad. Payton is another of those expected to be back with San Antonio.

Thus Billy Sullivan, it appears, will have to be the truck horse of the backstopping department.

The Case of Huffman.

"WHAT'S THE FUTURE of Benny Huffman?" we asked Manager Street.

"Benny's awfully young," Street observed. "Perhaps he was brought up too soon. He was asked to bridge the gap from a semipro team to a major league club and that isn't being done. His hitting has been off. It would have been better for him had he had a couple of years with the minors."

That, for Benny may be grief, even more poignant than the delight he felt when Rogers Hornsby, after picking him from Ray Doan's baseball school last year, actually unloaded the burden of major league catching on the 21-year-old sandlot player.

Street has a distinct advantage over other managers taking charge of a major league team for the first time. As a Brownie coach during part of last season, Gabby became intimately acquainted with much of his material. He will be under no need to depend solely on spring training camp work for proof of the playing merit of his material.

Probably Gabby could come pretty close to naming the 23 men who will be with the club next June—but, of course, he isn't doing that as yet.

Need New Material Here.

BUSINESS MANAGER DEWITT and his farm chain will confront a problem, before long. That will be replacements for the outfield. The upcoming young men in this department haven't stirred the scouts to a notable pitch of enthusiasm.

Of the four men who will carry on regularly this year two are 34 years old—Sam West and Allen; two are 30 years old, Mills and Bell. Mazzera and Silber are the youngsters and they are still unripe.

Within the next two years the magicians of the club must pull a couple of heavy hitters out of the hat for the outfield, or the team's punch will sag.

Where will the 1938 team finish? Even the players don't care to guess that one. But if Gabby's slogan works out, the club may finish in the upper circles of the second division.

You just can't figure better than that, unless you are the world's greatest clairvoyant.

SCOTTISH STAR IN MACCABEE LINEUP TODAY

The Maccabee club of Chicago, which earlier in the season gave the local St. Matthew club a soccer lesson at Sportsman's Park (score 6-4), returns to St. Louis today to try to even the score with the South Sides. The latter club scored a 1-0 victory over the Maccabees at Chicago last Sunday. Today's game, starting at 2:30 p. m., will be played at West Side Park, Skinker, north of Delmar boulevard.

David Rarity, a Scottish League player who joined the Maccabees recently, just too late to play for them against Sparta in the national cup series, is scheduled to appear at inside right forward. Reggie Wright, who scored three goals in the game against the Matthews, is the center forward and McGee and Lillie form the left wing. Alfred Waldron, the speedy and dangerous right winger, has a brother equally clever, at left fullback. Ogilvie, Robb and Sucza form the halfback line; Henney is the right fullback and Griffith the goaltender.

Manager Oscar Mossmann said he would use the regular South Side lineup with a few changes which should make the combination stronger than it was at Chicago. Will Murphy of the St. Matthews will be at center forward and there will be changes at left halfback and at left fullback, he said.

No further games are booked by the local professional clubs and at the moment this appears to be the final pro grame of the season.

It looks very much like a national final series between Sparta of Chicago and St. Mary Celtic of Brooklyn. Sparta won the first game of the Western final series, beating Castle Shannon on its home grounds at Pittsburgh and is expected to repeat at Chicago today.

St. Mary Celtic, which opposes New York Americans in the Eastern final series, Saturday and Sunday, March 26 and 27, defeated the same Americans in an American League match last Sunday, 3 and 2.

BELTMARS TO PLAY VILLAGERS IN MUNY SERIES

By Dent McSkimming.

In spite of the fact that the young Irish Village team gained a 3-2 victory over the Beltmars in their first round Municipal Soccer League playoff game of several weeks ago, there is a strong conviction among the fans that the Sherman Park team will be the winner when the clubs meet this afternoon at Fairground Park. The victor will go forward to the fourth and final round to meet the Schumachers for the title, next Sunday, and the loser will be definitely eliminated from the series. In previous games, the Beltmars lost to Village, 3-2, but later beat the St. Johns, 3-2; Village beat Beltmars, 3-2, and later lost to Schumachers, 6-1; the latter club won two games, beating St. Johns, 1-0, and Village, 6-1.

With only three clubs alive in the series, the Schumachers draw a bye, and to fill out the afternoon's program, a second game has been booked between Moloney Electric and the Charles De Witt club. This game will be one of the Ozark A. A. U. tournament contests.

Other A. A. U. games will be played in the public parks this morning and the seven winners will advance to the second round, which will be played next Sunday. A total of 23 clubs have entered and as soon as their teams are eliminated from the Municipal playoffs, Muny players will line up with the tournament teams.

Municipal Soccer League playoff and Ozark A. A. U. tournament games to be played today:

At Fairgrounds, Grounds 2—First game, 1:30 p. m. (Third round municipal playoffs.) Irish Village (intermediate champions) vs. Beltmar Drug (Sherman Park champions). Referees—D. Barnard, J. Keenoy. Linesmen—A. Claeys, J. Begley.

Second game, 3:30 p. m. (First round of Ozark A. A. U. championship series)—Moloney Electric vs. Charles DeWitt Club. Referees—W. Giesler, R. Wall. Linesmen—A. Newman, P. Garcia.

Other Ozark A. A. U. Tournament games:

At Fairground Park, Grounds 3—Gus Zeltmans (University City) vs. Our Gang (St. Leo's). Referees—A. Meagher and A. Claeys. Start, 9:30 a. m.

Ellington Cafe (Neighborhood Association) vs. Zeltman Service (Muny). Referees—J. Begley and F. Garcia. Start, 11 a. m.

At Fairground Park, Grounds 4—St. Theresa's (unattached) vs. Golden Panthers (S. S. Brotherhood). Referees—W. Giesley and L. Hatchaan. Start, 9:30 a. m.

Aitles (Federation) vs. Eighteenth Ward Democrats (Muny). Referees—J. Keenoy and R. O'Brien. Start, 11 a. m.

At Fenroes Park—Gem Cleaners (Walnut Park) vs. Leabeys (St. Leo's). Referees—A. Newman and A. Thro. Start, 9:30 a. m.

Pirates A. C. (S. S. Brotherhood) vs. M. E. Sport Club (Muny). Referees—A. Thro and Dan Barnard. Start, 11 a. m.

Thirty-minute halves will be played. In case of a tie score, an extra 16-minute period will be played. If still tied, another period will be played.

U. City Soccer Playoff.

German Sport Club soccer team will oppose the Schmidt club in the first game of the University City Municipal League playoff series this afternoon at Heman Park on Olive Street road. Play will open at 3 o'clock. Andy Meagher and George Schweppe will referee.

Basketball Tourney.

SESSER, Ill., March 19.—The Southern Illinois sectional, independent W. P. A basketball tournament will get under way here Monday night and continue through Thursday. Sixteen teams are entered.

extra innings by J. Roy Stockton

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 19.—Unless there are accidents in important departments, the New York Yankees of Joe McCarthy are likely to dominate the American League again in 1938, just as they have dominated it for two seasons. As the club stands now, assuming, of course, that Joe DiMaggio eventually will come to an agreement with Col. Jake Ruppert, there isn't a weak spot in the lineup of the world champions.

Of course accidents have a habit of happening, and that probably gives rival clubs much of whatever hope they have as they tackle the job of stopping the powerful New York juggernaut in the new pennant race.

McCarthy brought his club to St. Petersburg with two problems, if you could so describe them. The club decided after the 1937 race that Tony Lazzeri had served out his time and gave him his release, so he could accept a job of some promise with the Chicago Cubs. That left second base open, but it was known that the Yankees had an excellent prospect for the job vacated by Poosh-Em-Up Tony.

Gordon Looking Good.

Thus far Joe Gordon, late of Newark, is doing all right. In the first spring exhibition game with the Cardinals, Joe distinguished himself by hitting a triple with the bases filled. That was filling Lazzeri's shoes, for it was a trick that Tony would have delighted in doing. Observers with the Yankees say that Gordon will take care of second base satisfactorily and they point out that should there be any difficulty, which they do not expect, Billy Knickerbocker will be available.

It is strange about ball players. Knickerbocker with the Browns was an unsatisfactory shortstop. The Brownie officials pointed out that their pitching would not have looked so bad, if they had had a better infielder than Knickerbocker at shortstop. But now that Billy is in a New York uniform, there has been a change. Some of the New York scribes even say that Billy may give Gordon a battle for the regular job at second base. They insist that Knickerbocker was merely a creature of his environment at St. Louis and now that he is in a new atmosphere, he has perked up and become once more the ball player the Browns thought they were getting when they obtained him from the Cleveland Indians. Strange thing, this baseball.

The rest of the infield, of course, is all that could be desired. Lou Gehrig at first base, Frank Crosetti at short and Red Rolfe at third, are fixtures. Knickerbocker also will be available as a replacement for Crosetti and Babe Dahlgren can play several infield positions, which is fortunate, for Gehrig gives his understudy rare chances for work during the regular season.

During spring training Manager McCarthy has been playing George Selkirk in left field and Tommy Henrich in right. Last year Selkirk was the right fielder. DiMaggio, of course, will take over the center field duties as soon as he reports, leaving Myril Hoag and Alvin Powell as reserves.

McCarthy's other problem this year is to bolster his pitching staff. Gomez, Ruffing and Pearson look like the Big Three and there are several promising candidates for the fourth spot among the starters. Joe Beggs had a splendid record at Newark, as did Atley Donald. Spurgeon Chandler, one of the sore-arm boys of 1937, also is highly regarded. Then McCarthy has Ivy Paul Andrews, Irving Hadley, Johnny Murphy, Lee Stine, Steve Sundra, Joe Vance and Kemp Wicker.

Ball players tell you it is a rookie hurler's dream to land on the New York Yankee staff. They say anybody, almost, could pitch and win, with that club, with Gehrig, DiMaggio and the others swishing their devastating war clubs.

Certainly it is difficult to see any rival club beating out the Yankees, barring accidents.

Michigan Wins Butler Relays

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 19.—The University of Michigan's well-balanced track team scored in 10 of the 11 events it was eligible to enter to win its fifth consecutive Butler University indoor relays team championship tonight with a total of 40½ points.

Don Lash, who for three years broke distance records for Indiana University, won a special 3000 meters run but failed to break any records. He ran the distance in 8 minutes 32.8 seconds. The world record of 8 minutes 26.4 seconds was set by Paavo Nurmi of Finland in 1925. Joie Ray holds the American indoor record of 8 minutes 31.2 seconds.

DRAKE WINS VALLEY MEET; BEARS THIR

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, [illegible], March [illegible]—Harrison Kohl's smashing anchor race on Drake's winning mile relay team gave the Bulldogs [illegible] sixth successive Missouri Valley Conference indoor track championship tonight in a stirring duel with the Oklahoma Aggies.

Drake had to win the mile relay, final event on the program, to successfully defend its title. The Aggies put up a bitter fight the first three legs of the race, but Kohl spurted into the lead and outdistanced Glenn Burris in the stretch.

The Bulldogs' time for the race was 3:31, a new fieldhouse record. Old record :32.1, set by Gallagher of Drake in 1933.)

The championship battle was a two-team affair all the way. Drake wound up with 45 1-6 points to 44 5-16 for the Aggies. Washington finished in third place with 15 1-6 points, Grinnel was fourth with 11 1-3 and Tulsa fifth with 10½. St. Louis and Washington brought up the rear guard with 4 and 2 points, respectively.

Ed Coatney of Tulsa, former Oklahoma high school champion, established the only new conference record. He leaped 6 feet 3⅜ inches to better the 6 feet 3¾ mark made by Poor of Kansas back in 1921.

Frank Wright of Washington came through with a surprise victory over Efaw in the mile, finishing with a tremendous kick to come home in 4:27.2.

THE SUMMARIES.

POLE VAULT—Bains, Tulsa, and Steve Oklahoma A. & M., tied for first; Johnson, Grinnell, and Poffenberger, Oklahoma A. & M., tied for third. Height, 12 feet.

50-YARD DASH—Won by Robinson, Drake; second, Smith, Drake; third, Clasquin, Oklahoma A. & M.; fourth, Tate, Oklahoma A. & M. Time, :05.5.

MILE RUN—Won by P. Wright, Washington; second, Efaw, Oklahoma A. & M.; third, Patterson, Drake; fourth, Gee, Washington. Time, 4:27.2.

50-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by V. Wright, Oklahoma A. & M.; second, White, Drake; third, Tuin, Drake; fourth, Baichly, Grinnell. Time, :06. Betters conference record but disallowed because Wright kicked over two hurdles.

440-YARD RUN—Won by Tate, Oklahoma A. & M.; second, Schlotterbeck, Grinnell; third, Kohl, Drake; fourth, Snyder, Drake. Time, :52.6. (New fieldhouse record. Old record :52.7, set by Gallagher of Drake in 1933.)

50-YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Wright, Oklahoma A. & M.; second, White, Drake; third, Kohl, Drake; fourth, Baker, Drake. Time, :06.

penalty box for tripping Lin Gross. But Yip Radley, the [illegible] man barring the Flyer's road, maneuvered Matte to break up play.

Four minutes of the period remained when big Burr William was the recipient of a two-minute sentence for tripping Purpur. Tulsa's defense was air-tight during William's absence with Levin having to turn in but one shot. Burr came out of the cooler with the Missourians storming Tulsa territory and stole the disc from Cobol and passed to Collings. The latter had an open shot at Nelson but the Stopper blocked magnificently.

The oilers played strictly defensive hockey throughout the 20 minutes with the single exception of Purpur's stretch in the penalty box. Seldom did they send their entire front line down to threaten the visitors' scoring vicinity.

Purpur's Head Cut.

The men of Johnny MacKinnon opened the final stanza with regular four and five man rushes but the Oilers were blocking beautifully. The dangerous Hudson-Purpur-Palangio line played five of the first seven minutes but try as they might seldom advanced beyond Tulsa's blue line.

The fur was flying thick most of the minutes as bodily contact became more frequent. Purpur had to retire to the dugout at the 7-minute mark when he received a cut over his right eye. The gash was soon fixed and the diminutive one went back in for more.

The closing five minutes produced many determined Flyer drives, several of which almost proved successful. Lanky Ott Mulvihill took several pokes from in close at Levine but the bulky Oiler net-tender blocked the way.

One St. Louis sally came near proving disastrous when Riley and Whittles moved in on Nelson with Carbol the only stumbling block, but Leo made the Tulsans stumble with some brilliant checking work. A few seconds later with less than two minutes of scheduled time left Carbol drew a minor penalty for flooring Wakeford.

ROYAL

1937 WINNER IS TO CARRY 175 POUNDS

Track to Be Opened Today for Inspection by Crowds and for Advance Betting.

By the Associated Press.

AINTREE, England, March 19—The strangest sporting pilgrimage in the world started tonight when thousands of racing fans converged on Aintree to place their "jump Sunday" bets on Friday's Grand National Steeplechase.

Though the race is still six days away, tipsters had planted their multi-colored umbrellas around the course, the track was opened to the public, and hotels here and at Liverpool were jammed to the doors.

Tomorrow the crowd will be allowed to walk around and inspect Aintree's "Suicide Lane." There will examine the thorn fences and wide streams—and put their money on the line.

This year, out of a field of [illegible] there are ten horses which have been receiving the bulk of the support in the pre-race wagering.

Royal Mail First Choice.

First choice is Royal Mail, last year's winner, which was owned by the late Hugh Lloyd Thomas, and bought at auction recently by Mr. Camille Clifford Evans. In the climax of the most disastrous training season in recent history of the National, Thomas was killed in a race at Derby last month.

Close behind Royal Mail, who is being held at 100-7, are Arthur Sainsbury's Blue Shirt and the Marquis de San-Miguel's Takve Pacha, lone French entry and surprise of the wagering. Each is quoted at 15 to 1.

J. B. Snow's American-owned Delachance also has come in for strong support and currently is being held at 18 to 20-1. James Rank's Cooleen, runner-up last year, Sir Warren Chilcott's Dunhill Castle and Arthur Dorn's Dominick's Cross are next in line at 22 to 1, then comes Sir John Grey's Stalbridge Park and V. Smith's Rockquilla at 25 to 1 and Sir Frances Towle's Airgead Sios one of the early favorites at 30 to 1.

Lord Mildmay's Davy Jones and H. C. McNally's Royal Danieli also have many backers. Davy Jones apparently had the 1936 race won when a rein broke and he ran out at the last jump, leaving the way open for Reynoldstown to score his second straight victory.

Two rank outsiders which are not being overlooked are Fra Gould's What Have You, an American-owned son of Tryster, and S. Murphy's Dawmar. Each was held at 100 to 1.

Robert Lehman's Didoric, Mr. Marion Scott's Battleship, a son of Man O' War, and Mrs. Jessie Metcalf's K. D. H., complete the American contingent. Didoric has rallied some support but Battleship at 40-1 and K. D. H. at 100-1, has received practically no consideration.

Doubtful Starters.

A problem arose when it was discovered Mrs. Metcalf had an option on the services of T. McNeese who had planned to ride Airgead Sios. If she exercises it, Towser may keep his little Irish horse out of the race. There also is the possibility Davy Jones may not start because of the hard ground.

Tradition is against Royal Mail repeating. He must carry a weight of 175 pounds, and only five horses in the history of the race have won with the maximum handicap.

Since the weights were allotted in January, Blue Shirt has been practically unbeatable. He won the four-mile race at Gatwick, February 18, and took the Fringford Handicap at Windsor, Feb. 23.

No mare has won the national for 36 years, but Cooleen is given more than a chance of breaking this record. She is meeting Royal Mail on better terms than she was in 1937 when she was beaten three lengths.

Other than Blue Shirt, the only consistent performers among the favorites this season were Dunhill Castle and Royal Danieli.

The other favorites have all faded away late in the season. Airgead Sios got away to a great early start but looked poor at Chaltenham and the Gold Cup, when he was unplaced. Delachance, which was made favorite after winning the Troytown Chase, Feb. 12, has looked bad ever since.

Only three of the seven horses which completed the course last year are entered: Royal Mail, Cooleen, and Alan Pilkington's Brancraik.

Puckabelle, third last year, died early this month and was scratched; Ego, which was fourth, fell dead preparing for the race and Don Bradman, only other finisher originally entered for today's classic ran poorly all year and was withdrawn.

Last of the three American-owned horses, which have won the national was Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Kellsboro Jack, in 1932. The only American-bred horse to triumph was Rubio in 1908 but he was owned by an Englishman.

Changes in Odds On Derby Horses

Activity in the future book on the Kentucky Derby through the past week resulted in the shorting of prices against half a dozen horses, it was announced last night by Charles Burke and James J. Carroll, local commissioners.

Burke's chief changes were Nedayr, now 12, was 100; Redbreast, 30, was 100; Cattistock, 60, was 100; War Magic, 40, was 100.

Carroll revised downward the prices on Redbreast, Lawrin, Elooto, Fighting Fox; Bull Lea; Menow, Teddy's Comet and Dauber, all well played.

Stagehand remains the favorite in both books at 4 to 1. Prices range upward to 1000 to 1 laid against King Balboa.

Mythical Ray Scratched, Ends "Dream Double"

LONDON, March 19. RUSSELL MABLETHORPE, trainer of O. J. Jackson's Mythical Ray, today announced the gelding will not start in Wednesday's Lincolnshire Handicap, and thus put an end to a "dream double" craze sweeping the betting public.

A few days ago William Old, landlord of a hotel at Milton Abbas, Dorset, dreamed Mythical Ray would win the Lincolnshire and J. B. Snow's American-owned Delachance the Grand National Friday. Together the races make up the "spring double."

Old had dreamed rightly of winners before and his dream became widely known with the result that bookmakers throughout the country were inundated with bets on the two horses.

One of the biggest firms in London said that if both horses were to win it would cost bookmakers more than £1,000,000 ($5,000,000).

The story was the same in all parts of the country. One Liverpool firm was involved to the extent of $100,000. A Scottish bookmaker took in $250,000 in bets.

Shortly before Mythical Ray was scratched the demand had abated somewhat after the gelding's trainer had declared: "I do not believe in dreams. I place more reliance in gallops, if I thought Mythical Ray had a chance I would advise his owner to run him."

But up to this morning the effect of the "dream double" had been felt strongly in the betting market. Mythical Ray's price was forced down from 40 to 1 to 20 to 1.

Previous winners landlord Old had dreamed included Kellsboro Jack in the 1933 Grand National, Overcoat in the Lincolnshire in 1936, and last year's Derby winner, Mid-Day Sun.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE OKAYS PARI-MUTUEL BETTING PROPOSAL

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 19.—New York's Legislature voted approval today of a proposed constitutional amendment to permit pari-mutuel betting at racetracks, pending since 1933.

The Assembly completed legislative action, 90 to 33, several hours after the Senate gave its approval, 33 to 14. The measure must be approved again by the 1939 Legislature before being submitted to the electorate. There is a possibility the constitutional convention which meets April 5 might consider the subject.

BILL COCHRAN TO PLAY END IN BILLIKENS GAME

By James M. Gould.

It is generally agreed that the best way to learn how to play football is to play it and, for this reason, spring practice games are decidedly valuable, not only for the players taking part, but also for the coaches who direct the play. The players get to know their assignments and how to carry them out when the other fellow is trying to prevent just that; the coaches can pick the men who seem to thrive on competition and can sort out the "lillies of the field" who look so good in signal work.

Thus, with a tough schedule in front of his Billikens for 1938, Head Coach Cecil Muellerleile of St. Louis U. this afternoon will send two teams of equal strength against each other in a full-length contest at Walsh Memorial Stadium. Play will start at 2:30 o'clock. The public is invited to attend. It will be the first public preview as last Sunday's program had to be called off because of wet grounds.

Power Equally Divided.

Muellerleile and Assistant Coach Dick Fitzgerald will direct the "Blues," while the "Whites" will be in charge of Assistants Carl Pike and Russ McLeod. Instead of the usual procedure, which, in years past, has been to load up one team with veterans, label it "The Varsity" and run up a big score for psychological reasons, the affair will be, the coaches say, "for blood." And, from the lineups of the two teams, the going should be rough and tough for both elevens, as the power has been neatly divided. There are several first-string positions still in competition and today's and the following practice games will have a lot to do with choices for starting posts in the opening game of the regular season.

The coaches are greatly interested in the work of the guards and tackles. The Billikens are well fixed with backfield material, on the ends and at the center position. The team's heaviest losses were from tackle to tackle and, naturally, candidates for those positions will come in for the greatest share of attention this afternoon.

As the teams line up, the "Blues" will start with seven lettermen and the "Whites" will have six. Of course, there will be frequent and numerous substitutions, but the balance of power will be maintained as nearly as possible.

In changed positions will be Brooks, a tackle, formerly an end, and Bill Cochran, formerly a back and now an end.

The Washington Bears will play their first spring game or, rather, half game, next Friday afternoon. Coach Conzelman has had his men in training for a month, but believes that two quarters will be sufficient for the players at the present time.

Today's Billiken lineups are as follows:

BLUES.		WHITES.
Geyer	L. E.	Sexton
Mundt	L. T.	Johnson
Clark	L. G.	Schmiesser
Newman	C.	Ehlbeille
Carlson	R. G.	Lawlor
Brooks	R. T.	Baker
Hartle	R. E.	W. Cochran
Walker	Q. B.	Murphy
Aussieker	L. H.	D. Cochran
Fechr	R. H.	McGonnigle
Yokubaitis	F. B.	Harris

Steeplechase Winner.

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C., March 19.—Cabin Fire, five-year-old bay gelding of L. W. Robinson Jr., Indiana, Pa., with T. Terrell up, won the $1000 purse in the Yadkin, two and a half miles over brush, today. The Yadkin was the feature race of the fourth annual steeplechase at the Barber estate course, midway between Pinehurst and Southern Pines.

Thesz to Meet Garibaldi.

Louis Thesz, young St. Louisan who held a claim to the heavyweight wrestling title for a short time, will meet Gino Garibaldi in the featured Auditorium match Thursday night.

CUNNINGHAM IS EASY WINNER IN METROPOLITAN

By the Associated Press.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 19.—Glenn Cunningham made a surprise start in the mile run of the Metropolitan A. A. U. indoor track and field championships tonight and it wasn't even a race as he ran three rivals into the ground to set a new meet record of 4-minutes, 21.2 seconds.

As usual, the Kansas king of the milers stole the show from all other performances. His one-sided victory stood out above even a new indoor world two-mile steeplechase record performance by the veteran Joe McCluskey in 9:43.3, as well as a series of meet field marks by former Olympic aces Ed. Gordon and Cornelius Johnson.

His time clipped one-tenth of a second off the Metropolitan record set a year ago by Cunningham's perennial shadow, Gene Venzke, the ex-Pennsylvania picture runner. Venzke did not satrt in tonight's mile, saving himself for the 1000-yard run, which Cunningham was scheduled to run, but which he gave up in favor of his specialty.

Venzke took the 1000 in a breeze. He finished three yards in front of Henry Egal of St. John's of Brooklyn without putting on much "heat" on the slippery unbanked boards. His time of 2:18.5 was well off the meet record of 2:15.4.

Fordham's fast mile relay quartet came home in front after Francis Slater, the national 1000-meter champion, took up the duties on the anchor leg. He overhauled Manhattan and Lenox Hill A. A. and broke the tape in the new Metropolitan record time of 3:28.

Altogether seven Metropolitan A. A. U. records were shattered before the night's campaigning wound up, with Robert Conkling of Manhattan College turning in the final mark by winning the three-mile event in 14:57, to take the title abdicated by McCluskey.

Wes Wallace of Fordham, winner of the 600-yard run, was awarded the merit trophy as the meet's outstanding athlete.

There wasn't even a fight for team honors as the New York A. C. squad coasted in to retain the title with 53 points, far out in front of the second-place Grand Street Boys' Association of New York with 14.

A. A. U. Water Polo Meet to Be Held Here April 2

The Texas A. & M. team, one of the outstanding in the country, is among those entered in the National Junior A. A. U. water carnival to be held at Wilson Pool, Washington University, April 2, it was learned yesterday.

The Aggies, coached by Arthur Adamson, probably will enter the tournament heavily favored, because prior to this season, his teams for the past 10 years have not lost a game.

The meet is being sponsored by the Ozark A. A. U. and is under the auspices of the Meramec River Patrol.

Kirksville Track Coach.

By the Associated Press.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., March 19.—Dr. Walter H. Ryle, president of Kirksville State Teachers College, announced today Woodrow Rider had been elected to complete the spring quarter as track coach. Rider, now assistant coach at Kirksville High School, succeeds Mack Gladden of Houston, Mo., who resigned because of his father's ill health.

STATE DE MOLAY BASKET TOURNEY SET FOR TODAY

The State DeMolay basketball tournament will be held at the Armory this afternoon, with competition scheduled to begin at 1 o'clock on three courts. Nine teams have been entered so far, with a possibility that there may be several late entries. State championships in wrestling and free throw will also be decided.

St. Louis-Harmony and Kirksville will open the tourney in a first round game on the south court. All other teams will draw first round byes, according to the tentative pairings. Two second round games are also carded for 1 o'clock. Sentinel will meet Jefferson City on the North court and Clayton will oppose Sedalia on the center court.

In two second round games at 2:30 Rabboni will play the victor of the St. Louis Harmony-Kirksville battle on the North court, while Mother Chapter of Kansas City will meet Trenton on the South floor. The semifinals will be held at 4 o'clock and the finals will be contested at 7:30 o'clock.

Corkball Notices.

The American Corkball Association is organizing for its third season. Those interested in joining, communicate with Arthur Freese, 4264 Kossuth.

"Y" Water Polo Team Wins From Northwestern

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EVANSTON, Ill., March 19.—The St. Louis Downtown Y. M. C. A. water polo team defeated Northwestern University's Big Ten championship team, 9 to 7, here tonight. Schroeder scored six goals and Queensen three for the Y. M. C. A.

DUNDEE HIGH WINS ILLINOIS BASKET TITLE

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., March 19. — Dundee won the Illinois State High School basketball championship tonight with a stirring 36 to 29 victory over Braidwood. The victory was achieved before a record crowd of 7115 spectators.

It was Dundee's first State basketball title. Dundee's attack was paced by the sensational Donald Blanken, who scored 15 points. Braidwood, a school with an enrollment of only 96 students, made a battle of it all the way and was tied with Dundee, 17-17, at the half. In the final minutes Dundee's power was the decisive factor.

Paris defeated Von Steuben of Chicago, 30 to 20, in the consolation game for third-place honors.

Rowe Yields But Two Hits in Three Innings of Game

By the Associated Press.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 19.—Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe allowed only two hits and Jake Wade three today as they pitched Coach Bing Miller's nine to a 10-2 six-inning victory over Mickey Cochrane's team at the Detroit Tiger camp. The victors pounded Pat McLaughlin and Roxie Lawson for 13 safe blows.

Manager Cochrane said Rowe, who worked three innings, "nursed himself along for the most part, but a couple of times he turned on the speed and looked all right."

Reds Defeat Bees.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 19.—The Cincinnati Reds today turned back the Boston Bees, 11 to 8, for their fourth victory out of five games in the "Grapefruit" League and their second straight over Casey Stengel's club.

In a game marred by eight errors, the Bees missed a chance to tie the score when Elbie Fletcher ended a ninth-inning rally by striking out with the tying runs on the bases.

The attempted comeback of Billy Weir, stocky southpaw, who was out most of last season with an arm injury, flopped as the Reds drove him to cover in the second after a unique triple play saved him in the first inning.

Indians Beat Giants, 9-5.

NEW ORLEANS, March 19. — The Cleveland Indians hammered out seven runs in the fourth and fifth innings today to defeat the New York Giants, 9 to 5, in the first game of their long spring exhibition series.

Hal Trosky's homer with two on base was the big blow of the fourth-inning rally against Cliff Melton that all but overcame the Giants' early lead. In the next frame singles by Lyn Lary, Roy Weatherly and Ken Keltner and Dick Bartell's wild throw accounted for three tallies. Keltner's homer in the seventh finished the scoring.

The Giants gathered three runs off rookie Tom Drake in the fourth on singles by Lou Chiozza, Melton, Joe Moore and Bartell, combined with two errors and a hit batsman.

Pirates Defeat White Sox.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., March 19. — The Chicago White Sox dropped a 4 to 2 decision to the Pittsburgh Pirates today, but the performance of Gerald Walker in the Sox outfield took a big edge off the defeat for Manager Jimmy Dykes.

Walker, obtained from Detroit last December, made a spectacular catch in the seventh and in the same frame smacked a lusty double with the bases loaded, giving the Sox all their runs and tying the score at 2-all. The Pirates got four hits and the benefit of a Sox error to win in the eighth. Bowman was the winning pitcher.

Athletics 21, Phillies 18.

LAKE CHARLES, La., March 19.—The Athletics walloped their Philadelphia city rivals, the Phillies, 21 to 18, today in a slugging bee in which nine homers were made.

Chuck Klein of the Phils connected for two of the circuit clouts. The others were hit by Martin, Arnovich, Scharein and Mueller of the Phils, and Hasson, Johnson and Easterling of the A's.

The A's won the game with an eight-run rally in the fifth when Southpaw Bill Hallahan issued six bases on balls coupled with two hits.

Skeet Shoot Today.

The American Federation of Wild Life is sponsoring a skeet and trap shoot program at the St. Louis Skeet and Trap Club's range today. There will be Class A, B, C and D in the skeet event and a regular program for the trap shoot.

NORMANDY HIGH MAY PROMOTE BASEBALL MEET

By Harold Tuthill

Something unusual in high school baseball will be tried this year if Jim Major's plans to hold an elimination tournament at Normandy go through. The tournament, which would take place the latter part of May, would be held day and night with the final game scheduled to be played at night.

The event also would mark the first time that the high schools tried to play baseball here at night.

Feelers have been sent to the various coaches in the district and many have expressed a willingness to enter. Major has delayed setting the dates, depending upon the response to his prospectus.

The tournament would be an elimination affair—one defeat and out.

Robert M. Young Baseball Coach at Southwest.

Robert M. Young, former Municipal Athletic Association pitcher, has been named baseball coach at Southwest High School, it was learned yesterday. Young has issued a call for the first outdoor practice to be held tomorrow.

Young hurled for the Sentinel, DeMolay League, team, for the Hamilton Avenue Church team and other teams some years ago. He is a graduate of Washington University.

"The response at Southwest has been greater than I expected," Young said yesterday. "We have 125 boys who answered the first call, but I have no idea what kind of material we will have. We will not complete in the City High School League this year, but hope to next season."

Young is trynig to get the abandoned softball park at Kingshighway and Hartford for a practice field, but until that is secured the squad will work out in Tower Grove Park. The field in front of the high school is not adequate for baseball practice and recent rains ve made it a quagmire.

Rumors have been flying around the circuit to the effect that baseball, as a league sport, would be abolished after the 1938 season, but from a reliable source it was learned that the principals of the high schools have not taken any definite action on the question.

The Post-Dispatch was informed that there is nothing to prevent a school from dropping out of competition if it cannot maintain the sport. So far none of the schools is contemplating abandoning baseball.

CITY RECREATION DEPARTMENT HOLDS BOXING TOURNAMENT

The Recreation Department of the city is sponsoring a community center boxing tournament for boys weighing anywhere from 50 pounds or less to 175 pounds. The five centers which will participate are Sherman, Buder, Cherokee, Soulard and Mullanphy.

Registrations will be accepted until next Saturday.

In addition to the midget division, championships also will be decided in the novice and open divisions.

The midget division will be graded as follows:

Under 50 pounds	Atom weight
51-60 pounds	Gnat weight
61-70 pounds	Pin weight
71-80 pounds	Flea weight
81-90 pounds	Mosquito weight
91-104 pounds	Paper weight

The novice and open division titles will be decided at 112, 118, 128, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds.

Tennis Club to Meet.

The Carondelet Park Tennis Club will hold a meeting on Friday, March 25, at the Carondelet Y. M. C. A. All Carondelet players interested in plans for the coming season are invited to attend the meeting, which will convene at 8 o'clock.

Vandervoort's and Saint Louis . . .

Partners in Progress

It was in April, 1850, that Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney began business as a small store on Fourth street, under the name of McClelland, Scruggs & Co. The firm grew rapidly while St. Louis commerce and industry expanded, and in 1870 the partnership of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney was formed. Through all the natural changes brought by years, this company has tried to maintain its distinctive atmosphere, that same strict honesty in dealing and merchandise, that gentle consideration which its early owners practiced and inculcated in every employe. "Making Art a part of utility . . . showing consideration while giving service . . . combining the ideal with the practical . . . retaining convenience while achieving magnitude . . . satisfying the pride of craft while realizing profit from the business of merchandising . . . displaying a spirit of modern progressiveness, yet retaining the sentimental and treasured traditions of four generations of purchasers . . . Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co. has attained these ideals of retailing."—From The Drygoodsman, Nov. 15, 1913

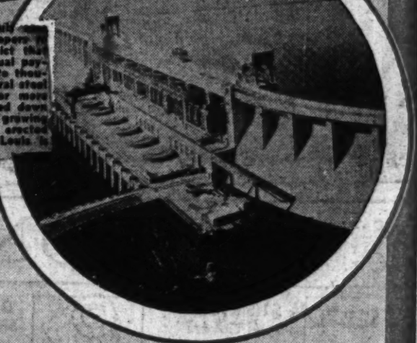
SAINT LOUIS

Up through the years, St. Louis and Vandervoort's have grown hand-in-hand. They have traveled the adventurous way of growth and expansion . . . growing greater together! From the very beginning of this now great city, it has been marked as the principle distributing center of the vast central west. Out of St. Louis via river steamboat and early railroad went large cargoes to points north, south, east and west . . . even before the Civil War. Because it is the hub of a great productive region, industry and business have flourished in this city of ours. And Vandervoort's, as a member of this business-circle, has helped to keep the wheels of industry turning . . . in a score of ways doing its part to serve your needs and help keep you, your family, your friends employed in St. Louis industry and business!

Closely allied in glorious traditions of the past, Vandervoort's and St. Louis remain PARTNERS IN PROGRESS . . . BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE!

A GREAT STORE and A GREAT CITY BUILD TOGETHER

St. Louis is Shoemaker to the World! In 1849, we boasted one factory; within 40 years St. Louis was well on its way to becoming a leader! Today, with half a hundred factories and their related industries, it is noted for always having on hand ready for shipment, more shoes than any other city in the world. Seventy-five thousand people are connected with the industry, their annual payroll exceeding the price paid by Thomas Jefferson for the Louisiana Territory. St. Louis is pre-eminent because of its location, transportation facilities, and nearness to center of population and raw materials. Growth of population means increase in production, and men of vision have not overlooked these factors. St. Louis and Vandervoort's have grown, and will grow, together!



Artifex manufactured from steel in the St. Louis area range from thermometers to bridges, from skyscrapers to stowpans. The 116 companies in St. Louis district that manufacture products of rolled steel have an annual payroll of $25,000,000 and over, giving employment to thousands. Twenty or more concerns fabricate structural steel for bridges, buildings and many other uses. For more than 60 years these great plants have been handed down from father to son. St. Louis steel companies growing always in importance. Among important projects erected recently from structural steel fabricated in St. Louis is Bagnell Dam, at the Lake of the Ozarks.

88th ANNIVERSARY Sale

ONE OF TWO GREAT STORE-WIDE SALES A YEAR—NOW IN PROGRESS UPSTAIRS AND DOWNSTAIRS!

In 1935, St. Louis ranked fourth in the manufacture of drugs and medicines among the industrial areas of the country, and fifth as wholesale center of drugs and drug sundries, with net sales of $17,963,000. Meyer Bros. Drug Co. and the J. S. Merrell Drug Co. have long been among the most important drug houses in the United States. Among manufacturing chemists, Mallinckrodt, Monsanto, and Merck are names known throughout the world as outstanding pioneers in their field. Through the years, Vandervoort's and St. Louis pay homage to the scientific achievements of our citizens.

Centrally located in a great agricultural area, logical center for midwestern trade, St. Louis naturally became a pioneer in railroad building, and chief railroad center. Sixteen charters permitting organization of railroad companies were granted by the Legislature of 1836-37. In 1851, actual construction was begun. At that time, Vandervoort's was a lusty, year-old infant, the first store under the name McClelland, Scruggs & Co., located on the west side of North Fourth street, between Locust and St. Charles. Today, railroad transportation is one of the mainstays of St. Louis' business life. Union Station is one of the largest and most imposing in the world, having the largest, most complete and best equipped terminal system. Twenty-eight hundred cars can be handled daily. The importance of transportation to industrial development is obvious.

The Season's Greatest Savings!

We cap the climax of value-giving! Come prepared for saving surprises . . . for Vandervoort's Anniversary Sale has many a thrift-treat on hand. Savings scale new heights, in many cases! Assortments are at the peak of perfection! And everywhere . . . traditional Vanderveort Quality is your assurance of satisfaction. Take care of all Spring needs for your Home, your Family, Yourself . . . right here and now! Check below just 21 values typical of hundreds!

Vandervoort's and Saint Louis . . .

Partners in Progress

A GREAT STORE and A GREAT CITY BUILD TOGETHER

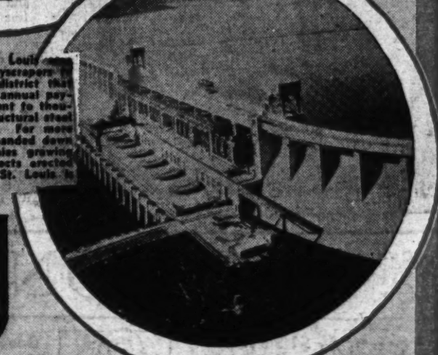
It was in April, 1850, that Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney began as a small store on Fourth street, under the name of McClelland, Scruggs & Co. The firm grew rapidly while St. Louis commerce and industry expanded, and in 1870 the partnership of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney was formed. Through all the natural changes brought by years, this company has tried to maintain its distinctive atmosphere, that same strict honesty in dealing and merchandise, that gentle consideration which its early owners practiced and inculcated in every employe. "Making Art a part of utility . . . showing consideration while giving service . . . combining the ideal with the practical . . . retaining convenience, while achieving magnitude . . . satisfying the pride of craft while realizing profit from the business of merchandising . . . displaying a spirit of modern progressiveness, yet retaining the sentimental and treasured traditions of four generations of purchasers . . . Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co. has attained these ideals of retailing."—From The Drygoodsman, Nov. 15, 1913

SAINT LOUIS

Up through the years, St. Louis and Vandervoort's have grown hand-in-hand. They have traveled the adventurous way of growth and expansion . . . growing greater together! From the very beginning of this new great city, it has been marked as the principle distributing center of the vast central west. Out of St. Louis via river steamboat and early railroad went large cargoes to points north, south, east and west . . . even before the Civil War. Because it is the hub of a great productive region, industry and business have flourished in this city of ours. And Vandervoort's, as a member of this business-circle, has helped to keep the wheels of industry turning . . . in a score of ways doing its part to serve your needs and help keep you, your family, your friends employed in St. Louis industry and business!

Closely allied in glorious traditions of the past, Vandervoort's and St. Louis remain PARTNERS IN PROGRESS . . . BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE!

St. Louis is Shoemaker to the World! In 1848, we boasted one factory; within 40 years St. Louis was well on its way to becoming a leader! Today, with half a hundred factories and their related industries, it is noted for always having on hand ready for shipment, more shoes than any other city in the world. Seventy-five thousand people are connected with the industry, their annual payroll exceeding the price paid by Thomas Jefferson for the Louisiana Territory. St. Louis is pre-eminent because of its location, transportation facilities, and nearness to center of population and raw materials. Growth of population means increase in production, and men of vision have not overlooked these factors. St. Louis and Vandervoort's have grown, and will grow, together!



Articles manufactured from steel in the St. Louis area range from thermometers to bridges, from skyscrapers to stewpans. The 116 companies in St. Louis district that manufacture products of rolled steel have an annual payroll of $28,000,000 and over, giving employment to thousands. Twenty or more concerns fabricate structural steel for bridges, buildings and many other uses. For more than 60 years these great plants have been handed down from father to son, St. Louis steel companies growing always in importance. Among important projects erected recently from structural steel fabricated in St. Louis is Bagnell Dam, at the Lake of the Ozarks.

88th ANNIVERSARY Sale

ONE OF TWO GREAT STORE-WIDE SALES A YEAR—NOW IN PROGRESS UPSTAIRS AND DOWNSTAIRS!

In 1935, St. Louis ranked fourth in the manufacture of drugs and medicines among the industrial areas of the country, and fifth as wholesale center of drugs and drug sundries, with net sales of $17,963,000. Meyer Bros. Drug Co. and the J. S. Merrell Drug Co. have long been among the most important drug houses in the United States. Among manufacturing chemists, Mallinckrodt, Monsanto, and Merck are names known through the world as outstanding producers in their field. Through the years, Vandervoort's and St. Louis pay homage to the scientific achievements of our citizens.

Centrally located in a great agricultural area, typical center for midwestern trade, St. Louis naturally became a pioneer in railroad building, and chief railroad center. Sixteen charters permitting organization of railroad companies were granted by the Legislature of 1836-37. In 1851, actual construction was begun. At that time, Vandervoort's was a lusty, year-old infant; the first store under the name McClelland, Scruggs & Co., located on the west side of North Fourth street, between Locust and St. Charles. Today, railroad transportation is one of the mainstays of St. Louis' business life. Union Station is one of the largest and most imposing in the world, having the largest, most complete and best equipped terminal system. Twenty-eight hundred cars can be handled daily. The importance of transportation to industrial development is obvious.

The Season's Greatest Savings!

We cap the climax of value-giving! Come prepared for saving surprises . . . for Vandervoort's Anniversary Sale has many a thrift-treat on hand. Savings scale new heights, in many cases! Gay Nineties Portrayed at Costume Party

Mrs. and Mrs. Charles Lane Entertain 150 Guests in Celebrating First Wedding Anniversary.

COSTUMES ranging from Prince Albert coats and Inverness capes for monocled men to Gainsborough hats, panniers and bustles for many-petticoated women made their appearance Friday night at Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lane's first anniversary ball in the Sayman Building, 2117 Franklin avenue.

For the most part the 150 guests (invited by telegram) borrowed from outmoded trousseaux, old trunks and chests to achieve the requested results, Gay Nineties costumes. Others assembled bearded Buffalo Bill outfits and Northwest Mounted red coats from professional collections. Some were content to have their hair coiffed by ingenious curl makers and to drape a new frock into a bustle or add a brown derby hat to grandfather's "swallow tail."

Shortly after 10 o'clock Diamond Jim Bradys and Mae West imitators were ushered through a lane of antiquated motor cars which concealed the business office of the factory building, to a velvet-draped elevator hung with artificial pink roses and manned by a diminutive operator in checked suit and red boutonniere. On the third floor they found themselves in a wide recreation hall, where the hostess gave birthday parties when a child, and which had been redecorated into a dance hall of the 1890's with all attendants from cigar-chewing bartenders and musicians to hat-check boys in white aprons, walrus mustaches and oiled hair parted in the middle and slicked down.

Hunter's green velvet was wound about flower-trimmed pillars and green walls were topped by a pale green draped ceiling. Music played from a platform between "Tonsorial Parlors" varied from "After the Ball Is Over" to present-day swing tunes. The center of the floor, when not in use for dancing, became a flood-lighted stage for an old-fashioned burlesque show, with trick bicyclist, acrobats, fire eater, an animal show and the Fire Department quartet.

A fortune teller held forth in a birch bark Indian tepee on one side, and small tables for supper were inclosed in a walled garden at the other. A long mahogany bar, complete with old-style equipment, stretched across the north end of the room. In one corner stood an old buggy hitched to a stuffed horse and "driven" by a dressmaker's dummy, her costume typifying the high laced shoes and veiled hat popular when the buggy wended its way through St. Louis streets.

Mrs. Lane received in a pigeon blood red satin gown with a drop shoulder neckline finished with wired black lace. From her "hour glass" waist, the stiff skirt fell in a long train. She wore pendant earrings, bracelets and necklace of diamonds and rubies and red roses topping her pompadoured hair.

The host was Diamond Jim. A checked coat with green lapels fell over wide peg-topped trousers, and a wing collar with diamond-studded pin stood up from a red flannel vest buttoned in brass.

One of the most amusing costumes was worn by Mrs. Rufus Lackland Taylor, who represented a bathing girl of the mauve decade. Her authentic bloomered suit was fashioned of gray flannelette piped with red. Bloomers ended at the angle beneath a modest skirt, and over her hair, pompadoured high over spit curls, was a large green straw bonnet tied with red ribbons under her chin. She carried a tiny red calico umbrella.

There were several pairs of "twins." Mrs. Edward C. Simmons II and Mrs. Palmer Livingston Clarkson were dressed alike in watermelon pink organdie with vertical rows of black lace set on ruffled skirts. Tall black lace bonnets dripped with pink ostrich. Mrs. "twins" included Creighton Callfee and Robert Niekamp, in identical brown derbies, checked brown suits, choker collars, green ties and matching button hole bouquets.

Miss Clara Frampton wheeled in on a bicycle built for four with Joseph O. Toberman, Robert Robideaux and Chester Volkman, wearing an appropriate checkered suit, red cuffed trouser legs meeting high laced shoes, and an embroidered shirt waist and sailor hat.

The host's mother, Mrs. Charles E. Lane, was resplendent in jeweled black velvet, with real and stage diamonds hung indiscriminately about her neck and arms and an enormous black velvet picture hat heavy with plumes, atop a curled blond wig. In one hand she carried a red feather fan and in the other a cut steel bead bag of the tasseled variety.

Some of the guests went back even to Civil War days for costumes. Mrs. James B. Bergs chose a ruffled white frock with pantalettes to her ankles and an old

Tall black lace bonnets dripped with pink ostrich. Men "twins" included Creighton Calfee and Robert Niekamp, in identical brown derbies, checked brown suits, choker collars, green ties and matching button hole bouquets.

Miss Clara Frampton wheeled in on a bicycle built for four with Joseph O. Toberman, Robert Robideaux and Chester Volkman, wearing an appropriate checkered suit, red cuffed trouser legs meeting high laced shoes, and an embroidered shirt waist and sailor hat.

The host's mother, Mrs. Charles R. Lane, was resplendent in jeweled black velvet, with real and stage diamonds hung indiscriminately about her neck and arms and an enormous black velvet picture hat, heavy with plumes, atop a curled blond wig. In one hand she carried a red feather fan and in the other a cut steel bead bag of the tasseled variety.

Some of the guests went back even to Civil War days for costumes. Mrs. James B. Bergs chose a ruffled white frock with pantalettes to her ankles and an off

A Score of St. Louis Boys and Girls Attend Annual Princeton Junior Promenade Given in Picturesque Colonial Setting

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 19.

NEARLY a score of boys and girls from St. Louis danced far into the small hours this morning at the annual Princeton University junior prom. Highlight of Old Nassau's social season, the prom was attended by more than 600 pairs.

Miss Dorothy Cabell, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Matteson Cabell, attended the prom with James C. Burkham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elzey G. Burkham. Miss Cabell, a student at Mount Holyoke College, will spend the spring vacation in the East with her aunt, Mrs. R. J. Compton Jr. of New Canaan, Conn. Miss Anne Fisse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Fisse, was escorted by Lewis Warrington Baldwin Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Warrington Baldwin. Miss Fisse attended the Yale University prom last week-end, and afterward visited Miss Betty Hoerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland M. Hoerr, at Millbrook, N. Y., where Miss Hoerr is attending Bennett School.

Miss Laura Rand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Rand, was the guest of A. William Morriss III, son of Alexander W. Morriss Jr. Miss Rand, a senior at Mary Institute, also came East for the Yale prom and remained for Princeton festivities. Miss Jean Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen H. Mitchell, a Smith College student, was escorted by William G. Farrar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benedict Farrar. Miss Georgia Wright Simmons, daughter of Mrs. George Welch Simmons, another St. Louisan who came East last week for the Yale party, attended the Princeton dance with Russell Allan Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell E. Gardner Jr. Miss Mary Frances Hazelton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hazelton, was the guest of Berry Braselton Jr. of Waco, Tex. Miss Hazelton attends Sweetbriar College, Sweetbriar, Va. Miss Valentine Scott, Smith College student, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Scott Jr., was guest of her brother, William W. Scott.

David T. Graham, son of Dr. and Mrs. Evarts A. Graham, was host to Miss Margot Dethier of New York, and Edward W. Saunders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Saunders, escorted Miss Helen V. Kiendl of New York.

Decorations for the occasion were colonial, with Mount Vernon as the theme. The gymnasium, scene of the dance, was draped in blue and white satin. Across one end of the hall was a replica of George Washington's home, a large facade of white pillars, Southern smilax and palms filled corners of the hall.

Two well-known orchestras alternated in providing music for un-

St. Louis Colony at Palm Beach Returns Home as Season Ends

By W. E. REYBURN.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 19.

WINTER colonists here are returning to their homes after a season of much social activity. Sports contests have figured prominently in the winter program and beaches have been thronged. Homes and hotels have been the scene of numerous parties.

The few visitors from St. Louis remaining here for early spring are entertaining informally. Mrs. Marie Calhoun of New York, formerly of St. Louis, recently entertained a group of friends at luncheon at the Bath and Tennis Club. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Fusz and their daughter, Josephine, arrived Monday for a stay at the Brazilian Court Hotel. J. B. Corby has joined Mrs. Corby at their apartment on Coconut Row. Mr. and Mrs. J. Terry West, formerly of St. Louis, were guests at a dinner party given this week by Mrs. McAlpin Bell at her Seaspray home in honor of her mother, Mrs. George L. McAlpin.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Liese of Belleville, Ill., gave a tea recently for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Prufrock and Mrs. Louis C. Hermann and the latter's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Gerhart. At another tea Mr. and Mrs. Liese were host and hostess to 10 friends at the Breakers Hotel. Mrs. Prufrock was also hostess at a tea at the Breakers. Her guests included Mrs. Hermann, Mr. and Mrs. Gerhart, Mrs. William F. Peters, Mrs. John D. McCarthy, Mrs. A. W. Wrieden and Mrs. Wrieden's daughter, Katherine. Mrs. Hermann gave a dinner at the Everglades Club Thursday night for a group of St. Louis friends.

Lenten Season Brings Variety Of Activities

Flower and Kennel Club Show Openings Next Saturday Provide Interest for Social St. Louis.

WITH Easter four Sundays away, social St. Louis turns its attention to the cultural and educational activities of the Lenten season. Most of the entertaining being done takes the form of small, informal parties coincident with these affairs.

Perhaps of primary interest is the opening Saturday of the Greater St. Louis Flower and Garden Show, sponsored by the St. Louis Flower Show Association. The many floral organizations in the city and county indicate the great number of gardening enthusiasts living here.

Displays planned and executed by local groups will constitute one of the most interesting features of the show, to be held for one week at the Arena. These projects will be shown with more than 20 other entries representing not only St. Louis but other Missouri cities. Among the local arrangements is the octagonal-shaped display, 40 feet in diameter, being built by the St. Louis Garden Club, with Mrs. William O. Shock in charge. Mrs. Ir A. Stevens is president.

The Vandeventer Place Garden Club calls its project, "Sun Dial." It is being executed under the direction of Miss Emily Eaton, president. The Webster Groves Home Garden Club, headed by Mrs. Jasper Blackburn, is building a display called "Garden and Work Bench." An educational exhibit on pruning is being planned by the Associated Garden Clubs of Kirkwood. Their president is Mrs. Russell H. Brandau.

Other entries include: "Outdoor Living Room" by the Rosemary Garden Club; "Grandmother's Garden," St. Louis Hills Garden Club; "Before and After Gardens," St. Louis Horticulture Society; "Garden of the Seven Dwarfs," Miriam Garden Club; displays by the Conservation and Roadside Beautification Committee of the Federated Women's Clubs of Missouri, and Webster Acres Garden Club. Mrs. Edward J. Walsh is building a shadow box display through which she will illustrate harmonizing backgrounds for various flowers. She is planning varied color schemes for this miniature display.

A new feature this year will be the estate garden class, open to owners of large gardens for which the owners maintain greenhouses and employ a gardner. Entrants for this amateur class include Mrs. Arthur B. Baer of Ladue road and Mrs. Erwin P. Stupp, whose estate is at 510 Price road. Mrs. Richard Chomeau, 427 North Dickson avenue, Kirkwood, will display a private altar decoration, and about 10 churches will enter similar displays.

These gardening enthusiasts are planning small cocktail parties and luncheons for friends from out of town here for the event.

While women are busy with flower details, dog fanciers are concerning themselves with the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club show to be held next Saturday and Sunday at the Municipal Auditorium. Committee members will be hosts to exhibitors and judges from other cities.

Entertainment features for the show this year will be given in a special ring away from the actual judging. Of interest will be the demonstration in retrieving ducks and pigeons by Frank Hogan's golden and Labrador retrievers. Live fowl will be used and a pond is being built for the event.

An item for the opening night will be the "Lady and Her Dog" class, in which the winner will be chosen for the costume best typifying the country of the origin of her pet.

Teams of four high school girls each representing public and private schools in the city and county, will be another entertainment feature new with this show. The judging will be not only on physical merits of the dogs but the manner of handling.

On Sunday there will be the showmanship classes for children, a popular event in past shows, and that evening will be the parade of champions. The final event will be the selection of the champion of the show.

John Kennard Wallace is the newly-elected president of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club and the board of governors assisting him in putting on the show includes: Edward K. Love, chairman; D. Calhoun Jones, Edwin A. Lemp, Samuel Plant, Paul R. Grace, Dr. H. W. Soper, Asa B. Wallace, George D. Dodd, M. J. Connor, J. S. Lehmann and Vertrees Young.

The Junior League program for Lent includes an illustrated lecture on tapestry, Wednesday morning, April 6, at 11 o'clock, by Mrs. Blanche Alexander of the Metropolitan Museum. The lecture is to be illustrated with Metropolitan Wilson-Todd Wedding To Be in Newark, N. J.

DR. AND MRS. DAVID C. TODD, 5669 Cabanne avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy, and Joseph H. Wilson of Cranford, N. J.

The wedding will take place Friday, April 1, at The Old First Church of Newark, N. J., with only members of both families present. Miss Todd and her parents will leave the last of this month for Newark.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Illinois, and a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. She recently returned to St. Louis from Houston, Tex., where she has been employed as personnel director of a department store. Dr. Todd, father of the bride, is a member of the St. Louis Board of Education.

Mr. Wilson, son of Mrs. Emma Wilson of Payson, Utah, a graduate of Brigham Young University, Salt Lake City, Utah, is a pilot for Eastern Air Lines and a Lieutenant in the Army Air Corps Reserve. Mr. Wilson and his fiancee will make their home at Cranford.

Museum slides, and will open an exhibition of the speaker's work, which is to be held for a week. Mrs. Alexander is considered an authority on the origin and history of tapestry and is a skilled weaver.

A luncheon and fashion show will be held at the clubroom Tuesday. League members modeling spring costumes will include Mrs. Alanson C. Brown Jr., Miss Anne Shapleigh, Mrs. Edward H. Miller, Mrs. Drew Brown, Miss Carol Randolph and Miss Barbara Brodhead.

Mary Henry Chooses April 9 for Wedding

MISS MARY CAROLYN HENRY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Henry, 1702 Big Bend boulevard, has chosen Saturday, April 9, as the date for her marriage to Hugh McClymont of Harrisburg, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. John McClymont of Glasgow Scotland.

The ceremony will be performed at Eden Seminary in Webster Groves at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the Rev. Rhinehart Schroedel officiating.

Miss Henry will be attended by Miss Margaret Mary Durnin, and Mr. McClymont's brother, John, of Geneseo, N. Y., will be best man. Dudley Brewer and Albert Gunmersbach of St. Louis will be ushers.

Miss Henry has sung in the Municipal Opera of St. Louis, for the last five years, as has her fiance, who came to St Louis with an Eastern company for three summers.

J. A. McCollum to Wed Marcia Lee Nelson

THE engagement of Miss Marcia Lee Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Nelson, 7433 Warwick drive, and Joseph Albert McCollum was announced Friday night at a bridge party at the Nelson home. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Albert McCollum, 3965 Greer avenue.

Miss Nelson attended Goodman Theater Dramatic School in Chicago and Washington University. Her sorority is Gamma Phi Beta. Mr. McCollum, a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, is a graduate of the School of Journalism, University of Missouri. He is now living at Paris, Ill.

The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Engagement Revealed

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH C. McLAIN, 7226 St. Andrew's road, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Margaret, and John R. Johnson, at a tea Sunday afternoon, March 13, given at Norwood Hills Country Club. Mr. Johnson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Johnson Jr., 7370 Kingsbury boulevard.

Miss McLain attended Incarnate Word Academy, St. Joseph's Academy, and is a member of Kappa Alpha Phi sorority. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of the Washington University School of Engineering and a member of Theta Xi fraternity.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Greenwich, Conn., and Harry H. Enders of Tuckahoe, N. Y.

Miss Rowe, a great-niece of the late Mrs. Elizabeth J. Somers — founder of Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington—made her debut in Chicago during the season of 1932-33. She attended the Mary C. Wheeler School in Providence, R. I., and the French School in this city. Miss Langenberg and the bride-elect became acquainted at Wianno, Mass., where they both were summer visitors.

Mr. Hosac, a member of the Sleepy Hollow Country Club, studied at the Westminster and Hun Schools in Princeton, N. J., at the University of Virginia.

Miss Langenberg will arrive here from St. Louis several days before the wedding.

Anniversary Observed At Costume Ball

shoulder bodice with which she wore a flower-trimmed bonnet tied in back. Mrs. Holt Tipton, whose frock originated in the same era, was in black lace with a train. A tiny green watteau hat with plumes curling over her hair was worn by Mrs. Frank O. Watts Jr., with her lovely old strained gown of black net, borrowed from the wardrobe of somebody's grandmother.

One of the elaborate "Mae West" costumes was worn by Mrs. James B. Peddle. Pink speckled ostrich trailed off her wide brimmed hat, and a matching pink feather boa encircled her neck. Her gown was a tight, sleeveless, black lace model, with which she wore short gloves.

A champagne tinted faille silk gown with a closely buttoned basque bodice, made in 1876, was worn by Miss Elizabeth Johnston, and in the wardrobe of Gentry Shelton's grandmother, the late Mrs. Theodore Shelton, was found a heavy black satin trimmed with bands of white satin, passementerie and ruffled chiffon, worn with a picture hat and feather neckpiece by Mrs. Shelton. From the same wardrobe came a flesh tinted, tightly corseted gown with a high, boned collar worn by Mrs. Frederick Niedringhaus.

Tailored suits especially popular with the younger belles of 50 years ago were resurrected. Mrs. Kenneth Blase, the former Miss Martha Westlake, wore a gray checked one braided in black, a high-collared shirt waist and a tiny sailor hat beneath which a snood carefully held her hair in place. Mrs. George Skinner might have been the original of one of Charles Dana Gibson's models. Her gown was of the shirtwaist variety worn for "dress up" occasions. Of white linen, it was trimmed with hand tucking, French knots and Irish lace, and her sailor hat, trimmed with violets, was held on by a wide face veil.

Miss Elise White, Miss Aurelia Gerhard, who went with her fiance, Arthur Gaines, and Mrs. Robert Black Jr., accompanied by her handle bar-moustached husband, were all in satin of the bustle variety, and Mrs. T. M. Sayman, Mrs. Lane's mother, wore an accordion pleated net cape with a battenburg lace yoke over her slate gray satin frock.

Men sported heavy watch chains over fancy waist coats, trousers many times too short and tight for present day style, linen dusters once popular for motoring, and carried gold tooth picks and even champaigne swizzlers.

Annual U. D. C. Party Planned for April 22

THE annual card party of the St. Louis Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy will be given Friday afternoon, April 22, at 2 o'clock at the Forest Park Hotel. The proceeds will go to the scholarship fund. Mrs. W. E. Liggett is president of the chapter, Mrs. O. H. Bill is general chairman for the party and Mrs. J. G. Minniece is vice-chairman.

The chairman of committees are: Mrs. Charles H. Seay, place; Mrs. Charles M. Morris, press; Mrs. J. G. Calhoun, tickets; Mrs. J. C. Crowdus, cards and tallies; Mrs. L. H. Dieckroeger, candy; Mrs. C. B. Williams, tables; Mrs. J. U. Menteer, hospitality and Mrs. E. P. Meiners, candy.

dergraduates and their guests. Beginning at 11 o'clock last night the bands played from opposite sides of the gymnasium, stopping only in time to allow dancers to watch the early morning sun come up over Princeton's Palmer Stadium.

A feature of this year's prom was a number of program dances. The cards were introduced in an attempt to establish a custom used for many years at both Yale and Vassar Colleges. Each dance was divided into two melodies, during the first of which no cutting was permitted. Stags, however, were allowed to break in during the second half of the dance. In order to avoid confusion in finding partners, booths were built for the 18 upperclass eating clubs, the sophomores, freshmen and non-club men. At 2 o'clock supper was served and a floor show presented.

A second dance will be held tonight with music beginning three hours earlier than last night, and scheduled to stop at midnight.

For the dramatically-minded two plays were given at Princeton last evening before the prom. Theater Intime, the University's undergraduate dramatic organization, presented its current production, "The Life and Death of Sir John Falstaff," with Richard A. Baer of Washington, D. C., in the title role. Mr. Baer also selected and arranged scenes from Shakespeare's plays illustrating the tragi-comic escapades of the raucous knight. Mr. Baer played in St. Louis during the winter in the Triangle show. The play again will be given this evening. Also presented last night was a revival of "Drake's Drum," musical production of the Triangle Club during the 1923-24 season, and one of the best known of the club's plays.

Book Review for Orphanage.

Mrs. Foster Brown will give a book review for th ebenefit of the German Protestant Orphans' Home, St. Charles Rock road, at Bethel Evangelical Church, Garrison and Greer avenue, this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The review is sponsored by the Junior Auxiliary of the home.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, March 19.

At a tea the other day, the Poe sisters noted sister teams in Washington society of today, and recalled those of yesterday. Among those of today were the Patten sisters, Anne Randolph and her sister, Miss Mary (Polly) and Mrs. Harold Walker and her half-sister, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstadt.

In the Theodore Roosevelt administration Miss Alice von L. Meyer and her sister, Miss Julia von L. Meyer, although of different ages, dressed exactly alike on all occasions. Miss Alice von L. Meyer is Mrs. Phillip Coffin of Washington and her sister is Mme. Brambilla of Rome.

Among this season's debutantes are Miss Anne and Miss Eleanor Bloem, sisters.

In Jefferson County, West Virginia, are Miss Mary Scott Thomson, Miss Imogene Thomson and their sister, Mrs. Washington Grove, formerly Miss Elizabeth Thomson. Another of these sisters is Mrs. James Carson Breckinridge, wife of Gen. Breckinridge, in command at Quantico, and their sister-in-law, Mrs. James M. Thomson of New Orleans, formerly Miss Genevieve Champ Clark of Missouri.

Now fashion has approved anew the wearing of a veil over the face there has been a revival of interest in the fine art of arranging such adornment.

At a tea dance just after the World War Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps was considered to be wearing her veil in the most effective manner. She wore a large brimmed hat with a dotted veil which fitted smoothly under her chin and was drawn back tightly. In that day, too, Mrs. George Vanderbilt now Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wore a black coat dress trimmed with black lynx, a wide brimmed hat with tiny ostrich feathers about the crown and a veil fitted over the hat, hair and face. In those days, Madame Jusserand, wife of the Ambassador of France to the United States wore veils over her small, flower-trimmed hats.

Baltimore held two special attractions for Washingtonians last week. One occasion was to view Renoir's "Tete de Femme" at the Baltimore Museum which has been lent to it by Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge, widow of the late Senator, which they had in their Washington home.

The other event was the ice carnival on Friday and Saturday at the Baltimore Ice Club at which Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lee Taylor played leading roles.

Art Exhibit This Afternoon.

An exhibit of the works of the students of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, will be held this afternoon at the Monday Club, 37 South Maple avenue, Webster Groves, from 3 until 5 o'clock. Mrs. Gustav F. Goetsch will be the hostess.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, March 19.

At a tea the other day, the Poe sisters noted sister teams in the Washington society of today, and recalled those of yesterday. Among those of today were the Patten sisters, Anne Randolph and their sister, Miss Mary (Polly) and Mrs. Harold Walker and her half-sister, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenbinder.

In the Theodore Roosevelt administration Miss Alice von L. Meyer and her sister, Miss Julia von L. Meyer, although of different ages, dressed exactly alike on all occasions. Miss Alice von L. Meyer is Mrs. Phillip Coffin of Washington and her sister is Mme. Bramwell of Rome.

Among this season's debutantes are Miss Anne and Miss Eleanor Boehm, sisters.

In Jefferson County, West Virginia, are Miss Mary Scott Thomson, Miss Imogene Thomson and their sister, Mrs. Washington Grove, formerly Miss Elizabeth Thomson. Another of these sisters is Mrs. James Carson Breckinridge, wife of Gen. Breckinridge, in command at Quantico, and their sister-in-law, Mrs. James M. Thomson of New Orleans, formerly Miss Genevieve Champ Clark of Missouri.

Now fashion has approved anew the wearing of a veil over the face where has been a revival of interest in the fine art of arranging such adornment.

At a tea dance just after the World War Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps was considered to be wearing her veil in the most effective manner. She wore a large trimmed hat with a dotted veil which fitted smoothly under her chin and was drawn back tightly. On that day, too, Mrs. George Vanderbilt now Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wore a black coat dress trimmed with black lynx, a wide brimmed hat with tiny ostrich feathers about the crown and a veil fitted over the hat, hair and face. In those days, Madame Jusserand, wife of the Ambassador of France to the United States wore veils over her small, flower-trimmed hats.

Baltimore held two special attractions for Washingtonians last week. One occasion was to view Benoir's "Tete de Femme" at the Baltimore Museum which has been lent to it by Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge, widow of the late Senator, which they had in their Washington home.

The other event was the ice carnival on Friday and Saturday at the Baltimore Ice Club at which Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lee Taylor played leading roles.

Art Exhibit This Afternoon.

An exhibit of the works of the students of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, will be held this afternoon at the Monday Club, 37 South Maple avenue, Webster Groves, from 3 until 5 o'clock. Mrs. Gustav F. Goetsch will be the hostess.

MRS. THOMAS HARPER COBBS and Mrs. Sam Greenwill assist Mrs. Clifford Cornell in receiving guests at a tea given in honor of Mrs. Emil Schram of Washington, Friday afternoon, March 25, from 3 to 4 o'clock at Hotel DeSoto.

Mrs. Woodson K. Woods Jr., Mrs. J. Howard Denny and Mrs. Frank E. Agnew Jr., will serve.

The tea precedes the ninth annual dinner at Jefferson College to be given the same evening, and at which Mr. Schram will be guest speaker. Mr. Schram is director of Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Large Fund Raised By Junior Leagues

Special Correspondence to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 19.

THE Junior League Magazine for April, just published, contains interesting information as to how the various member leagues make money for community activities, and how they spend it. A comprehensive report, recently completed by Mrs. Robert E. Dingman, secretary of the ways and means committee of the Associated Junior Leagues of America, contains an accounting of more than half a million dollars. Of this sum more than $124,000 was spent in the adult health field; $49,000 on work with children; $228,000 on children's health (hospitals, convalescent homes, work with handicapped and children's clinics); $8000 on relief (Red Cross); $23,000 in the family field; $29,000 on leisure time activities (camps, playgrounds and arts and crafts); $35,000 for community planning activities (community funds, central volunteer bureau and social service); $3000 on cultural activities; $1000 on children's theater; $3000 on surveys and more than $10,000 on miscellaneous projects.

The report also lists various types of money-raising activities successfully conducted by member leagues last year, with social fuctions the favorite. The largest sum was raised by means of theatrical productions. Other means follow: Sports events, rummage sales, fashion shows, art exhibits, rummage shops, gift shops and tea rooms, children's theater and libraries.

The report covers all Junior Leagues (137 in the United States, six in Canada and one each in Mexico and Hawaii). Since then three new groups have been added, making a total of 148.

THE Post-Dispatch can not undertake to guarantee the safe return of unsolicited photographs.

National Session Of Women Voters Here Next Month

MRS. ARTHUR STROCKSTROM is general chairman for the League of Women Voters' national convention, which will be held at Hotel Jefferson from April 25 to 29. About 1000 women will be here as delegates. The purpose of the convention is to adopt a program of activity.

The National League of Women Voters, with 466 local branches in the United States, was founded in St. Louis in 1919, when the Woman Suffrage Amendment became effective. The league divides the interests of its members into six departments, and all of these are studied only insofar as Government touches them. The six are: Education, Foreign Policy, Child Welfare, Economic Welfare, Legal Status of Women and the Operation of Government.

Expecting that questions of economic policy and foreign policy will concern members most in their formulation of their program for the next two years, the convention committee intends to provide a background for these decisions in the form of three symposiums at which authorities will present the questions, "What do Americans want Government to do?" and "What will they equip it to do?" These meetings will be open to the public.

Mrs. Strocksthom is chairman of the Department of Government and Education of the Missouri League of Women Voters. She is also a director of John Burroughs School and a member of the St. Louis Girl Scout Council.

Miss Rosemary Lilie Wed to R. A. Gaebler

THE marriage of Miss Rosemary Louise Lilie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lilie, 4948 Reber place, and Raymond A. Gaebler, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gaebler, 3641 Dunnica avenue, took place at 5:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. Edwin C. Nesbit performed the ceremony before an altar banked with palms, white gladioli and stock.

The bride wore a black wool costume suit with hat of rose straw and rose accessories. She wore white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley in her corsage. Miss Genevieve Lilie, her sister's maid of honor, wore a marine blue wool suit, with powder blue accessories, and Mrs. Ty M. Evans, matron of honor, also wore a suit of marine blue wool, with yellow accessories. Both had corsages of yellow daisies and forget-me-nots.

Mr. Gaebler was attended by his brother, Ralph, as best man. Paul Stalmann Jr. and Hubert Steinmeyer were ushers.

A dinner was given at Bevo Mill after the wedding for the bridal party and immediate families.

Mr. Gaebler and his bride are graduates of the University of Missouri. They will live at 5058 Pernod avenue.

Chamberlain's Lotion is a fixture in offices everywhere. One reason for its popularity among all business girls is that after using it, papers never stick to the fingers. Chamberlain's, a clear, golden liquid, dries quickly. Above all, it is never sticky, greasy, gummy nor "messy." Because it satinizes, it helps keep dainty fingers lovely, skin smooth and attractive. At all toilet goods counters.

JEFFERSON BARRACKS

GEN. HUGH A. DRUM will spend Tuesday at the post on an inspection tour of the Jefferson Barracks CCC district.

Col. and Mrs. C. Hartwell Bonesteel and their daughter, Miss Eleanor, spent Wednesday night as the guests of Col. and Mrs. Joseph A. Atkins. Col. Hartwell has been stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill., and now are on leave until their sailing for their new station in Hawaii.

The annual West Point graduates' dinner was held at Jefferson Barracks last night. As West Point was founded March 19, 1802, that day always has been celebrated by graduates.

Mrs. James R. Urquhart and her daughter, Lois, will leave tomorrow to join Maj. Urquhart and their other two children, Jane Ann and Bob, in New York. Maj. Urquhart will sail from New York with his family for his new station in the Philippines.

Capt. Reginald W. Hubbell left this morning to join his wife and family in New York. He and his family will sail March 25 for their new station in Hawaii. Mrs. Hubbell and her daughter, Elizabeth, have been the guests of Mrs. Hubbell's mother, Mrs. F. F. Fletcher of New York, for the last three weeks.

Mrs. William H. Arnold of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., is the guest of her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mullen of St. Louis. Mrs. Arnold was formerly Miss Elizabeth Mullen. Capt. and Mrs. Arnold will soon leave Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he has been a student at the Staff and Command School for Fort Benning, Ga., where Capt. Arnold will be an instructor in the infantry school.

Capt. Lee W. Haney has been ordered to Jefferson Barracks from Puerto Rico and will report in July.

Lieut. John R. V. Dickson has received word that the order sending him to Hawaii had been revoked.

Capt. and Mrs. Roy M. Thorougman are spending this week-end in Moberly, Mo., visiting relatives.

Lieut. and Mrs. Andrew B. Zwaska have as their guests Mrs. Zwaska's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray H. Gilfoy. Mr. and Mrs. Gilfoy recently closed their home in Milwaukee and are on their way to Arizona to remain for several months.

Frank Muller, son of Capt. and Mrs. William G. Muller, who is a student at the University of Illinois, spent last week-end here with his parents.

The first of the spring parades by the Sixth Infantry and Sixth Platoon of Tanks took place Friday afternoon. Weather permitting, these parades will continue throughout the spring and summer months at about 4 o'clock on Friday afternoons. They are open to the public.

Pearl Franklin to Speak At Hadassah Dinner

MISS PEARL FRANKLIN, lecturer on political science at Wright Junior College, Chicago, will address the St. Louis Chapter of Hadassah and its guests this evening at the annual dinner at Hotel Statler. Miss Franklin, who is now a member of the national board of Hadassah and honorary president of the Chicago chapter, served for nine years as president of the Chicago chapter and for several years as vice-president of National Hadassah. She has visited Palestine twice and last summer was one of the delegates representing Hadassah at the World Zionist Congress and at the Youth Aliyah Conference in Zurich, Switzerland.

Other speakers at the dinner will be Mrs. Morris Snitzer, chairman of arrangements, and Mrs. Alex S. Wolf, president of the chapter. Miss Maxine Kippel will play several violin selections, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Sam Kippel. The dinner will be followed by dancing.

ST. CHARLES ITEMS

THE annual election of officers of the St. Charles Country Club board was held last week and Allen W. Clarke was chosen president; Charles B. Mudd, secretary and David Weil, treasurer. Chairmen for various committees for the year were chosen and plans for improving the golf course and social activities were discussed.

The first bridge party of the season was held Thursday night, a St. Patrick's day party with tables of both contract bridge and pinochle. Favors indicative of the occasion were given to each guest. The committee in charge of this party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Becker and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice T. Martin.

Mrs. Charles S. Demaree, state chairman of the Foreign Policy group of the League of Women Voters and member of the program planning group for the state, and Miss Jean Blythe, president of the St. Louis League, met with the Child Welfare group of the local league last week at the home of Miss Ernestine Thro, 540 Monroe street. Mrs. Lester Prinster is local chairman of this group. These visitors surveyed the work done by the local organization and told of the proposed program for the national convention which will be held in St. Louis April 25 to 29. The St. Charles League is planning to be represented at this convention, their delegates to be chosen at the next meeting.

Invitations have been sent out by the League of Women Voters here to all civic organizations having an interest in child welfare work to send representatives to the general meeting of this group at the St. Charles Public Library March 29. It is hoped that a board or council, chosen from the various organizations, will be formed to correct duplication of effort and to co-ordinate the county child welfare work done by professional and club workers.

Two representatives of the League of Women Voters of this city formed part of the St. Charles

Two representatives of the League of Women Voters of this city formed part of the St. Charles Country Club card room Tuesday met at the County Courthouse March 8, when plans were made to take care of Child Welfare work in St. Charles County. The meeting was called by Lloyd Webb, supervisor of this work in the county. Lay members attending were Mrs. Prinster, Mrs. Saul Wolff, Hugh I. Holmes, Ben Jolly and Mrs. Van Burkleo of Portage des Sioux, Mo.

The St. Charles Junior Service League met at the St. Charles County Club card room Tuesday evening with Miss Lucille Kister, president, conducting the meeting. Following the business session, there were tables of cards and a luncheon served. A treasure hunt was planned for the April meeting.

A benefit movie at the Strand Theater was held by the Junior League Friday and Saturday nights. The proceeds will be put in a fund for underprivileged children. Plans to create a milk fund this year for school children without milk in their homes have proved to be too large an undertaking but will be attempted next year with the aid of other civic organizations.

The next book review of the series of six sponsored by the American Association of University Women this spring will be given by Mr. Robert V. Niedner, attorney, at the St. Charles Public Library tomorrow night. He will review "Madame Curie" written by her youngest daughter, Eve Curie. The last review given by George M. Null on "The Importance of Living" by Lin Yu Tang found the library clubrooms crowded.

Plans are going forward for the Pageant of Progress in which all schools, colleges and civic organizations in St. Charles will take part. The pageant will be sponsored by the Kiwanis Club Sept. 8, 9, 10 and 11. The City granted this week the use of the large natural amphitheater adjoining the north and east sections of Blanchette Park for the Pageant. The plat of land owned by the Wabash Railroad, east of the City Swimming pool, also will be used. The historical theme, covering the arrival here of Louis Blanchette and the coming of settlers of various nationalities together with the changes of government, is being outlined by Dr. Kate Gregg of Lindenwood College.

The annual operetta of the St. Charles High School was given at the school auditorium Friday and Saturday evenings. "Tune In," the setting a broadcasting station, was the name of the musical production which also included five dance numbers, the gypsy dance, the girls' tap, waltz, Hollywood bound and the boys' specialty chorus. Miss Clara Regan, physical education instructor, directed the performance.

The Rev. and Mrs. Frederick Niedner, 115 South Sixth street, their son, Robert V. Niedner, daughter, Caroline, and the Rev. Mr. Niedner's sister, Miss Caroline Niedner, went to Columbia, Mo., last Sunday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Paul Niedner.

A. J. Keller motored last week from Los Angeles to visit friends here before going to join his sisters, Mrs. John Day and Mrs. C. E. Fridley at Defiance, Mo., for several months.

At a recent meeting of P. E. O., held at the home of Mrs. Maurice T. Martin, 207 North Fifth street, the following officers were elected for the year: President, Mrs. John Thomas; vice-president, Mrs. Matthew J. Gauss; recording secretary, Mrs. Allen W. Clarke; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. L. Hardin; treasurer, Mrs. George M. Null; chaplain, Mrs. Theodore C. Bruere Jr., and guard, Mrs. Maurice T. Martin.

Pi Gamma Mu, musical sorority of Lindenwood College, held a tea in the library clubrooms Thursday afternoon.

Miss Marie Emmons entertained 12 members of her contract bridge club at a luncheon in her home, 1201 North Fifth street, yesterday

Mrs. George V. Gross was hostess this week to the Tuesday Afternoon Bridge Club at her home, 711 Monroe street.

Mrs. Francis B. Rauch, 1830 Watson street, held a session at the Monday afternoon bridge group this week.

See for Yourself How Quickly Hands Grow Softer and Smoother

NOW! A hand lotion that goes to work faster than most lotions—on hands that are red and rough. A lotion that is really non-sticky and quick-drying—that vanishes almost instantly it's applied!

This new creation cost Bauer & Black over $250,000 to develop and perfect—and has been given the name Velure. One of its most unusual features is its self-penetrating action that makes it sink into skin crevices automatically. No hard rubbing to work it in—no sticky surface film to stain your clothes and gloves.

In addition, certain ingredients in Velure help to conserve natural, skin-softening oils. Thus lightening the excessive burden on skin glands that make hands prematurely coarse and "old."

TRY VELURE FREE—For a free, generous trial bottle of this new vanishing lotion send your name to Bauer & Black (Div. of the Kendall Co.), Dept. O, 2507 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. See how amazingly different it really is.

Balfour Declaration To Be Celebrated

BRITH SHOLOM CONGREGATION and its five affiliated groups will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Balfour Declaration at a mass meeting Wednesday night at 8:15 o'clock at the Congregation, 6166 Delmar boulevard.

Twenty years ago Lord Arthur James Balfour, in an effort to unite Jews throughout the world, asserted that Palestine was to become a national homeland for Jewish people.

Guest speaker at the anniversary celebration will be Rabbi J. Marshall Taxay of Terre Haute, Ind. Other speakers include: Louis J. Robinson, president of the men's club of the congregation; Joseph Sacks, president of Brith Sholom; Rabbi Jacob R. Masur and David Berenstein, president of the Zionist Organization of St. Louis. Rabbi Taxay, spiritual leader of Temple Israel at Terre Haute, is the author of several books, including "What Every Writer Should Read," "Jubilant Judaism" and "Life's Tabernacles." He has traveled throughout Europe and Asia and in 1933 served as a member of the University of Moscow Seminar.

A musical program will be given by Arthur Baron, first violinist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, accompanied by Morris Kessler, and Miss Shirely Mae Fox, accompanied by Miss Mildred Fox.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the meeting consists of: Mr. Sacks, Mr. Robinson, Mrs. J. H. Iskiwitch, Mrs. Erwin Fendelman, A. J. Zwibelman, Henry J. Baris and Rabbi Masur.

The meeting is open to the public, with members of B'nai Brith lodges in St. Louis especially invited.

Weddings and Engagements

Pearlstein-Wittels

THE marriage of Miss Delphine Phyllis Wittels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Wittels of Tulsa, Ok., formerly of St. Louis, and Samuel Pearlstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Pearlstein, 7275 Forsythe boulevard, took place Sunday night, March 13, at Forest Park Hotel. Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman performed the ceremony at 8 o'clock.

The bride wore a white lace Queen Elizabeth gown, and carried lilies-of-the-valley and orchids in her bouquet. Her tulle veil was fastened to a coronet of tulle and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Sophie Pearlstein was maid of honor for Miss Wittels, and Mrs. David Bluestein acted as matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Miss Velle and Miss Frances Wittels of Tulsa, Miss Mozelle Wittels and Miss Jeanette Specter. They and the maid of honor were gowned in powder blue net, and all carried bouquets of spring flowers. Mrs. Bluestein wore peach lace.

Rosalie Bluestein and Mary Jane Harris, in royal blue net, acted as flower girls, and carried colonial bouquets of spring flowers. Paul Pearlstein was best man, and Dr. Al Kramer, Leonard Moldowsky, Julius Budowsky of Drumright, Ok., and Artie Aftergut served as ushers.

Mr. Pearlstein and his bride are spending their honeymoon in the East.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearlstein both attended Washington University, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity.

Capilevitz-Joblonsky

Mrs. Kate Joblonsky, 1399 Belt avenue, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Dorothy Joblonsky, and Edward Capilevitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Capilevitz of East St. Louis.

Feldman-Weiner

The engagement has been announced of Miss Rose Weiner, 1400 Temple place, and Mike Feldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Feldman, 1409 Granville place.

News of the engagement was told at an afternoon party given March 11 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Weiner, 1410 Temple place, brother and sister-in-law of the bride-to-be.

Levin-Rosenfeld

The marriage of Miss Juliet Rosenfeld and Abraham Levin took place last Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the presence of the immediate families at the study of Rabbi A. E. Halpern. Mrs. Levin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max M. Rosenfeld, 136 Arlington avenue, and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Levin, 1519 Arlington avenue.

The Forest Park Hotel was the scene of the reception immediately after the service. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Levin gave a dinner at Novack's Farm in honor of their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary as well as the marriage of their son.

The bridal pair will make their home here after a short honeymoon.

Lower-Scharringhausen

Miss Gladys May Scharringhausen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Scharringhausen, 4542 Shenandoah avenue, and Jack Lower were married Saturday afternoon, March 12, at 4 o'clock at First Congregational Church chapel. About 200 relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony read by the Rev. Robert Porter.

The bride wore a beige costume with accessories of copper tan and a shoulder corsage of purple orchids. Miss Mary Elizabeth Scott, a student at Monticello College, served as maid of honor. She wore a costume suit of black with a corsage of gardenias. Frederick Brunk was best man.

After the ceremony a dinner was held at the Forest Park Hotel with a reception at the Scharringhausen home later in the evening.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Everett Fischer, 5109 St. Louis avenue.

The bridal pair will make their home at 4542 North Kingshighway.

Herzog-Vanden Boom

Miss Edith Walker Vanden Boom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Vanden Boom of the Parkedge Hotel, became the bride of Frederick Marvin Herzog, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Herzog, 4534 Pope avenue, Thursday, March 10. The wedding took place at Bowman Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. E. L. Brown officiating.

Woolf-Pollack

The wedding of Miss Yetta Pollack, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Pollack, 3949 Russell avenue, and Nathan Woolf of Terre Haute, Ind., will take place this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Pollack. Rabbi A. E. Halpern is to perform the ceremony. Mr. Woolf is the son of David Woolf, 4707 Newberry terrace. After a honeymoon trip to New York and Washington, Mr. Woolf and his bride will live in Terre Haute.

Fontbonne Alumnae.

The Fontbonne Alumnae Association will sponsor a travelogue in technicolor, "Out of the Land of Caravans," presented by Miss Marion Haas, Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the college. Miss Haas took the pictures on two recent trips around the world. Arrangements are in charge of the following committee: Miss Mary Belle McCoole, chairman; Mrs. John Faust, Miss Clare Harder, Miss Dorothy Coleman and Miss Minnie Naggi.

Returns From Hot Springs.

He installs your telephone the day you need it because management said...
"Let's put telephones in at the customer's convenience!"
BETTER and better telephone service, at lower cost to the user, has been for years the goal of the men who head the telephone company. Their efforts, linked with those of every other telephone worker, have brought this result, among others: today most new telephones are put in the day you need them.
In 1926 it took 10 days to get a telephone after you ordered it. Today 98 out of every 100 are installed the day customers need them...usually the next day.

DEAN HAWKES OF COLUMBIA U. TO ADDRESS ST. LOUIS ALUMNI

Mathematician Will Speak Wednesday Night at Dinner at Missouri Athletic Association.

Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of the Columbia University College of Liberal Arts, New York, will speak Wednesday evening at a dinner meeting of the Columbia University Alumni Association of St. Louis, at Missouri Athletic Association, 407 Washington avenue.

Dean Hawkes has been a member of the faculty of the university since 1910, beginning as a professor of mathematics after serving 12 years at Yale. He is widely known as a mathematician and college administrator, and is the author of a number of books on geometry and higher mathematics. He became Dean of Columbia College in 1918.

The St. Louis alumni association annually selects three to five students for undergraduate and post-graduate scholarships at the university. The association's scholarship committee comprises principals of St. Louis public high schools and the president of the association, Dr. Eugene Tavenner of Washington University.

BUILDING TO BE TORN DOWN

Two-Story Structure at 135-45W Russell Vacant 10 Years.

A two-story brick building at 135-45W Russell avenue will be wrecked under a permit obtained yesterday by the owner, Frank Oechsner, 4429 Holly avenue.

Oechsner told a Post-Dispatch reporter the building, formerly occupied by the Russell Packing Co., had been vacant about 10 years and had deteriorated.

Catholic Rural Life Auxiliary.

The Catholic Rural Life Auxiliary of the St. Louis Archdiocese will hold its annual meeting and election of officers Tuesday evening at the Motherhouse of the Sisters of St. Mary, 1100 Bellevue avenue, Richmond Heights.

A stage revue depicting phases of school work will be presented by the teachers and students of the Wellston advanced school grades at Wellston High School auditorium at 8 p. m. Thursday.

SCHOOL TAX CAMPA'GN TO START TOMORROW

Citizens Committee Will Conduct Drive for Retention of 85-Cent Rate.

With two weeks remaining before the special election on retention of the school tax rate of 85 cents on the $100 valuation, the Citizens' School Tax Campaign Committee will start an active campaign tomorrow. Various school patrons' and mothers' organizations will cooperate.

Tomorrow will be the last day for voters to register in order to cast ballots in the tax election April 5. The office of the Election Board, 208 South Twelfth street, will be open for registrants until 5 p. m.

Registration up to Friday night was 345,544. A new record of enrollment—1487 voters—was made at the office Friday. This was the largest volume of any day since the initial enrollment under the new permanent registration law. Election Board clerks have reported that many registrants said they wanted to qualify to vote for the 85-cent tax.

Persons who have moved since registering may go to the board's office up to March 30 to be transferred on the records. If not transferred, they will not be eligible to vote.

Radio to Be Used in Drive.

Activities in the campaign will include distribution of leaflets, addresses before organizations, radio talks, advertising in newspapers and on billboards, and display of posters designed by school children.

Heads of a number of civic and commercial organizations will be among those making radio addresses for the tax. Speakers for meetings will be furnished by the Public School Patrons' Alliance, Playground Mothers' Circle, Council of Parent-Teacher Associations and Child Coriservation Conference.

The campaign will be linked with the celebration of the centennial of the public school system here. The first school was opened April 2, 1838. Most of the schools will hold open house some time during the next two weeks, exhibiting the work of their pupils and calling attention to the celebration and the tax campaign.

Centennial Pageants This Week.

Centennial pageants will be held this week at Central, McKinley and Soldan high schools, the School Board's educational museum and the following elementary schools: Arlington, Laclede, Mark Twain, Columbia, Hamilton, Cole, Washington, Dessalines, Rock Spring, Irving, Long, Marquette, Bates, Baden, Blow, Emerson, Field, Gundiach, Howard, Harrison, Jackson, Kennard, Lafayette, Lindenwood, Lyon, Mann, Mullanphy, Peabody, Shaw and Wyman.

High lights of school progress in the last 100 years will be the theme of the pageants.

Indorsements of the 85-cent tax have been receved by the Citizens' Committee from about 200 educational, political, patriotic, civic and other organizations.

Citizens' Committee Confident.

"We are confident," said J. Harry Pohlman, chairman of the citizens' committee, in a statement yesterday, "that the people will vote for the retention of the present school tax. To defeat it would virtually disrupt many of the activities and facilities which have helped to make ours the finest school system in the country."

The maximum rate of 85 cents has been authorized since 1921. It is necessary to hold an election to fix the maximum every four years. Without the approval of the majority of the voters the proposition will fail and the rate will revert to 60 cents, costing the schools about $2,500,000 a year.

The Sixteenth Ward Regular Republican Precinct Organization announced yesterday its approval of the 85-cent rate.

TALK ON CANCER CONTROL

Dr. Ellis Fischel to Speak at Meeting of Women Wednesday.

Dr. Ellis Fischel, chairman of the Missouri State Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, will speak at a meeting of womens' organizations at 2 p. m. Wednesday in Vandervoort's auditorium, at which the Women's Field Army of the society will make plans for its second annual enlistment drive.

Mrs. David S. Long of Harrisonville, Mo., State commander of the Women's Field Army, will discuss activities of the organization. Mrs. Edmund Fowler Brown, vice-commander for St. Louis, will preside.

WEBSTER COLLEGE RECEPTION

Open House to Permit Public to See Classes Being Conducted.

Regular classes of Webster College will be conducted for the public in an open house period from 5:30 to 10 p. m., Tuesday. The day's courses, postponed until evening, with shortened time, will be presented in the usual way, so that visitors may observe the operation of the institution.

LUTHERAN LENTEN SPEAKER

Lake Forest (Ill.) Clergyman to Talk at Noon Services.

Dr. O. A. Geisemann of Grace Lutheran Church, River Forest, Ill., will be the speaker at the third week of Lutheran noonday Lenten services at the Orpheum Theater, beginning tomorrow.

Exhibit of Watercolors.

An exhibit of watercolor paintings by Lee G. Hines, St. Louis artist, will be on display for a week beginning tomorrow at the St. Louis Art Center in the Kings-Way Hotel.

800 SCOUTS IS GOAL FOR CAMP IRONDALE

75 Adult Leaders Open Promotion Drive Tomorrow.

A camp promotion committee of 75 adult scout leaders will participate in a campaign to enroll 800 Boy Scouts this year at Camp Irondale, which opens June 19. The drive will open tomorrow and continue for two weeks.

Each unit registered with the St. Louis Boy Scout Council will be visited by campaign workers, who will explain the expense plan and the advantages of attending the summer camp. John Wallace is in charge of the drive and he will be assisted by 10 district scouters.

A special feature of each two-week camp session will be a 10-day hike for senior scouts in the Ozark Hills. S. C. Reaves has been appointed campmaster and he will be assisted by a staff of specialists in various phases of camp life and scout training. Guy L. Short will be assistant campmaster and Lee Lane director of activities.

The first of 13 training courses sponsored this spring by the council will open tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock at Webster Groves High School. The course, an introduction to scouting, has been approved by the National Boy Scout organization and will be offered three nights each week for three weeks.

Classes will be held Tuesday night at Gundiach School and Wednesday evening at the Missouri School for the Blind. Dr. L. H. Renfro has been appointed director of the course and he will be assisted by E. A. Uffer and Noel Chadwick.

In addition, nine district scoutmasters have been selected to organize a troop in each district to assist in the training of prospective leaders for the 80 new scout units which will be organized this year in the metropolitan area. They are W. V. Allison, Cecil Kirk, Carl Vogel, George Brockhoff, Kenneth Muchmore, George Beasley, Fred White, C. E. Sidler and George Lusk.

The annual swimming meet of the Sea Scout Division will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the downtown Y. M. C. A. pool, 1528 Locust street. Medley races and diving contests will feature the evening's program. Ernest Vornbrock will be chief judge.

THIS NEW YORK

By LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, March 19.

ALTHOUGH the accent has long since disappeared Kitty Carlisle is still a native of New Orleans, as far as food taste goes. Miss Carlisle is not a real dyed-in-the-wool gourmet, but she would like to find a spot that serves a Poor Boy Sandwich, and, unfortunately, while it sounds like something Reuben's might have, they haven't. The sandwich originated at Martin's coffee-hickory stand, in New Orleans Creole market. When a small Negro boy would ask for a sandwich Martin, who couldn't resist, picked up a 30-inch French loaf, split and buttered it, split it in thirds and filled each section with fried oysters, sausage cake, ham and cheese and handed the bundle to the hungry kid. The popularity spread throughout the whole Southwest, and as it did, the price rose rapidly, too, but it still hasn't arrived in New York.

The Mr. Malaprop of Cleveland is the celebrated Winsor French, columnist of the Cleveland Press and first husband of Margaret Perry, the present Mrs. Burgess Meredith. Mr. French's solecisms aren't in his writing, but are conversational and altogether wonderful, and this department has been collecting them for some time. It is Winsor who once described a radio broadcast he had made "over a hook-to-hook coast-up," and actually wrote that something was "vaguely definitely so." Another time he spoke at some length to us about an organization called "The Society for the Protection of Cruelty to Animals," he always answers the telephone, "Hello, darling, who is it?" and in an argument he once said he "would lay all his eggs on one table." His crowning howler was quoting a line from a verse he claimed had somethin,: to do with "avory ipes and peacocks."

● THE REVIVAL OF THE POPULARITY for masculine wear of heavy-linked, gold Albert watch chains, of the sort every bank president and railroad conductor wore 50 years ago, has run the prices for authentic old copies sky high. Within a year or so a pronounced vogue began to make itself felt and the thin, light-weight chains began to demode, probably as a result of the widespread hanker for the security and honest times represented by substantial gold of the older design. Thousands of them, however, have been melted down since the price of gold advanced, and now, with every estate trustee searching his vaults for them, the Albert chains, dating from the middle of the last century, are scarce. Joseph Bryan III of the Saturday Evening Post is a confirmed hawser chain wearer. So are Joseph Alsop Jr., Howard Davis and most old-time conductors on local railroads. Appropriately enough, one sees more Alberts on the street in Boston and Philadelphia than any other cities.

—o—o—

Probably the most effective of all the agencies that have leagued to push old-time formal society, as New York once knew it, quite literally out of the picture is the miniature camera. The Bellevue avenue and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish tradition of superiority was all very well as long as it existed unimpeached by reality in the minds of the impressed and gullible many; and, of course, the principal function of exclusiveness was to bewilder and irritate the non-included. The handy and practical machinery of photography destroyed all that, not so much by exposing formal society, for there was nothing very reprehensible to expose, but by simply ignoring family background and pretentions to breeding and concentrating exclusively on the exploitation of attractiveness of person. A family tree firmly and indisputably rooted among the patrons simply doesn't photograph well, and a leash of ancestors distinguished in service of church, state or learning, can't be caught even by a Zeiss f4.5 on the most up-to-the-minute Graflex. But beauty of person, pleasant mannerisms and the services of a knowing tailor and couturier can, and the ultimate arbiter of modern society, the Petronius and McAllister and Evander Berry Wall combine, is the photographer.

—o—o—

● WHY, ON MOST OF THE TOWN'S MENUS, have the fine Southdown mutton chops of only a few years ago been supplanted by something called a double lamb chop? . . . It's an outrage and a swindle . . . Austin Marshall of "I'd Rather Be Right" adds one more Pennsylvania University Mask and Wigger to the Broadway professionals . . . Others are Jack Whiting, John Cecil Holm of "Three Men on a Horse" fame and John Beal . . . That barter is virtually with us would seem to be indicated by the post card addressed to the cast of "Hooray for What," at the Winter Garden, and signed by a chiropodist . . . For two seats to the show he offered his professional services to any member of the cast whose dogs might want tinkering . . . The only authentic holdover from the lunatic '20s is the midnight sailing party in the North River . . . There you can still drink gin out of tooth mugs and soap dishes, and, if you try real hard, get carried off to Paris in nothing but a dinner jacket and crush hat, a la Randy Burke.

JOHN BEAL

QUARRELS Which Lead to DIVORCE

Survey Shows That Court Records Seldom Tell Real Reason for Breaking Up of Homes

By HELEN WELSHIMER

IT ALL STARTED INNOCENTLY ENOUGH . . . FIFTEEN MINUTES BEFORE, SHE HAD MERELY ASKED HIM HOW MUCH MONEY HE HAD SPENT ON CIGARETTES THIS WEEK.

WHAT are the real reasons for divorce? What causes most of the trouble in married life? You may pick up the paper and read that Mrs. Jones divorced her husband John for extreme mental cruelty, when the actual cause, which we would all understand, was John's failure to make her a proper allowance. It's a fairly safe bet that a pocketbook is more likely to be responsible for a break-up than another man or woman. And so it goes.

A recent national survey shows that two-thirds of the quarrels between husbands and wives concern money matters. Of course, not all of these people get divorces. But money is at the root of much of the friction that ends in the divorce courts. This fact is supported by Archbald M. Crossley, conductor of the nation-wide polls, and Theodore A. Apstein, chairman of the National Divorce Reform League. Crossley interviewed a cross-section of men and women from coast to coast and Apstein chose 1000 at random in New York State.

The inquisitors asked happily married, unhappily married, and divorced people the common causes of divorce. They answered that financial matters are responsible for 13 per cent; too hasty and ill-considered marriages, 10 per cent; selfishness, 6 per cent; "divorce too easy to obtain," 6 per cent; incompatibility, 4 per cent; infidelity, 4 per cent, and scattering reasons, 57 per cent.

This last group included such things as religious differences, lack of children, outside diversions, too much temperament, and magnifying of petty details. There was a man who wished to be free of a wife who insisted on selecting all his clothes, and the woman who got tired of being spanked every time she did not answer, "Yes, Sir," to her husband. There was another wife who disliked the fence her husband built down the middle of the bed, to keep from being crowded. There are countless such factors promoting friction which are ruled out of our good state courts. That is why they masquerade, too often, as adultery.

But notice! Adultery, the most accepted cause, got a rating of only 4 per cent by the people who spoke the truth. The effect of interference by in-laws on marital relations was shown in this, and other recent polls, as practically nil.

"All right!" you are saying. "Why don't people stop lying to the courts and tell the truth?"

That is the very thing for which a war is waging today on the legal front.

If you want a divorce, don't think that all you have to do is file an application, present your charges, and in due time—brief time—a Judge will restore you to freedom and circulation. It all depends on where you live as to whether you can even get a divorce.

Of course, if you are rich enough to afford it, you can take a Diesel-engined stream-liner to Nevada, stay six weeks, and be virtually certain of getting a decree. Or you may spend 60 days in Wyoming, and 90 days in either Florida, Arkansas, or Idaho and get the same results.

But your home state may rate you as a bigamist, even though clergy and justices give you their benefit. Some states—Georgia, New York, Pennsylvania, North Carolina and South Carolina—won't recognize the quick divorce method. Eight other states will accept such decrees only with literal compliance with their own laws.

If you live in South Carolina you might as well make up your mind to celebrate your golden wedding anniversary unless you change your state forever or can get an annulment. This state does not grant or recognize divorce. At least, there you know where you stand.

Take the case of Prince Guido Pignatelli and the former Mrs. Edward V. Hartford, fabulously wealthy widow of the $200,000,000 chain store tycoon, which exploded with a tremendous bang only the other day. The marriage between the Italian nobleman and his American bride had gone along swimmingly for nearly a year when a New York Supreme Court Justice ruled that the tie was void on the grounds that the Prince's Reno decree from his first wife, the former Constance Grenelle Wilcox, wasn't valid. The Justice held that the Princess Pignatelli No. 1 had not been properly served with a summons in the Reno action, and for good measure pointed out that the Prince had admittedly established his residence in Nevada solely for the purpose of obtaining a divorce.

—o—o—

AND there is the case of Rufus T. Bush, of the wealthy New York family. When he and Joan Price Jeffrey couldn't make a success of their marriage he obtained and Arkansas divorce. Then he married Jane Reid of Kansas City and went to live in her state. His first wife got busy. She said she never had been properly served with a divorce notice, and brought suit for separation and alimony in New York State.

A New York Justice gave the first Mrs. Bush a decree with $50 a week alimony, quite as though the Arkansas divorce and second marriage never had been.

A Mexican divorce is just as shaky. In 1937, Nevada, of all states, questioned the validity of Mexican "mail order" decrees and won her point.

It requires no mental elasticity to see why it is safer to perform collusion, if your own state has harsh divorce laws.

Apstein, serving as chairman of the legislative committee that is trying to make divorce easier and more honest in New York State, says: "If you haven't money enough to go to one of the states which grants a quick divorce, and you live in New York, you plead infidelity. Ninety-five per cent of the New York divorces are collusive. Lawyers and Judges alike know it, but there is nothing we can do about it.

"The New York Enoch Arden law does provide an annulment after five years of absence of one of the two parties, providing the other can prove the missing one has not been located and circumstances indicate that he is dead. This reason leads people to commit perjury, too, for they often say they believe someone to be dead in order to obtain an annulment."

Though polls show money matters as the most frequent cause of marital friction, 18 states do not recognize failure to provide as a divorce ground. Even less recognition is given to incompatibility, yet if people told the truth in their petitions, it would get the highest mark as a divorce cause, researchers say, and they are supported by many ministers who are constantly consulted by members of their congregations.

Dr. John Haynes Holmes, famous pastor of the Community Church in New York City, says:

"Not all people can live with all other people. We are not born with that capability. Two people may try desperately hard but sometimes there may be friction and they cannot make a go of it. I think that the biggest sadness in life comes from two people living together to promote respectability when they are not happy.

"I would like a uniform marriage law which would provide for the largest rather than the smallest number of reasons for divorce. My basic principle is that when the natural tie has ended, the legal tie should be terminated, too. The marriage chamber must not be made a prison chamber. When love dies a man and woman must not be made to live together. While there are many reasons for divorce, I believe that it should be lenient as regards grounds of separation.

"For instance, there should be no attendant publicity. The law should grant an interval of time between the divorce and the granting of it, during which all attempts should be made to save the marriage. Doctors, psychiatrists and clergymen should be set to the task of re-establishing it. When all efforts have been made, if the parties still want it, it should be granted without further questioning."

Dr. Holmes has a marriage clinic within his own church, in charge of a capable man and woman, where both young and older people are given advice and instructions. It annually saves a large number of marriage break-ups, he asserts.

Each year 1,200,000 couples marry in the United States and, just as regularly, 200,000 couples are divorced. But it isn't the newly married who are most likely to want divorce escape, despite the fact that money matters and incompatability are the most frequent true causes. Statistics from Great Britain show that 41 per cent of the English divorces took place after marriage had lasted between 10 and 20 years. Out in Seattle the divorce proctor, Evangeline Starr, found that the third 10 years of married life are the most difficult. Coming back to England again, less than 1 per cent of divorces take place when the marriage has lasted less than two years.

The National Divorce Reform League discovered that 91 per cent of the people polled believe in uniform divorce laws for the states.

The nation may have the opportunity to pass on this question at the polls, for Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas has proposed a constitutional amendment for submission to the states which would permit the Federal Government to supervise marriage and divorce laws of all states. Grounds for divorce he favors are adultery, cruelty, desertion, conviction of an infamous crime and incurable insanity.

ON THE FLICKER FRONT

By H. H. NIEMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.

BOTH the "Master Showman," Samuel Goldfish-Goldwyn and his latest imported star material, Sigrid Gurie, are busy passing the buck at present for it suddenly developed—just about the time our story on her was appearing last Sunday—that the lovely Sigrid was born, not in Norway, but in Brooklyn, and that she came to Hollywood, not on a vacation but preparatory to securing a divorce from her American husband, one Thomas W. Stewart. However, if Miss Gurie was not born in far away Oslo, as she and the Goldwyn offices have led everyone to believe, her father and mother were died-in-the-wool Norwegians and after the accident of her birth in this country took her back to their old home town when she was three years old. From then on her career was as both she and Goldwyn have indicated—except that she never mentioned publicly, the fact that she had married a New Yorker a year or two ago.

Goldwyn dismisses that incident with a few well chosen words. So well chosen, in fact, that they probably came from the typewriter of one of his young publicity gentlemen fresh out of college. Goldwyn speaks of the matter as a great hoax, a word which makes it appear more probable that he did not prepare the statement. He says, further, that it doesn't make any difference where Miss Gurie was born. She has the cinematagraphic goods, so to speak, and that is all that interests him. Doesn't sound like Sam talking but its his story and he's going to string along with it.

Sigrid herself confesses that she deceived Sam, along with that part of the public which might be interested, at the start. Though she would have a better chance of success if she never mentioned Brooklyn or an American husband at all, Goldwyn, she declares, heard the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth some time ago and told her to stick to her original yarn. She was still sticking to it a couple of weeks ago when we saw her on the Goldwyn lot and probably would be still if the little matter of arrangements for a divorce had not come up. Showmanship they calls it out here.

BOOMS and depressions come and go. Business bulges and trade recessions follow one another across the financial pages. But chorus girls go on forever—or so it seems in Hollywood.

When the market is lowest the Hollywood choruses kick the highest. The despondent business men may be an even better audience than the tired business men. Thus in 1933 when financial wiseacres were wallowing about in a slough of despair, the picture, "Forty-second Street" with pretty girls and scant costumes saved the day for Warner Bros. and for many a theater owner as well.

Other musicals followed then in quick succession as each producing company sought to establish its own claim to the boast that it had ended the depression single-handed.

The "call to arms" to end the depression was actually a "call to legs" and many pairs of them have been waved toward audiences from the screen since.

Some of them are the same legs. Some of them are new. All of them are reasonably shapely and most of the Hollywood chorus girls who own the legs, are reasonably good.

—o—o—

IN THE SIX YEARS that have gone by since "Forty-second Street" was offered to the country along with Franklin D. Roosevelt, chorus girls in filmland have worked rather regularly and profitably, in a modest way. Almost every major producing company has made, is making or soon will make a musical picture in which choruses figure. The choruses are smaller in number than they were a few years ago, but there must be many young women who support themselves and sometimes their mothers, sisters and brothers or small children as well, on the money the studios pay them to kick before the camera.

Asked to name an "average" girl in his new chorus which will shortly be seen in "Golddiggers in Paris," Busby Berkeley, the dance man, pointed to Rose Tyrrell. George Barnes, Berkeley's cameraman in this instance and the former husband of Joan Blondell, when asked the same question, pointed to the same girl.

Miss Tyrrell was finally cornered on the set and questioned and here is the result:

She was born in New York City 22 years ago and attended St. Jo-

IF HELEN KELLER HAD ONE WISH

x x x

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, March 19.

WHOM do you consider the most interesting and thrilling—oh, well, why not say the greatest?—woman alive in this country? Is there any doube that it is the forever amazing Helen Keller—blind, deaf, dumb, yet who has lived such a full and fascinating life? I saw here at our Waldorf-Astoria just the other day, and marveled all over again, of course. Her incredible "teacher," Anne Sullivan Macy, has gone from her and us, but Helen carries on, and came to us to appear on a radio program. She recently spoke to 10,000 teachers at Atlantic City, and last fall returned from six months in the Far East. What a wonder!

Speaking of her appearance at the educators' convention, the most gripping moment of the entire week took place when it was announced that Miss Keller would answer one question, and someone immediately queried: "If you could have just one wish, Miss Keller, what would it be?" You could hear a pin drop in that vast assemblage while Miss Keller thought a moment. Then she answered: "If I could have but one wish, it would be for world peace, and brotherhood of man."

Think of Miss Keller, and that answer!

—o—o—

LILLIAN GISH, the movie star of the old days and now adorning Broadway in "The Star-Wagon," tells me that she is doing her autobigraphy. Lil has had a fascinating life—a trouper since babyhood with sister Dorothy, made a star by Griffin nearly 25 years ago, and a rich theatrical life in the past decade. And the titanic tragedy of her long-paralyzed mother, one of the loveliest of women. It should be a wondrous yarn, and I hope it goes.

THE INTERESTING GADGET invented by Fred Waring, the band leader, has just popped into the local market. It's a liquifier—with the help of a little water and some electricity the dingus can turn practically anything into a drink. Things like bananas and carrots and spinach, for instance. Fred once told me that he hopes his invention soon will free him from bossing a band.

—o—o—

KATHERINE DAYTON'S new play, "Save Me the Waltz," had a tragically short life on Broadway, though it boasted a remarkable cast, including Laura Hope Crews, Jane Wyatt, Molly Pearson, Mady Christians, Martha Sleeper, Leo C. Carroll and John Emery. A rialto rumor has it that the play was rushed in while still unripe, owing to a report that Dorothy Thompson was also hurrying along a play about a dictator and his doings.

—o—o—

IT SEEMS HARD for an old-timer like myself to realize its possibility, but Alma Gluck's daughter, Maria Zimbalist, is going to get married, the lucky lad being Ogden Goelet, a society name. How we loved Alma and her phonograph records, years ago! We kids felt we actually knew her. Her marriage to fiddler Efrem Zimbalist has been long and happy, and her lovely home on East Forty-ninth street here is a rallying place for musical friends.

—o—o—

A DETERMINED promotion drive on this five-suit bridge thing is in progress here. Elsa Maxwell's name has already been lent to it, and now I hear that Ely Culbertson is going to expound its problems to a select group at the Lombardy Hotel. It is all a little trying to a girl who was brought up on "500," and had a hard enough struggle with "auction"—let alone "contract."

Incidentally, these new decks have just gone on sale here in a big way and I don't mind saying the tap is pretty high. But in our stores an instructor will be on hand to teach customers the use of the new "Royal" suit.

—o—o—

FLASH NEWS of the moment is that for 1938 it is the "perfect 34" rather than the 36 of our girlhood; further, that the Gibson girl fashions again have yanked in the waist, which now must be no more than 24 inches around. This is a delicate business and maybe I shouldn't have brought it up!

ROADS LEADING TO EMPLOYMENT FOR WOMEN -:- -:- -:- TURN TO PAGE FIVE

MY OPINION

by Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

ON MARCH 12 I read a letter signed "Anxious." I wish she would read this letter, as my position was similar before I married three years ago. But in addition, the young man I was going with met with an accident and everyone said he would be sick the rest of his life. He hadn't had steady employment. I thought if the world was against him, he would not have the courage to go on.

I had steady work and a good salary. So after he was able to work, I kept my job for a while and we were married. We had only one room at his mother's house which we furnished and after we paid for this we went to housekeeping. Now my husband has a good job and, after three years, I have given up my job and we see ourselves clear out of debt.

These years have not been easy, as he has had three operations and I one. But now we have a nice home and car and I am remaining at home, waiting for the stork to pay us a visit.

My advice to this girl is to stick, if he is worthy, and not listen to those who would kick him when he is down. VI.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● RECENTLY a girl whom I had been seeing quite regularly, asked me if she could wear my class ring. I consented, and now she wears it on the engagement ring finger. We are not engaged and we are not going steady. Do you believe the wearing of the ring on this finger has any meaning? Can you tell me if gifts are to be sent at Easter? If so, what kind: flowers, candy or what?

SEEKING INFORMATION.

Probably the girl has given no serious thought to the question of which finger she should wear the ring on. The style now is, to wear any ring on this finger or the finger corresponding, on the other hand.

Everyone, I think, associates flowers with the Easter season. A pretty corsage of gardenias or daisies made up attractively, need not be too expensive. A box of candy is always in order.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

PLEASE TELL ME the name of the man who played the leading role with Kay Francis in "Street of Women?" And what is Nelson Eddy's age? Thank You. F. A.

Alan Dinehart. 2—37 years.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM 16 AND VERY AMBITIOUS and determined to dance. But I do not know what type of dancing I should take up. Would you please tell me where I can find further information on this subject? Thanking you very much. D. J.

You haven't said whether you hope to have lessons free. You will find the names of regular dancing schools in the classified section of the telephone book. Some of the Community centers have free dancing classes. You can write me about these, sending self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

PLEASE ACCEPT MY THANKS to you and the readers of your column for assisting me in having my artificial leg repaired. May God bless all for this act of charity, and I am hoping that God will open the way for me, so that I may be able to repay the people who have been so good at this time of need. Yours truly. W. F. B.

Dear Martha Carr?

● I HAVE RECEIVED FINE HELP through your column for a choral organization. I became acquainted with many who wanted to use their talent in this way. I want to say now that we need male voices for our chorus and they will be welcomed to rehearsals Tuesday evenings at 8 p. m. at Luccock Hall, 3638 Grandel Drive. This chorus is non-sectarian and is under the supervision of a capable instructor. Vocal instruction to members. DIRECTOR.

Dear Martha Carr:

I HAVE SOME white buck oxfords with brown calf trim. They are perfectly good and I would like to wear them again this summer; but they have become stiff, due to cleaning with a liquid cleaner. What can I do to soften the leather? Thanking you. L. H.

The cleaner should have had oil of some kind in it. You will have to take them to a professional cleaner and see how this can be remedied.

—o—o—

Dear Martha Carr:

WOULD YOU PLEASE TELL ME if it is proper for girls 14 to wear formals or dinner dresses or floor length to a party given at a home? Also, is it proper to carry a large chiffon handkerchief with an ordinary street dress? LAUREL.

A floor length dress is all right in the circumstances, if the dress is a simple one—with sleeves. No. It isn't very good taste and is not done by well-dressed girls.

—o—o—

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

● MY TROUBLE is this: I hape been ordered by my physician to rest, on account of a weak heart, and am unable to work.

I wonder, Mrs. Carr, if you, or your readers can give me any information on how to earn money with my typewriter in my home. As our town is so small I am unable to get work here. I can give good references, as to kind of work, but as I formerly was a stenographer would rather have work of that kind.

With as many readers as your column has, I feel sure someone will be able to suggest something I may be able to do that is not strenuous.

Thanking you most sincerely, and please do not publish my name. Respectfully yours, TOT.

If your place is large enough for a local paper, a line or two, asking for such work, might bring you all you are physically able to do. Also I think if you would canvas the shops and offices, leaving your card saying that you are prepared to do extra work in rush seasons or when work of this kind is needed, this might bring you patrons. Mail order houses in the cities might send you extra work, but I believe this is a poorer prospect.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

"Women Must Keep in Step With World"

There Is No Sense Accepting Evidences of Age, Writes Beauty Specialist.

By Helen Jameson

THERE'S nothing very complicated about the improvement rituals of Youth and Beauty, Inc. That is a winning team, has every advantage. Skin is fresh, unblemished by the scratchy fingers of Time. Hair is abundant. The figure hasn't started to warp or thicken. To keep in the front ranks of the pulchritude chorus, all Youth and Beauty have to do is to keep daintily clean, attend to the usual chores, select becoming clothes.

From Youth and Beauty, Inc., middle age and old age should take a hint, and that is that it is necessary to one's happiness to put up a topping, snappy appearance. Time spent in that pursuit is worth the investment and brings rich returns. The trouble with the elders is that they let lost illusions get a grip on their souls, or they fall into serious moods, forget to be gay of spirit, or they buckle down to the job of living without thought of self. Well, if a woman won't think of herself, nobody else is going to do it for her. It is her job.

—o—o—

THERE IS no sense accepting evidences of age. One doesn't have to. If they're beyond repair they can be disguised. It is shameful for any healthy woman to let Time knock her flat and step on her face.

If a woman isn't to be jostled to the side lines or boosted up on to the shelf, she's got to keep in step with the moving world. To talk about old times, to believe that the world was better in her young days, is to be tiresome. The old age bogy has got her.

Let her not forget that the faithful use of a heavy massage cream every night will have a happy result, acting as an insurance against lines and sagging tissues. The tapping alone is vitalizing because it drags blood streams out of a state of sleepiness and firms the fibers. Also, there's something stimulating to the spirit in the beautifying half hour before falling into bed.

—o—o—

LET HER select her clothes with care, getting hats and frocks that are youthful but not too youthful. There is no virtue in ugly draperies or dismal colors.

Hands must be lubricated. Old looking hands are a horror. Treat them with tenderness and they will stay young. Wear rubber gloves when doing housework. Apply a lotion once or twice a day. Use upon the finger nails whatever polish is fashionable at the moment.

Don't try to save time on the coiffure. Scrambled locks look sweetly careless on a young girl—they make the older woman blowsy. Gray hair, especially, must be exquisitely groomed, gracefully arranged, neat as wax.

Jumper Frock

The jumper frock can no longer be classed as a "little girl" fashion. Since several of the leading French designers have included it in their new collections, there are American adaptations ranging from sports dresses to those for evening wear. Suspender themes, likewise, illustrate the expansion of juvenile fashions to grown-up styles this year.

Tomorrow You'll Wear

BEAUTIFUL sheer dresses of embossed chiffon, printed in rich colors on a white ground. This fabric, while made in casually tailored styles, carries an elegance fit to grace an English garden party, or a wedding in the country.

Transparency in both day and evening dress. Printed crepe foundations veiled in dark organza; sheer blouses revealing fancy slips; tulle, lace and Swiss cottons after dark.

Basque dresses, conforming to the longer waist trend, with a touch of the Polynaise in the accent on the skirt with bows at the back.

Formalized linens, sky-rocketing to fame for both day and evening. Sailor hats in starched linens. Molyneux's coarse white linen evening dress trimmed with red roses, which Gladys Cooper wears in Dodsworth, now playing in London.

High-low Oxfords for spring. This smart new style offers a compromise in comfort and style—high on one side for support, with the other side in a low bias-cut line that is most flattering to the foot.

Colored petticoats that show their brilliant hues when you swing along the avenue in your spring suit.

WHEN IT IS TIME TO SPEAK UP

How Conversational Leads Can Make or Break Your Popularity

By Virginia Irwin

ILLUSTRATIONS BY AITHRA HOLLAND.

IT HAS been estimated that the average person utters 16,000 words a day, not counting the output of folks who talk in their sleep. This places the yearly conversation crop in America alone at something near the staggering figure of 700,800,000,000,000 words, and yet the common complaint is that choice sentences for conversational openings are practically impossible to sift out of the harvest.

Opening a conversation is like finding your way about in a strange and pitch-dark cellar. You've got to feel each step or you'll land in the coal bin, like the woman who attempted to start the chatter ball rolling with a man to whom she had just been introduced at a party.

"Homely old cow, isn't she?" the woman began brightly, indicating another woman across the room.

"Come to think of it, she is," replied the man. "But she was a beautiful girl when I married her."

Much better, of course, to fall back on the bromidic old "Lovely weather we're having," line. There are, after all, only two things that can happen here. Either your partner snaps "What's lovely about it?" or he follows your lead into a long and miserable discussion of the weather yesterday, day before yesterday, the same day last year and the year before that, and on back into his boyhood, when weather was really weather worth talking about—four feet of snow on the Fourth of July and crocuses blooming at Christmas.

To save yourself from stepping into just such a yawn-spawning discussion, the New Statesman and Nation of London recently published a list of prize-winning answers in a contest conducted to discover the best conversational ice-thawers its readers could think up. Like the woman who picked "Homely old cow, isn't she?" for a conversational opening and was left alone on the sofa by the homely woman's husband, most of the folks who participated in the New Statesman and Nation contest submitted suggestions that would start a fight or a debate, but never a conversation. But guaranteed by the contest editor to "be genuinely icebreaking and serviceable in more than one social milieu" are the following: "I wonder when beards will come into fashion again," "Do you like string?", "Pardon my question, but when did you last see your father?", and "I can't remember anything before I was 6; aren't I backward?"

"HOMELY OLD COW, ISN'T SHE?"

I can't see why "Pardon my question, but when did you last see your father?" should be considered foolproof. For instance, you pardon yourself and inquire politely of your new found friend, "When did you last see your father?" "Just before they closed the coffin lid at the cemetery," you hear your new friend saying as he backs quietly away, and you suddenly realize the first law of the bungle.

I much prefer "Do you like string?" With string you're on safe and impersonal ground and there's always the chance that you've struck an old string saver, who will be delighted to discuss his experiences, just what length bits of string are worth saving, and the increasingly sad plight of the string saver since stores have taken to using gummed paper tape instead of tying bundles.

"I wonder when beards will come into fashion again," has some possibilities. You can point out that the return of the beard would solve the problem of what to do with old razor blades and ring in the boys famous for their facial foliage, such as the Italian airman Balbo, J. Ham Lewis, G. B. Shaw and Charles Evans Hughes. You can invent an interesting beard for your great-grandfather and recount how you were cut out of his will because you yanked on his whiskers when you were a baby.

"Which end of the bath do you sit?" is another conversational self-starter favored by the New Statesman and Nation, but after you've discussed whether you prefer to have your back or your feet scalded under the hot water tap, where are you? Of course your new-found friend may be a shower addict and then you can converse on the relative merits of tub vs. shower.

Besides the direct-question attack, another method of breaking the conversational ice is described by a man named Alan Marshall in his book, "Speak For Yourself."

"DO YOU LIKE STRING?"

The Marshall method takes determination and there's nothing simple about it, like asking "Do you mind snakes?" and expecting an evening's conversation to hinge on that one question.

—o—o—

"THE thing to do is to cast the conversational trawl," explains Marshall. "Bring to mind something you have seen on the street, something you have read in a book or newspaper, some function you have attended—let that provide the thread of your opening conversation, the main line of your trawl. Upon this line string a series of hooks, baiting each one with a conversational gobbet which will be some aspect of your central situation. If you draw this line of hooks slowly past Jones' face, sooner or later he will bite at one or the other of them. For instance: Jones stands gazing at you in silence which is patently souring to boredom. You say:

"'I've just been to an exhibition of photographs . . .'

(Only polite interest from Jones; he is not a 'camera fan.)

'. . . and I was impressed all over again with the speed and precision of the new lenses, their marvelously accurate delineation . . .'

(Still silence; Jones is not a physicist or an oculist.)

'. . . there was one picture, a photograph of a cantilever bridge, which was really beautiful.'

(Jones isn't a civil engineer, or that would have got him.)

'. . . and some grand portraits. They say that Carl Van Vecnten has practically given up writing; he's so interested in photography.'

(Literature is nothing in Jones' life.)

'. . . The new focal plane shutters are amazing,' you continue, beginning to get a trifle desperate. 'They've got them down as fast as 1-2000 of a second. They're using fast cameras now at the race tracks, you know. . . .'

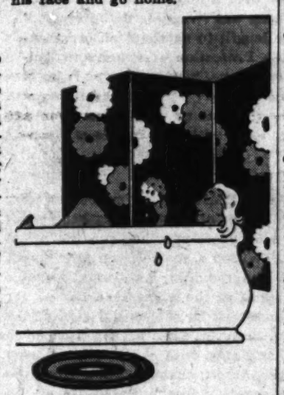
(Jones grins; he begins to fidget; he wants to do some talking himself. So wisely you leave your sentence dangling.)

'Say, the camera eye saved me $20 at Havre de Grace yesterday,' cries Jones, off on one of the hooks in your conversational trawl'."

—o—o—

AND while Jones gallops off on his conversational pony, you draw a deep breath and resign your mind to wondering when the hostess is going to show up with another Martini and rescue you from the torture of listening to Jones re-run the horse races.

Above all other conversational openings, I prefer "Would you rather not talk?" It's simple, direct and humane. For instance, you are introduced to someone and you start the conversation by asking, "Would you rather not talk?" If the answer is "Yes" that ends it and you can devote your thoughts to wondering whether your income tax blanks were properly made out and what the Government will do to you if they weren't. If the answer is "No, I'd like to," you can counter with "What about?" and let the other fellow set the subject. If he suggests something like East-Indian interpretive dancing or the revival of interest in the harpsichord you can always yawn in his face and go home.



"IN WHICH END OF THE BATH DO YOU SIT?"

Return to 1900 Fashions

THE Gibson Girl hats and blouses, the brightly colored taffeta petticoats and the shirtwaist themes aren't the only 1900 fashions that are important for spring. Fabric trends indicate a return to old-fashioned favorites with stiff silks such as grosgrain and surah being used extensively, taffetas in demand for suits and the sheer cottons of the mull variety competing with newer materials.

These stiff silks are being used now for jackets, skirts and dress trimmings but as the spring advances there will be more diversity in the styles with full-length coats and suits also accepted by the leading designers. Paris likes these heavy fabrics in the printed types as well as solid colors and what Paris likes, America is certain to like also.

Trim little jackets of grosgrain are seen with crepe frocks. Printed patterns showing a good deal of white in alliance with navy or black are popular for the jackets that are worn with dark-colored frocks but the coat that is of a solid color is the most interesting for printed alliance. Gay colors are liked and look especially striking when the jacket is cut in the snugly fitted manner and ends above the hip line.

Equally as new and distinctive as the short jackets of grosgrain are the ones which cover a dress and are cut in the redingote style. Again there is interest in black or navy but the white grosgrain coat for afternoon wear is regarded as one of the most fashionable in all of the collections.

The days of the little silk suit for summer wear are here again, in the opinion of many style authorities. Taffeta, alpaca, shantung and faille are highlighted for these suits. When the more supple fabrics such as light weight taffeta are used, the skirts often are pleated and the jackets although fitted have a cardigan appearance which gives the suits a youthful emphasis.

ON THE FLICKER FRONT

seph's convent in Emmitsburg, Md. She has been in Hollywood since 1933 and came to filmland with the Albertini Rasch dancers under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In her five years in Hollywood she has been out of work only six weeks. She lived a part of that time on money borrowed from friends. She has been back to New York three times but expects now to make Hollywood her permanent home.

At the moment of the interview she had $62 in the bank.

In Hollywood Miss Tyrrell lives in an apartment house—a very good one—with another girl who dances in musical pictures. At the time the roommate was in New York which added to Miss Tyrrell's financial problems considerably.

—o—o—

SHE HAS four fur wraps, eight evening dresses, a steady beau and 22 pairs of shoes. She buys one new dress every two months without waiting for special sales. Rehearsal pajamas and rehearsal shoes are the most expensive items in her wardrobe, because they wear out most often. She buys no lingerie, but uses the silk undertrunks of her rehearsal costumes. This information was volunteered by Miss Tyrrell.

She economizes by doing her own hair and caring for her own nails. She can't cook and gets along with only one substantial meal a day—at dinner time. This she eats in one of the better and more expensive restaurants, and it usually costs her at least $1.25. She washes her own clothes, but she doesn't sew.

She goes to see a motion picture show at least twice a week. She likes mystery pictures and "high drama." Clark Gable is her favorite actor. She is interested but not "awed" by the stars she meets.

She goes to bed at midnight on week night and "whenever she gets home" on Saturday nights. She gets up at 7:30 each morning. She attends church each Sunday—and never misses.

Her furs have been collected over a period of several years. Two of them were gifts. Two she bought for herself. She has double silver foxes, a caracul cape, a caracul coat and a red fox cape.

Her boy friend is a young actor. If necessary, she would give up her career for marriage.

She was once an understudy in New York for June Knight, and her present ambition is to become a screen star.

Her mother and father are both living but are separated. It is not necessary for her to support either of them. She has one brother, who is a clerk in Wall street.

"I guess I'm typical," she admits. "Most of the other girls have the same problems and the same fun that I have. I'm happy."

—o—o—

IF MISS TYRELL is happy, we should all be happy, because the records show there is very little chance of a Hollywood chorus girl becoming a star. Most of them stay in picture work from three to seven years and then marry. Many of them marry and continue to work. It's a closely guarded secret, but nearly half of a recent chorus group were not only wives, but mothers.

Not all chorus girls in pictures are beautiful—but you probably didn't need to be told that. However, there is no "back row" in a Hollywood chorus and the camera betrays the woman who is no longer very young. Consequently, the weeding-out process is very fast. The current crop of dancers in Hollywood musicals is not as good looking, taken as a whole, according to eye witnesses, as were the earlier groups which clamored for a chance to dance in "Forty-Second Street." The average is shorter, plumper and has bigger feet. The show-girl type has less chance, it seems, than her smaller sister.

If and when the "road" ever comes back for musical stage shows, at least half of the girls admit they would desert pictures and Hollywood and join the legitimate ranks. No one believes, however, that there is any imminent shortage of chorus girls in Hollywood. Every train that arrives in Los Angeles—and there haven't been many for a week or two—brings a new crop of young hopefuls, girls who are anxious to have three fur coats and eight evening dresses—and $62 in the bank. If you are thinking of becoming a "typical Hollywood chorine" there's your pattern.

Corset and Shawl Vogue

THE vogue of eighteenth century fashions for evening wear not only stresses the pretty emphasis that is placed upon spring clothes, but brings several old-fashioned themes back into the limelight. The corset and the shawl are two of these.

The corset dress designed originally by LeLong and copied extensively, in this country is the one which is most striking in its presentation of the tiny waisted silhouette. A regulation corset with lacing at the front supplies the unique waistline decoration, being worn on the outside of the dress. Lace is the medium that is used most often for the various versions of this picturesque, bouffant skirted frock.

Shawls are being worn so extensively with many of the spring evening dresses that the bolero jacket has a serious rival. The quaintest ones are made of black marquisette or lace and match the fabric of the frock. Less old-fashioned but equally as striking are the shawl-like capes of embroidered organdie that accompany black net evening dresses. All of these are designed so that they may be worn in various ways, changing the appearance of the costume. The fichu arrangement is one of the most popular, often dropped rather low on the shoulders and caught with a colorful brooch at the front of the bodice.

Pleated ruffles adorn some other evening frocks that date back to other days for their inspiration. One unusual frock of pink net designed for a young girl has two pleated shoulder ruffles forming a bertha at the low round neckline. The skirt has similar ruffles at the hemline.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

SYMPHONIC music affects some listeners one way, others another. While some 3400 inhibited souls sat immobile in their red plush seats at the Schnabel concert in the Opera House last week, an idle usher spit on his glove, wound up, and pitched a score of imaginary curves right over the plate—in the upper corridor. I would have missed the sport entirely if I had not left my seat early and been standing just inside the heavy glass doors at the back of the hall. Through a glass peep-hole his frantic endeavors caught my eye. Either unsatisfied with his form or completely disgruntled, after a few moments he gave up apeing the dizzy one, and, instead, pranced to and fro, shoulders squared, knees high, in time to Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg."

—o—o—

THERE'S A SEQUEL to the little story printed herein five months ago about the Worth twins, who have been christened Nicholas and Penny Anne, but are called Nickel and Penny. The infants, seen lately in their pram, were wearing, respectively, a nickel and a penny, set in gold and hung around their chubby necks!

BY THE TIME this appears it will probably be outdated. That's how touchy residents of Portland and Westmoreland place are about having anyone else catch on to their system about the gates, and how quickly they act to protect the system. Of course, they've a perfect right to their privacy. They pay for the upkeep of their roads and parkways. If they didn't shut off the streets part of the time, under some kind of law the thoroughfares would become public. When Lindell was being repaved between Kingshighway and Union, the people of the places volunteered to open Portland and Westmoreland to through traffic. Their streets were torn up something dreadful, a former "czar" i. e., chairman of the board of trustees, declares.

Right now, beginning last Tuesday, the east gate of Portland is open and the west gate is closed, while the reverse is true of Westmoreland. But you won't find that true between the first and fifteenth of any given month, under the present system. Indeed, quite the opposite situation will exist. That is to say, the east gate of Westmoreland will be open (its west gate closed), but the west gate of Portland will be open (and its east gate closed). Get it? In other words, you have to zigzag if you want to go through Portland or Westmoreland between Kingshighway and Union. That's to discourage through drivers. It also discourages people who care only about getting home. I overheard a resident say lately, "I'll take you home, Molly—I'm going right past your house." Then wearily, "Oh, Lord, maybe I'm not. What day of the month is it?"

—o—o—

The Japanese Beetle Commission, with headquarters in Forest Park, is happy to report that as yet no misguided cranks have abused it by telephone, telegraph, missives or missiles. Unmindful of the cataclysm which threatens the cosmos, its expert technicians have been able to go right on catching bugs in little traps.

—o—o—

ADD CURIOSA: Capt. B. F. Menke has lately re-costumed his company aboard the showboat Goldenrod, anchored off the levee. Picked up some discarded masquerade outfits the Good Will Industries had on hand—things people had stuffed into their collection bags. Persons of fashion are in for a shock if they ever attend a melee on the riverfront. They may meet themselves face to face as they appeared years ago at some fancy-dress ball at a country club.

—o—o—

OUTSIDE A TAVERN the other night an automobile horn sounded loud and long. Curious patrons turned toward the windows but could see no congestion which would occasion the blast. A tipsy man at the bar pushed a battered hat farther back on his head, scowled, and ordered another highball. In a few minutes the horn sounded again, this time even more insistently, with the same reaction among those in the place. A third time came the blast—only it didn't let up. Not until the customer at the bar had balled an oath about that blankety-blankety beast, paid his bill, and lunged out. Customers watching him through the window saw him get into a car, manned by a huge police dog, which was still standing triumphantly with a front paw on the button.

THINKING OUT LOUD About NOISE

Campaign to Stop Unnecessary Sounds in the Day and Night Has Its Points, and They Are All Good, in Opinion of One Harassed Soul.

By FRANCIS OLIVER

STEPS are being taken to try to stop unnecessary noise in St. Louis. We were going to say "at last steps are being taken," but they have been taken before—and into very thin air. Someone always has removed the stairs, and the well-intentioned efforts have ended in the basement. So we are a bit skeptical about adequate relief for our eardrums and our nerves, and continue to be from Missouri.

Just the same we think the idea is all to the good, because it may save us from the new lethal chamber at Jefferson City, after we have properly disposed of some creature who, with his motor horn, unexpectedly imitated a coughing behemoth just behind us. The steps this time are being taken by the Chamber of Commerce, which plans to present an anti-noise bill before the Board of Aldermen. It may get by because the Less Noise Committee of the chamber has been studying the matter for the past year.

The proposed ordinance does not restrict itself solely to honking horns, but includes many other things that may be termed nuisance noises. Of course, it is not all it might be, for it does not make any utopian attempts; nothing really can be done about telephone shouters, those cretins who consider the instrument just a prop and think they must yodel their conversation across the building tops; or furniture draggers on the floor above; or out-of-tune whistlers; or loud office or midnight conversationalists, or hot water heating systems that clank.

Still, anything accomplished is edging us along in the right direction to the millenium, even though it is only the incarceration of the chronic horn tooter. He is the devil's disciple par excellence, the wrecker of urban peace and, when he escapes to the countryside, a vicious dispenser of bedlam.

THERE CAN BE ONLY ONE ORIGIN FOR A DOUBLE HORN.

We return, of course, no blanket indictment of horn blowers, for there conceivably are occasions on which pressing the button is justified. Perhaps. Some time try disconnecting your horn, say for a month, just to check on how badly you need it. You will miss it at first and swear and feel tempted to stick your head out of the window and yell at pedestrians or other motorists. But shortly you will find that you depend on your brakes and not your horn at intersections; you are less inclined to "step on it" or zig-zag in and out of traffic lines because you have no way to scare the other drivers into hugging the curb; you let the driver ahead make the boulevard stop without imitating a jack rabbit, when your horn startles him out of his pause. In short, you grow to depend on being able to drive and not threaten, to avoid mishaps. Your spirit grows calmer because you cease driving at high tension to get nowhere in a hurry, and look on an automobile as a quiet, comfortable mode of locomotion, to be enjoyed as a prelude to the day's strain or the evening's relaxation, instead of feeling as if you had just got off a dynamite keg.

Most chronic horn tooters are potential dynamite, in our estimation. They suffer from the same complex that made Dillinger try to be a big shot, and they come in all types and varieties. There is the one that confines his activities to blatting in front of somebody's house because he is too lazy and discourteous to walk as far as a door. He is comparatively harmless, and often can be effectively squelched with a few choice epithets, as he usually is a timid soul at heart.

There is the one who is insulted when the car ahead makes a boulevard stop. He also ties down the button the second the stop light turns green, startling others into stripped gears, and making pedestrians do a kangaroo hop for the curb. Only strong natures can offset him. He can best be thwarted by steeling the nerves and impulses against his fretful clamor while resuming motion in a calm, leisurely manner, if you are just ahead, and letting him stew in his hot temper. We know of one driver who simply stopped dead, got out and offered to settle by fisticuffs—"Get out of that car and I'll punch you on the nose"—instead of horns. That procedure is not exactly advisable, first, because it makes a lot more of unnecessary noise, and, second, because the other fellow may take you up.

Perhaps the pedestrian-baiter is the worst and most dangerous of all the breed. Anyone on foot is fair game, and while tagging a victim is not the object, occasionally that is an unfortunate outcome. The game lies in gliding silently up on the poor dupe until within two feet of him, then shoving hard on the brakes until they squeak raucously and at the same time blasting with the horn. If the pedestrian does not drop dead of heart failure, he jumps like a mountain goat, mouth agape, eyes horror-filled, and stands shivering on the sidewalk, too startled to express his inner feelings. By the time he gains control of his vocabulary the offending driver is out of earshot.

MOST of the nuisance noises, of course, affect the nerves directly, although indirectly the health is affected and the life span shortened. Which is perhaps a form of nature's kind compensation, for with such constant din, longevity offers little. One grows to long for any form of surcease from horns, clanging street cars, barking dogs and meowing cats, ringing telephones, chatterboxes, yelling vendors, elephantine walkers in the apartment above, ringing bells, blatant radios.

Of all man's blessings turned to evil purposes the radio is perhaps the worst. It goes from early morning to early morning, not so attuned that the one immediately interested can hear, but so that all in the precinct and ward must hear. During the day it resounds from store entrances and in restaurants and from automobiles. At night it bellows forth from every home, each committing the offerings of a different broadcasting station. It booms through the walls when one is trying to concentrate either on work or sleep. There is no ignoring the noise. The big curse lies in it being semi-intelligible. Next door a speech is raging. We know not what it is about, and care less, yet because it consists of words, willy-nilly, our curiosity goes to work. We try to relax, and discover we are trying to strain every sense to get the import. We listen despite efforts not to, whether it is speech, blurb, or Bach. And stay awake until the infernal machine ceases, usually in the small hours.

Street cars—well, the rattle-bang of the wheels and the shrill friction of steel on steel will be with us until they cease to be mobile antiques and are completely replaced by the more resilient and therefore more silent bus. Pneumatic chisels we hope will someday go the way of riveters, which latter have been replaced by welding. Barking dogs can be eliminated, and not necessarily by mayhem. The dog, we maintain, is a very intelligent animal; it is the master who is stupid in not training his pet to keep silent except in the face of real danger.

There are numerous lesser noises that might be mentioned, but they can be left until later. What this citizen would advocate is concentration, carrying on the fight on a small front. Start, say, with auto horn. Prohibit it being honked in exasperation instead of necessity; perhaps even just prohibit it. Then, when that part is under control, go on to the loud speaker on the street, and then the radio after 11 p. m., followed by the radio louder than a certain volume at any time, and so on, until the atmosphere is cleared.

EITHER EAR-MUFFS OR A NICE NERVOUS BREAKDOWN.

How to Tint Or Dye Dainty Spring Clothes

Methods of Giving Last Season's Garments a New Lease on Life.

UNDERWEAR seems to be more dainty if the color is crisp and clear; a blouse that you love to wear in spring plays a new role, when the color is changed; and dresses for day and evening take on a new lease of life with a new tint. It is easy to do and the results are gratifying with packaged tints or dyes.

First decide what color you wish to have. Then study the color charts, and the fabrics. Most manufacturers of dyes, tints and soap dyes supply a list of the colors that certain fabrics will take. They also give definite advice on how to produce colors and shades. Tints can be changed much easier than dyes, and can be rinsed out—one reason they are used so much. Many people tint back and forth a whole gamut of color for slips, for party gowns, and children's things. There is a bleach to help reduce the former color, and prepare the fabric for the new tint, and there is a tint for dyeing silk underwear without tinting the lace trimming.

—o-o—

GET EVERYTHING ready before you start. Use an agate or enamel dishpan of good capacity. Remember you don't want the dye to boil over, and you must turn the garment frequently so the tint will be even. One or two glass towel rods are a great convenience when it comes to lifting the material or garments out of the hot bath. Have an extra amount of the tint or dye on hand for safety. You may want to do more tinting, so if you don't use all the dye now, wrap and keep it dry and in condition for another time. If the color you plan to make calls for salt or vinegar to "set" it, have that on hand. Salt and vinegar are called mordants and if you want the garment to be the color you have chosen permanently, after you have put it in the color bath for 20 minutes to half an hour as directed, you lift out the garment, addd the right amount of salt or vinegar, and set for five minutes more.

Now for the steps in the process: Begin by washing the fabric in suday water. This will clean the garment, remove all grease spots and may bleed out loose color from the former dye. To "strip" the old color from the material, soak in cold, soapy water, then bring almost to a boil. This reduces it to a paler shade, sometimes down to white, and prepares the material for the new tint. If a bleach or color remover is to be used, it should be done at this time.

—o-o—

MAKE YOUR BATH of the new color now, and try a small piece of the fabric. If a small piece is not available for testing, use the belt or a piece of trimming that could be replaced with something else. Some rayon fibers of hyphenated names are sturdy as cottons, some as soft and washable as silk, while others are sensitive to heat in water or dye, or to the pressing iron. Some fabrics do not absorb dyes readily. When purchasing materials or ready-made dresses or underwear, pay attention to all the information about the fabric.

After the garment or material is the desired shade, roll in clean white absorbent cloths, sandwich-fashion, so the moisture is quickly extracted. When partly dry, press, being sure the ironing board has a clean muslin cover. Press on the wrong side, and for any finishing touches on the right side, always cover the garment with cheese-cloth to prevent glazing.

To gauge the amount of dye necessary, weigh the garment dry. The proportion of dye is so much per pound dry weight. To prevent streaking, wet fabric before immersing in tint or dye.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

HOW rich life would be if we could have the things we want! How much stronger and wiser, kinder and better balanced we'd become if we weren't everlasting-heckled and handicapped by lack and failure! Or —would we?

We THINK we would. We're sure that pain and disappointment are senseless and wasteful—in our cases, at least. SOME people may need such discipline to bring out the best that's in them, but not you. No—you need love, happiness, success . . . they feed you . . . you flower under them. Or do you?

Strange how we mortals fool ourselves . . . unable to see the real sources of our strength . . . needing to suffer cruelly before we can get an honest perspective on our lives.

There was Jeremiah—that fearless, flaming mystic out of great Israel's past. How unreal he seemed to you as a child, listening in the village church to the thunder of his wrath, the wild wail of his grief.

But he wasn't unreal. Jeremiah lived, as surely and hotly, as any man lives today . . . loving, fighting, praying, cursing in great sobbing shouts . . . demanding and demanding those things he thought he needed, as you and I demand and demand today. Defying even God to deny those demands! Leaving God . . . giving himself over to strange and filthy adulteries of the soul . . . because God would not grant him his way!

—o-o—

A VERY HUMAN MAN . . . that thundering Jeremiah! And now Franz Werfel, who wrote "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh," has swept the cobwebs of time away and given us the real Jeremiah—flaming soul and furious flesh—in his new book "Hearken Unto The Voice." (Viking Press). A tremendous book . . . barbaric splendor, barbaric horror, heart-breaking pain. A great book to read at any time, but particularly so in these thoughtful days of Lent.

No—not a religious book. Save as all life is religious. Nor great merely because it presents a towering, historical figure. But great and true—and terrible—because it shows the struggling, the human spirit.

Not just Jeremiah's stormy spirit, but everyone's. Yours . . . mine . . . each one of us with some cherished dream and the firm belief that we know what's best for us. Each one of us wanting more power and joy out of life and centering our hearts on some person or thing which, we're sure, will give us our desire. Jeremiah, in his hot youth, yearning for dusky sweet Zenua. Jeremiah, in his battling manhood, longing to save Jerusalem. And you and I, with our own shining visions.

—o-o—

WELL, WHY NOT? They're good things, fine things . . . why can't we have them? We're so eager for a great love, a proud, joyous fight . . . why must God send, instead, shock and shame and tears? Break our hearts with useless pain and wasteful waiting? Snatch away the cup, just as we lift it to our lips? Does that spell justice—or make sense?

Rebellious Jeremiah couldn't think it did. Yet, at the last, a strange enlightening came. Looking his life over, weighing its profit and loss, his wrung lips whisper their amazement. He had thought to live greatly by success. But instead—

"Thou hast nourished my soul with futility!" he cries, in Franz Werfel's book. And then, in his immortal "Lamentations," continues—

. . . "Thou hast removed my soul far off from peace . . . waters flowed over my head . . . I called upon thy name, O Lord, out of the dungeon . . . Thou hast heard my voice . . . Thou drewest near . . . Thou saidst 'fear not!' . . . O Lord, Thou hast pleaded the causes of my soul: Thou hast redeemed my life!"

"The causes of the soul"—how far removed they are from our petty, petulant plans!

COLOR IS IMPORTANT IN SPRING STYLES

THE call to colors which the fashion creators issued for the spring season has been followed with a warning to "watch your colors" lest a gay season be turned into a riotous one and a bright trend develop into a hideous mixture.

The use of color in spring wardrobes started as a mere sidelight of the mode but has developed into one of the most important features of the season. Women obviously were waiting for the word from the fashion authorities to dabble into the paint pot and to try their talents at combining odd shades. Although the season is still young, the popularity of the color emphasis is advancing and polychrome mixtures enliven the best liked costumes.

In past seasons, the majority of women have been satisfied to select one accent color for their costumes and to use it for the majority of accessories. Now they not only demand the alliance of two or more shades for accessories but are wearing as many as three colors in the basic items of their outfits. This three-tone accent is reflected in the trend of spectator sports costumes which often consist of a skirt, blouse and jacket that differ in hue. A blue skirt, for example, will be worn with a gray jacket and a wine colored blouse. Rust, green and yellow are other companions in the creation of some striking suits.

While the alliance of three tones in the suit itself is the one which most often leads to difficulties especially if a woman does not select the shades with care, there are dangers in the choice of several hues for accessories which are causing the style dictators much concern and prompting them to issue color charts as guides to the color enthusiasts.

By choosing a rather conservative shade for the basis of a costume and brightening it with striking accessories, the most successful interpretation of the color vogue is achieved. Navy blue, the favorite for spring suits with many women, offers a wide choice in the selection of gloves, hat, footwear, bag and blouse. Butterscotch is appearing often as a satisfactory shade to wear with navy and permits the choice of a second tone, such as chartreuse, magenta or purple without the clash that so often ruins an interesting and individual ensemble theme. This same hue is sufficiently neutral to be selected for combinations that have black or brown as the major tone of the costume.

Several different tints of one color family are being recommended as attractive in alliance. Tones of yellow and orange, for example, offer many possibilities even though there is a touch of the chartreuse in one of the shades. The violet family is another to be considered for spring especially to brighten a navy suit or coat. Hyacinth, wood violet and purple have sufficient in common that they blend well together as well as with the various blues.

New versions of blue and rose offer pleasing contrasts which are flattering to many and therefore important for late spring as well as summer. Chartreuse and pink seem odd together, but are being employed successfully in accessories. Rose is regarded as a good color for late spring costumes, so there is considerable interest in the accent tones of pink, strawberry and aqua. Turquoise and plum are another twosome with summer as well as spring possibilities.

Which accessories to match and which to contrast offer as much difficulty this spring as the actual choice of colors. The original suggestion that accessories contrast rather than be alike leads to such havoc that the stylists now are tempering this with the suggestion that blouses match footwear while gloves and bags present a different tone, or that footwear be matched to bags while gloves or blouse or both supply the third accent hue.

Tweed Topcoat

A tweed topcoat chosen in a soft flower tint to match one of the shades in your new printed frock will complete an interesting spring costume. If it meets the requirements of 1938 chic it will be cut without a collar, will hang straight from the shoulders and stop at the knees—these features to distinguish it from the dressier style of wool coat so extensively advocated for spring.

Light Milan Straws

Old-fashioned milan straw is a favorite for spring millinery, but it is of much lighter weight than the former variety. Flower-trimmed models are reminiscent of before-the-war era, while combinations with felt or suede illustrate the tailored emphasis that can be placed upon this versatile straw. Black is seen more often than colors, although a bright navy blue in alliance with pink is noteworthy.

Grosgrain Ribbon

Grosgrain ribbon and loosely woven woolen material are combined to produce some stunning spring coats. The plan of stitching narrow bands of the ribbon to the fabric in vertical lines produces a flattering pattern, but more striking is the idea of weaving the ribbon in and out of the woolen in an all-over vertical design. Anyone looking for a trim coat that has a dressmaker aspect will find this theme to her liking.

Reversing Theme

Reverse the theme of printed frock and solid colored coat if you want to look different this spring. A striking costume follows this trend. The one-piece dress is made of navy blue sheer crepe enhanced with a printed silk in a large flower design. A full length redingote of the same printed material has a border of the solid blue crepe.

Brightening Toque

If your little black toque which seemed so chic a few weeks ago now looks a trifle outmoded, get yourself a pink veil and dress it up in the latest manner. You'll need two yards of veiling because the trick of the moment is to pull it over the top of the hat and tie it with a big bow under the chin.

Novelty Coat

The jacket which resembles a windbreaker is included in the styles being shown for spring. It is of waist length, fits with a shaped band and has a convertible collar. Sheer woolens and synthetic materials are used for the creation of this novelty coat. It calls for a slender figure and looks best when allied with a pleated skirt.

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

DEAR MISS WALTER: I live in a small but quite nice apartment and this spring I am going to have it all done over to suit myself. I am not sure of the proper procedure but wonder if your advice is available? I shall make myself as concise as possible.

The kitchen, dining room and two bedrooms do not present a problem but the living room does. Since I am buying all new furniture for this room I hate to make any mistakes. The only consideration is my rug. It is a gray Chinese rug with a narrow blue and then a wide red border. I had thought of having all the woodwork painted white and using a white wallpaper. Since summer is fast approaching, I thought white celanese swag curtains with delph blue ball fringe would be attractive.

I have read that gray could be used attractively and yet I hesitate. Could you suggest paper and paint for this room and would my curtain suggestion be suitable? I have seen so many lovely homes and yet I am afraid to tackle my own. Temporarily, I shall use my studio couch in this room. What would you suggest for slip-cover?

My only other problem is in my children's room. They have maple twin beds and lovely white curtains with red stars on them, tied back with big red satin bows. Would you put red and white paper on the walls and red and white chenille spreads and scarfs or is that carrying it too far? Would the wallpaper with plain white chenille spreads be more attractive or again, would you suggest something else in paper?

If it is possible I would appreciate any suggestions along any of these lines. My home is small but I do so want it to be as attractive as the lovely large homes one sees. Thank you for anything you may suggest.

MRS. E. W. S.

—o-o—

● DEAR MRS. E. W. S., and all other of my readers who have decorating problems which are bothering them: I am more than happy at any time to answer any questions pertaining to this subject. And furthermore, I feel that hearing other people's problems and their solutions often helps to clarify our own problems.

And now, about the questions. It seems to me that you have a complete color scheme at hand, for the living room, in your Chinese rug. Most decorators build up the entire color scheme for a room from one item. It may be the wallpaper, it may be a piece of material, it may even be a picture and in this instance, it should, I believe, be the rug.

You say that you hesitate to use gray. I cannot see why, unless your room is an unusually dark and dreary one, and even then this color might be lightened by the other things used in the room. And gray is one of the smartest decorating colors at the moment. There are many beautiful wallpapers on the market which utilize gray as the background color. I have in mind particularly a paper with a gray background and stripes in white and silver as this would not prove too much of a pattern with the rug. Or you might use one of the very lovely silver papers which are now so much in vogue.

● IF YOU USE a gray paper, patterned in white, your suggestions of white woodwork and white curtains would still be appropriate and effective. I think the idea of carrying the blue into the trimming would be quite good. It, however, the room is rather small, you might find that gray curtains, in a tone to match the background of the paper, would make it seem larger, and in that case you might want to use white ball fringe, instead of blue.

Try covering your studio couch in a plain red fabric to match the tone in the border of the rug. A linen or an interesting cotton weave would be nice if the room is not too formal, and you might trim it with a gray cotton fringe to tie in with the color scheme of the room. Also, try having small, hard cushions made to fit at either end of this couch; you will be surprised to find that it will make this piece look and feel like a real sofa.

—o-o—

● NOW AS TO the children's room. Your curtains sound charming but I feel you might be able to play them up better with something other than a red patterned paper. Had you thought of introducing blue into the scheme and thus creating that ideal color combination for any child's room—red, white and blue? If you use a blue paper, or a white one with a blue pattern, you might also use paper on the ceiling and I can think of no better one than a white paper patterned with red stars.

Either plain white spreads, white and red ones, or red, white and blue ones would be appropriate in this room. You might also try red pique, linen, or some other washable material for the spreads, trimmed in bands and monograms of white. I would eliminate the scarfs altogether unless you have some special reason for them, as they are not used very often any more, especially in a child's room.

I do hope that these suggestions will prove useful, and that you will write me if any other problems should arise.

FOOD For a Footloose GENERATION

Former Widely Known St. Louis Woman Collaborates on Outing Cookbook

By Marguerite Martyn

MARTHA McCHESNEY WYMAN . . . HELPED PRODUCE COOKBOOK FOR TRANSITORY PERSONS.

WITH so many people doing their housekeeping on wheels or taking it lightly in summer camps and cottages and more or less transitory kitchenette apartments, it was high time somebody wrote a cookbook adapted to a footloose generation.

A former St. Louis woman, Mrs. James C. Wyman, now of Minneapolis, in collaboration with Elizabeth Case has done just that in their "Cook Away, the Outing Cook Book." (Longmans, Green & Co.)

As Martha McChesney, Mary Institute, 1914; Vassar, 1918; Junior League and daughter of the late William S. McChesney, president of the Terminal Railroad, Mrs. Wyman was well known in St. Louis society. More recently in Better Homes and Gardens, Junior League Magazine, Golfer and Sportsman and other publications, readers may have followed her career as a writer.

"When Mrs. Case and I had cabins next each other at Beaver Bay, on the north shore of Lake Superior," said Mrs. Wyman here visiting Mrs. Felix Anderson and numerous other relatives, "I learned from her how, with ingenuity and planning, it is possible to live and eat as well i nthe wilds of the North Woods as in a country house or city apartment. I found it meant developing a system as streamlined as the trailers, cabins, cabin cruisers or kitchenettes in which it might be practiced. I decided to write it down."

The result is a book which bids you not just to rough it and go native in primitive surroundings or succumb to handicaps of close quarters, but by making the most of tricks of efficiency, produce simple, well balanced meals, or even elegant and artistic spreads, with limited facilities. If it is only a snack to be chucked into the pocket of a hiker or hunter, there is a better way to prepare it. If it is an al fresco repast to be served on a verandah, a terrace, in a garden, or a picnic lunch to be packed in a tonneau, there is a better way to plan and present it.

To the experienced housekeeper, it means adapting old methods to new conditions, or vice versa. Not every cook accustomed to the latest in coffee making machines, knows how to make good boiled coffee in an old-fashioned pot over a camp grill.

Scald the pot. Have it immaculate (how many good housekeepers slip up on this?) Measure accurately one heaping tablespoon of coffee per cup of water and one over "for the pot." Break into it one egg, using only the white and the shell well crushed. Mix with about one-fourth cup cold water. Add a pinch of salt to bring out the flavor, then the accurately measured cups of boiling water. Bring slowly to a boil three times, removing from the fire each time it boils up. After the third time, remove from the flame and let stand in a warm place 10 minutes to settle.

Or how to make toast on a kerosene stove. Place a clean asbestos pad over the burner. When thoroughly heated, lay bread on pad and turn until both sides are brown.

For the novice, time, labor and space saving techniques are recommended which are applicable to the modern kitchenette as well as rustic living. Two types of menus are supplied, one for those who want nourishing food which can be prepared with the least time and effort; the other for those who regard food not only as a means of sustenance, but as a method of artistic expression and who really enjoy cooking and rejoice in overcoming incidental handicaps to present a surprising meal.

Canned goods are emphasized as inventions of special advantage to light housekeepers in the city, far from markets, and, for their compactness, on the road. Asterisks mark items in the menus that are obtained from cans and packages and nearly every item in the chapter, "Simple menus" is so starred. A chapter is devoted to suggestions for varying canned soups. "Add a slice of lemon and a slice of hard-boiled egg to each cup of blackbean soup." "Add butter and cream to clam chowder." "A teaspoon of sherry is a good addition to consomme, mushroom, bean, chicken, mulligatawny soups."

"Lobster bisque," pointed out Mrs. Wyman. "Think how our mothers spent hours preparing it. We combine one can of pea soup, one can of tomato soup, with one and one-third cups of milk or cream. Soak in sherry the contents of a small can of lobster meat broken in fairly small pieces. Add to soup, heat and serve.

"Several brands of consomme are delicious jellied," she added. "Simply place can in icebox five hours before serving. An epicurean touch is a heaping teaspoon of whipped cream topped with a teaspoon of caviar on jellied consomme."

"De luxe" menus followed by recipes explaining the composition of the more intricate dishes fill a good part of the 120-page volume, which looks its streamlined part in washable aluminum painted covers. There is, it seems, almost no dish too ambitious to attempt in your trailer kitchen, your week-end cabin, your cruiser galley, on your camp fire or in your kitchenette, except deep fat recipes and frozen desserts, provided your equipment is chosen with an eye both to compactness and adequacy. And there are no supplies your larder need lack if you will but consult the amazingly long list of foods that can be had in packages and cans.

—o-o—

FOR al fresco meals the collaborators claim a distinct technique. They divide them into five general classes: the terrace, garden or verandah meal; the cooking picnic; the ready-made picnic; the thermos and paper box picnic; the paper bag lunch.

For the first type they recommend any of their de luxe menus. You may prefer a cold main dish, but even in the hottest weather, don't serve a meal composed entirely of cold food, they advise. One hot casserole is almost essential.

For the cooking picnic it is necessary to have certain equipment: a fitted basket including plates, cups, cutlery, napkins, salt and pepper, can and bottle openers—all of which can be got at the 5-and-10. Grill, matches and old newspapers, kindling or charcoal. Canvas gloves, soap and a towel. A large paper bag for refuse. No matter how enthusiastic the cooks may feel in advance, plan to cook not more than one or two articles on the camp fire. For the remainder of the meal, plan food which can be prepared ahead and distributed without too many complications. Foods recommended as especially adapted to outdoor cooking are: coffee, chops, steaks, wieners, corn-beef hash, bacon and eggs, ham, fish, meat balls, corn on the cob, baked potatoes. Meat balls and fish cakes should be mixed and shaped at home, leaving merely the actual cooking to be done on the picnic grill.

The ready-made picnic necessitates considerable preparation ahead of time but simplifies matters at the picnic spot. One of many menus suggested is, cold roast chicken, eggplant with cheese in casserole, green bean salad with bacon dressing, melba toast, pickles, jam, fresh strawberries, cup cakes, coffee. Everything can be cooked and placed in thermos jugs or bottles ready to be served. Lacking a thermos jug, a good-sized covered casserole serves almost as well if it is removed piping hot from the oven and wrapped in several layers of paper and finally in a very heavy towel.

Where the outdoor meal is merely incidental to a motor trip and space is at a premium, the paper box and thermos bottle plan is advised. Hot soup, coffee, ice water, can be carried in thermos bottles. The rest of the food is fitted into a sturdy paper box along with paper plates, cups and cutlery. When the picnic is over, it is a simple matter to dispose of everything but the thermos bottles. Individual paper boxes each containing a complete lunch and equipped for one person, is another plan. All pickles, sandwiches and moist foods should be wrapped separately in paraffin paper. A suggested box lunch menu is chicken salad in carton, devilled eggs, cottage cheese with chives, bread and butter sandwiches, olives, radishes, celery, half melon, coffee.

For the sportsman or hiker where both space and weight are factors of consideration, the paper bag lunch offers a solution. Brown paper bags, 10x12, are packed, folded and fastened with a string or rubber band to fit snugly into a knapsack or even a jacket pocket. Each item of food is wrapped first in the smallest possible piece of waxed paper. If going far from civilization or in doubt about drinking water, a small flask might be taken along, although if apt to pass a country store, a bottle of beer or soft drink could be purchased. Each bag might contain three assorted sandwiches, dill pickle, devilled eggs, cup cake, fruit.

Too Hot and Too Cold

Let the aluminum pan cool before pouring cold water in it to soak. Constant pouring of cold water onto the hot metal will in time cause the pan to warp.

STOP AND GO

-o- -o- -o- -o- By Angelo Patri

"BILLY, stop that! You'll drive me crazy with that drumming."

"What are you doing with that water running like that? Stop it."

"Now you stop that, young man. Find something else to do beside annoying the cat."

Very well. Stop signals are necessary, but what about the Go? If you say Stop, and forget to say Go, there is a space where nothing is doing, and in that space the devil lives. So I've been told, and my experience says that children always find it so. When you say Stop, better be ready to say Go, and say where and how.

Children who drum on the tables and pans; who turn on faucets just to watch the water run; who pull the cat's tail; hold their fingers on electric bells, are at a loss for something definite to do. They have nothing in mind. What they are doing is not holding much of their thought, if any. When you say Stop, they are without even the comfort of the gesture they have been making. Give them something to do instead of saying Stop. Say Go rather than Stop, for children are active, never still.

Don't make the Go a matter of punishment. Slip in the idea of doing something else and make it an attractive notion if you can manage to do so.

"Billy, I wonder if you could help me tie this string on this box? I seem to need another pair of hands." Billy is proud to help. "O, Jane! Would you bring me a glass of water? I'm thirstier than a mackerel." Jane loves that. Taking the drink will give you a chance to think up something else equally as attractive for active youngsters.

Don't say Stop if the thing the child is doing is not interfering with anybody else, although to you it seems a wasteful, useless idea. The thoughts of the little boy who sits idly, turning over the leaves of a book, may irritate you, but he is doing no harm. He is communing with himself and he needs to do that. The absorbed child can usually be left to himself. It is the child whose occupation indicates a vacant mind that needs the Go signal.

Keep ahead of the children in planning occupation. Be ready, so that if you are called upon for plans and schemes you have some for delivery. It is not quite wise to plan every minute of a child's holiday, or free time. Wait for some hint of self-direction. If it is not forthcoming, one might ask, "What are you planning to do Tuesday?" "Have you anything on for Saturday?" Just be ready.

Remember that children have to have friends their own age for companionship. They may bother you by sitting in a corner and just talking, talking, talking. You itch to give them something to do. Don't yield to temptation. Let them talk it out. That is the way young things have of finding their way about. They have long conversation together and in that way they clarify old ideas and gain new ones. Be ready with suggestions, but stay your hand until the right moment arrives.

This coming season, when the outdoors is so inviting, could the children have a chance at cooking in the open? Cooking is a fine occupation for vacation days and usually it has the lure of adventure. It is one of the fine Go signals. So is hiking, swimming, gardening, dramatics, charity shows. For the little ones, plays, sand, water, cutting, modeling, swinging, listening to stories, playing house.

Rector Writes About Cooking Of Vegetables

He Gives Recipes Which 'May Be Just a Little Different.'

By George Rector

VEGETABLES play an important part in meals. No! I am not going to write about vitamins, because, I will frankly confess, I know little about them, so I had better stick to my business and bring a message to you on how to prepare various vegetables, perhaps in a little different way to which you have been accustomed to cooking them. We all know vegetables contain minerals. The doctors say that vegetable minerals are good for us, and I say that every sensible eater I have ever known would order at least two vegetables to accompany the main course.

We are fortunate to have in this world fresh vegetables practically the year around. And we have them in cans, too. Of course, the canned vegetables come to you already cooked, but at that we can, by adding a little something here or there, improve the flavor. Take canned corn, for example, preferably the whole kernel pack:

Open a No. 2 can. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan and thoroughly heat the corn. Add to the corn two tablespoons of green pepper finely chopped and previously blanched. Also add two tablespoons of finely chopped pimientos and one and one-half cups of rich cream. Stir and heat thoroughly. Season with a little salt and a light pinch of cayenne pepper. There's your corn Mexicaine, and you don't have to wait for the green corn on the cob to come along.

—o-o—

WHEN YOU pick up a menu and read "Eggs Florentine," that means spinach is present. If it says "Veal Cutlets a la Vichy," you can look for carrots. Any dish that has the word "Soubise" tacked on is a sure bet to contain onions. I wish somebody would offer an automobile for the best answer to "I like French fried onions because"—— Perhaps you will like them, too, when prepared as follows:

After you have peeled the onions, slice them evenly one-quarter of an inch thick. Separate the slices in rings and then place them in a shallow pan with enough milk to cover the slices. Let these onion rings soak in the milk for one-half hour. This soaking process is going to lessen that sharp onion taste. Spanish onions are the proper ones to use, but be sure you cut them thin enough. In the meantime, have ready your cooking fat in a deep frying pan, good and hot. Now drain off the milk from the onion rings and drop them in a paper bag containing flour. If you are going to slice six Spanish onions, a cupful of flour in the bag will be just about right. Shake the onion rings well so that they will be evenly coated with the flour.

Now drop the onion rings in the deep, hot fat, but not all at once. Cook them in batches of a third at a time. When they have cooked to a golden brown, remove them and place them on absorbent paper for a few minutes and season immediately with salt and pepper. They should be kept hot while the rest are being cooked, so just transfer them to a hot platter and set in a moderate oven until the whole operation is completed.

—o-o—

THE NEXT TIME you are going to serve carrots, let's prepare them a la Vichy. Now here's a treat, even for those who may dislike carrots:

Scrape and soak in cold water eight medium sized carrots; slice them thinly. I would suggest using one of those vegetable slicers. The carrots should be sliced crosswise, ever so thin—the thinner the better. Boil in water until the carrots are tender. Drain off the water. Melt three tablespoons of butter in a large saucepan, add the carrots, season with a little salt, pepper, and one-half teaspoon of powdered sugar. Cook the carrots in the butter, stirring them often to avoid burning. The carrots will absorb the butter and become just slightly brown. Just before removing them from the pan add two tablespoons of very finely chopped parsley and mix gently.

IT'S A GOOD STUNT to cook peas without water. Did you ever try it? You will want a heavy aluminum saucepan and a heavy cover. Shell enough peas to make a cupful.

Put two tablespoons of butter in the saucepan. Soak several outer leaves of lettuce in cold water, but do not dry the leaves. It's the water which clings to the leaves that supplies the moisture in the cooking. Line the bottom of the pan with the leaves, with the butter under the leaves. Place the peas over the leaves. Season with salt and pepper to taste and sprinkle over the top one-half teaspoon of powdered sugar. Now place another layer of wet lettuce leaves on top of the peas and clamp on the heavy cover. Cook the peas over a low heat, just enough heat to steam. Let the peas cook for about 20 minutes, or until they are tender.

COOKING FOR ONE

A TINY CASSEROLE IS EXCELLENT FOR BAKING AND ROASTING

COOKING for one is a pleasant diversion for many a person, who, by necessity or preference, lives alone. To come home after a busy day at the office, change from business clothes, then leisurely prepare an appetizing, well balanced dinner, is a happy way of relaxing.

Strange as it may seem to anyone who hasn't tried it, cooking for one may be more difficult than cooking for four. The actual work, of course, is no more arduous, but planning meals that are wholesome and appetizing without waste of materials is a problem of the first magnitude.

Then, too, the mental aspect is entirely different. The average housewife with a family to feed selects the foods she knows are good for them as well as those they especially like. One of the advantages of cooking for yourself is that you can have the foods you like best whenever you want them. Because there is no need to consider others, however, the foods selected may not supply all nutritional needs. There also are times when "it is too much trouble to prepare a regular dinner just for myself," so the lone person eats a pick-up meal that is inadequate and unappetizing. It is no wonder that many persons become discouraged and decide that cooking for one is neither practical nor desirable.

One of the essentials for making the job a pleasure rather than a burden is to have adequate equipment. A nearly worn-out hot plate and one or two misshapen pans are enough to discourage anyone, especially at the end of a long, busy day. Although poor equipment, with sufficient coaxing, may produce a good meal, it is a question whether the result is worth the effort.

A better plan is to provide yourself at the beginning with as efficient equipment as the pocketbook will allow. When space is limited the proper choice of this equipment may require considerable thought and shopping around. Look at as many of these cooking appliances as possible; then consider each one in relation to the space you can provide for it, and the use you expect to make of it.

ONE of the smallest electric roasters is about the size of an ordinary chafing dish, yet it is possible to bake a one-layer cake in it, seven small cup cakes or muffins and a small pan of baking powder biscuits. We also cooked a whole meal for one in it including a small meat loaf, an acorn squash and baked potato. A number of other food combinations could be cooked with equal satisfaction. This miniature roaster is surprisingly efficient for its size, and its chromium finish and wooden handles make it attractive in appearance. An electric coffee maker or tea kettle to use with it would make a workable combination for limited cooking needs.

There is, by the way, no more appetizing or nutritious method of cooking than that of broiling, and it is fortunate that many of the small cooking appliances have some broiler arrangement. Broiling is adapted especially to small quantity cooking because it makes possible the preparation of an entire meal with a minimum of effort. What could be more appetizing than a tender, juicy steak or chop broiled to perfection, savory broiled tomatoes and stuffed potato halves with cheese or butter topping? There are dozens of combinations that can be broiled in short order; and this ease of preparation is important to a business woman with limited time.

An oven is another accessory that makes possible variety and ease in food preparation. Therefore you will find it worth while to buy a portable oven if you have a one or two-burner stove. Menu planning will be doubly eas and meals correspondingly more enjoyable. An insulated oven is much more satisfactory than one of plain sheet iron. Bright aluminum inner surfaces will reflect heat for more efficient browning of foods. A bi indicator will be of help in determining the proper temperature the oven although the one provid in these inexpensive ovens is seldo so reliable as those in standar ranges.

Efficient two-burner stoves wit oven attached (some with broile also) are available. Before buyin an electrical cooking appliance o this kind be sure to ascertain th total amount of current it will us then make certain that the wirin of your dwelling is sufficiently larg to carry it. In some cases equip ment has been purchased which re quired special and costly wiring i the house before any cooking cou be done. It also is advisable to not how many burners of the stov can be used at once and whethe the burners have different heat such as low, medium and high Electric cords, plugs and switches should be inspected as to quality because a poorly constructed elec tric stove can be a shock and fir hazard. Good appliances are avail able, therefore do not be misled b bargains that will not give satis factory service.

A refrigerator of some kind is a necessity otherwise leftovers cannot be kept for later use. Many have found that cooking enough vegetables at one time for more than one meal is a saving of time and money. Serve them creamed, broiled, or en casserole a couple of days later and much of your vegetable cooking problem is solved. Left-over meats are varied by combining with potatoes, tomatoes or other vegetables in a casserole, then baking for 30 minutes. Vary the flavor by adding a little chopped onion, cheese, curry or other seasoning. Keep several of your favorite seasonings on hand to give variety in flavor.

Choose cooking utensils that are good looking as well as efficient. A colorful copper kettle, shiny aluminum pan, clear glass casserole or earthenware ramekin will tempt you to use them. Arrange dishes, utensils and food staples conveniently on your shelves and make as much work space as possible available for efficiency and ease of working. A drop leaf shelf fastened to a door or wall, is a simple way of providing more work space.

Last but not least, keep a good cookbook handy. Much inspiration for your cooking repertoire will be obtained by studying the recipes and adapting them to your own needs.

Mushrooms

THE next time you come across large mushrooms in the market, select a dozen of them, wipe the caps of the mushrooms with a moist towel. Remove the entire stems and rinse them in cold water.

Chop the stems very fine and cook them in two tablespoons of butter, along with two tablespoons of finely minced onions, four tablespoons of minced cooked chicken or ham or lamb and two tablespoons of fine chopped parsley. Moisten the mixture with one-third cup of stock. Season to taste with salt and pepper and mix well. Now stuff the mushroom caps with this mixture, building them up about one-quarter of an inch over the edge of the mushrooms. Sprinkle over the top freshly grated bread crumbs and dot with butter. Place the mushrooms in a greased baking pan and cook in moderate oven for about one-half hour. G. R.

POT HOLDERS

Tea towels are meant for better tasks than lifting hot dishes and pans from the stove and will burn quickly when so abused. Buy one or two 10-cent padded holders for this purpose and save the linen towels.

Up to the time of Rudolph Ganz's resignation from the St. Louis Symphony orchestra the St. Louis musical public had had a relatively limited experience with conductors who came for a few days and then went away to work in other fields. Ganz was conductor of the orchestra for six years before that Max Zach had held uninterrupted sway for an even longer period. But with the retiring of the orchestra's policy for the season of 1927-'28 St. Louis was introduced to a diversified series of talents and personalities.

The guest-conductor policy was continued when Vladimir Golschmann was put in charge of the orchestra. It was a wise and necessary move, and has resulted in the development of the orchestra to a point of virtuosity that enables it to stand comparison with most of the great orchestras of the world. Even so, the parade of conductors was more than a stop-gap. Most of the musicians who led the orchestra from time to time, had their personal followings and contributed appreciably to the artistic development of both orchestra and public. Having been exposed to this variety of styles and temperaments the audience is in a better position to know how a group of players can be affected by the man wielding the stick.

Most of the artists who have appeared in St. Louis are still practicing their crafts in various parts of the world. News of them drifts back from time to time and is always received with interest.

IN THE SEASON of 1927-'28 no less than six conductors had their try with the slightly bewildered public that was put at their disposal. The first of these was Emil Oberhoffer, who for a long time had been the conductor of the Minneapolis orchestra and who more recently had refused the Los Angeles orchestra on account of his health. Oberhofer's fine musicianship and thorough methods came at a time when it was badly needed and the quality of the public performances was immediately elevated. Oberhofer came back the following year but his continued ill health prevented him from making the showing that he might have. He died two years later.

William van Hoogstraten, who had been co-conductor of the New York Philharmonic and subsequently conductor of the Portland (Ore.) orchestra gave two sets of programs and passed on. He is still conductor of the Portland orchestra. Eugene Goossens also made his first appearance in St. Louis during that season. An Englishman with a fine training and experience, he was an immediate favorite in St. Louis and still is. Goossens abandoned the excitement of companionate conducting, as he chose to call it, when he was chosen as the regular director of the Cincinnati orchestra to succeed Fritz Reiner.

FOLLOWING GOOSSENS was the excitable and exciting Bernardino Molinari, who came to St. Louis for varying lengths of time for the next three years. Molinari always kept things boiling. He was a martinet and, according to his own lights, a perfectionist and his methods of getting results had the musicians and most of the public, by the ears. Molinari still comes to the United States from time to time and will be one of the conductors to finish out the season with Toscanini's National Broadcasting orchestra. His regular post, however, is still in Rome.

Carl Schuricht was the German representative to St. Louis during that season but a combination of cold and good old-fashioned homesickness made his incumbency utterly barren of results. Sandor Harmati, then in Omaha, substituted for Schuricht at one pair of concerts.

According to all reports Schuricht's reputation in Germany has been enhanced considerably by the rise to power of the Nazis. When minister men were chased out of the country his position was automatically improved.

IN THE SECOND YEAR of the guest policy E. Fernandez Arbos, who for nearly half a century had been the chief protagonist of music in his Spanish homeland, made his first appearance in St. Louis after having given successful concerts with the New York Symphony, the Boston, Cleveland and Detroit orchestras. Arbos conducted concerts here for three successive seasons and the memory of these visits will always be treasured ones to the musicians who worked with him, the public who heard his performances and the many who had the privilege of knowing him personally. His cultivated approach to all the great music in the literature was a reflection of the charm and maturity that affected his whole life.

After leaving St. Louis he continued his career as director of the Madrid Philharmonic up to the time it was tragically interrupted by the Spanish revolution. Only a few weeks before the revolution broke Arbos had led his orchestra on one of his annual spring tours, giving concerts in more than 40 Spanish towns and cities. Music has been silenced in Spain for the time being and Arbos is living in retirement in San Sebastian.

—o-o—

GEORGE SZELL, another thorough and exacting musician, who came to St. Louis from the Prague German opera, is now the regular conductor of the Glasgow orchestra and has also has had marked successes in Manchester and London. Being a Jew, Szell's continental career was seriously handicapped by the rise of Hitler. Conductors who have appeared for single engagements since the incumbency of Golschmann are Fritz Reiner, one of the ablest technicians who ever held a baton but somewhat deficient in warmth, who has just been chosen conductor of the Pittsburgh orchestra; Werner Janssen, who has been conducting this year in Baltimore, and Albert Stroessel, head of the New York Oratorio societies.

Conductors who have held sway over the sporadic operatic performances in these parts are Ernst Knoch, an exceptionally well schooled Wagnerian conductor, Gennaro Papi, now at the Metropolitan, and Laszlo Halasz, a young Hungarian conductor whose penetrating direction of this season's performance of "Tristan and Isolde" gave promise of a well rewarded future. Since being in St. Louis he has conducted several operas with the Philadelphia Civic Opera company, which were favorably received by both press and public.

ROADS Leading to EMPLOYMENT

Beginning a Series of Discussions On How to Go About Obtaining Work; Ads, Agencies, Letters Considered.

By PAULINE WEBSTER

SO you and your job are having a hard time getting together!

A couple of months ago when you started tracking it down you were confident. You had what it took. You'd find a job at once.

But you didn't.

Now fear is beginning to rear its ugly head. Day by day your confidence ebbs. Your sunny smile dulls. The spring in your step uncoils another notch. Your mind is about made up. Dad will simply have to support you until a likely-looking husband appears on the scene.

All of which means that you're giving up, doesn't it?

All right. Listen to us. Granted you're in a tough spot. Competition is keen. Jobs are scarce. You know they're around somewhat but they certainly duck under cover with the greatest of ease every time you loom up. But someone is finding them. Why shouldn't it be you?

Consider for the moment. Are you sure that you've tried as hard as you can? That you're not ignoring several of the best avenues of getting jobs? That you're not traveling a one-way street lined solely with employment agencies?

Not that we don't give due credit to those institutions. We do. They're very important and every girl earnestly seeking a position is smart to make use of several well-established agencies. Beginners, particularly, will find this one of the best means.

We advise, however, that you check up on the reputation of the agency first, if possible. If not, note the type of girl waiting in the reception room. Observe the personnel with a calculating eye. When you are convinced that it is the right place for you to apply, go to it. Sell yourself.

When you are given an application blank to fill out, take your time. Haste still makes waste. And in this case it probably will cost you your chance for being sent out on the best jobs. If your handwriting is poor it is far better to take the blank home, type it out, and return it the next day.

Be sure to look over your application afterwards. Is it properly filled out? Is the spelling correct? When you are sure it is completed as perfectly as you know how, return it to the personnel director, who will place it on file.

We chanced to be interviewing the manager of one agency when an applicant was sent back three times to remedy inaccuracies on her blank. When she finally left the manager sighed and said, "If she can't fill out her own experience data correctly, what would she do with work that was utterly strange to her in an office?" Nine to one chance the girl was never sent out on a job.

Often girls veer away from agencies, using them only as a last resort, because a fee is required. This is illogical reasoning for the fee is usually negligible in comparison to the loss in salary they take while waiting to establish their own contacts.

Be sure, however, before you are sent out on a prospective job that the agency fee is clearly understood.

As we have already intimated, there are other sources that are just as productive of jobs as agencies. Do you read and check into the "Help Wanted" section on the classified advertising pages of newspapers? This is an important source and offers direct contact with an employer, minus any charge.

There is the classic example of Jane S. who had padded a beaten track in and out of personnel offices for some time with no success. When it was suggested that she look over the newspaper ads she pooh-poohed the idea because she didn't feel the jobs offered there would be up to her capabilities. And she had never even looked them over! Finally, in desperation, she began running through them and today she has a marvelous job, earns a grand salary and is very happy. She answered a newspaper ad.

Remember this, however, if a telephone number is given, call and make an appointment. Don't attempt to discuss the job, salary, your experience, appearance, etc., via wire. If only an address is printed, get there early. If the ad requests that you write, don't call in person. We've much more to say about the letter of application later on, but for the present we want to remind you that it should include a list of your qualifications covering the requirements as stated in the advertisement.

In the same section of the newspaper is a space devoted to those seeking jobs. (Don't overlook trade papers and magazines either.) Compose an ad that is brief and to the point.

Friends often prove to be the magnet that draws you to your job. Tell them you're jobless so that when they hear of any vacant positions they will let you know. Don't feel that you are encroaching on your friendship by thus making your plight known. Real friends will be glad to do anything they can. Of course they can't cinch a job but often they can gain a hearing for you. Then it's up to you to convince the employer that you're the girl for the position.

Many schools, churches and colleges maintain vocational bureaus. These are top-notch job avenues. A personal interest is evidenced in your welfare. But that doesn't mean that you can relax, be careless in your approach. When you call on the director, dress and present yourself exactly in the same way that you would if you were interviewing a prospective employer.

Follow your call with a letter which states your qualifications, the sort of job you want and in general sums up your case. Don't let the director's impression of you grow yellowed with age, tucked away in an obscure corner of a busy mind. Drop in and see him every two or three weeks. Make your stay short and business-like.

If you secure a job through the bureau, write a letter expressing your gratitude and drop in at infrequent times to let them know how you are getting along with the work.

—o-o—

HAS it ever occurred to you that it was possible to get a job by letter? It is, but you must be a past master at the art of letter writing. First of all, select a firm with which you would like to be affiliated. Learn all you can about it. Where will you fit in? Why will you be an asset to that company? Why do you choose that particular organization?

In your letter answer all of these questions. If your letter is well written you stand an excellent chance of getting a job, providing, of course, you can follow through with an equally effective personal interview.

There is much to be said about the letter of application. Employers tell us that the majority are poor. They lack luster. They are hastily written. The handwriting is hardly legible. Often spelling is incorrect and grammar is poor—both unpardonable errors.

They come on all kinds of paper—half sheets, torn sheets, soiled sheets. Baby blue and scented paper should be saved for a certain Him. Employers don't appreciate them. Another faux pas is to use hotel stationery.

The letter of application should be typewritten, preferably on business size (8½ by 11 inches) white, good quality paper. Never copy a letter from a textbook. Your prospective employer probably already has relegated several with exactly the same phrasing to the waste basket.

There are three main parts to the letter of application. First, a smart introduction that will arrest the attention of the receiver; secondly the body of the letter in which you build a pyramid of facts about yourself and why you would like to work for the firm; thirdly, an arresting close that will cause the man to step to the phone and ask you to drop in and see him.

Write impersonally. Remember that the receiver of the letter isn't interested in the fact that you have a mother and five sisters to support. He isn't operating a welfare department. He's looking for service. And you must try to sell him on the idea you've got what he wants, or rather, needs.

Ask some friend to correct your letter, check it and aid in the final revision. But when it is finished it must represent YOU. It must open the door to an interview. This letter is your goodwill ambassador, so make it clean, neat and smart.

"The Personal Interview" will be discussed by Miss Webster, Tuesday, in the Daily Magazine of the Post-Dispatch.

Bloused Sweaters

Even the sweaters and knitted fashions are showing signs of bloused tendencies. Noted among some youthful frocks in a St. Louis shop are several two-piece dresses which have overblouses that pull well down over the hips and have tight ribbed bandings. The skirts are pleated in the popular fan type.

Suit Necklines

The plainer the neckline of a spring suit, the greater interest is given to frilly guimpes, jabots and blouses. Bonbon pink organdie, for example, is pleated to form a double jabot that supplies a crisp note to a tailleur. The Pierrot collar extending wide and crisp is another evidence of the variety of neckwear popular with suits.

Need for Rigid Inspection of Meat Products

Epidemics Likely to Result From Loose Methods of Examination.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

IT is a trait of human nature that we think it won't happen to us. An epidemic of smallpox or an epidemic of something else! Until they get close, we don't worry. So we neglect vaccination and other precautions. Perhaps the reports the press has carried lately may help to remind us that eternal vigilance is the price of health.

One of these epidemics occurred at Columbia Falls, Mont. A farmer in North Dakota moved in from his farmstead with 18 children, 13 grandchildren and other relatives, and brought with him sausages which he had manufactured from his own cured hogs. These sausages were expected to last the family through the winter. Just before Christmas nine of them came down with fever and vomiting. Later others in the family took sick. Finally, one child died and it was found that they were all suffering from trichiniasis due to the infection of their sausages.

TRICHINIASIS is due to a small worm which gets into the muscles of domestic animals. It is especially likely to attack pork. Unless the meat is thoroughly cured or cooked these worms are not killed and will go out into the tissues and muscles of anyone who eats such meat.

The magazine from which I abstract this report, says that the disease is widespread: that there are "17,000,000 estimated United States victims." I do not know who made this estimation, but it seems extremely high. For instance, in Ohio the disease has been reportable since 1928, and from that date until March, 1936, there were 96 cases reported. If every state had as high a number and the reported cases represented only half of those which actually occurred, it would mean less than 10,000 cases in eight years. Reliable statistics are, however, notably lacking.

THE CONDITION calls attention to the fact that there is a great deal of meat put on the market which does not undergo careful inspection. Meat is not federally inspected unless it is carried from state to state, or unless the butcher makes request for Federal inspection. In many states irresponsible private butchers and packers bootleg uninspected meat to cheap restaurant and butcher shops, and epidemics of this kind could easily result from this practice.

Even carefully inspected meat may have enough trichina to cause an epidemic. So Hygeia, the health magazine, warns "Pink pork is dangerous and should never be eaten. Raw pork must be cooked until white." The United States is the most trichinous country in the world.

—o-o—

E. P.: "What harm, if any, does it do one with a cold or cough to swallow the phlegm?"

Answer: So long as it is simply an acute cold the stomach destroys the germs and they do no harm. If, however, the "cold" is really tuberculosis, swallowing the sputum may lead to tuberculosis of the intestines.

There is no Hole-in-One-Golf club because no architect can lay one out, owing to the fact that no fairways would be needed, no caddies would be required, there wouldn't be any scenery and no player would ever leave the clubhouse if he could get another sucker to listen to him.

A locomotive puffs about 950 times a minute; when a ship's gong strikes eight bells it can be either 12, 4 or 8 o'clock; Chinese walk single file because their native streets are narrow and they cannot even break the habit on the Atlantic City boardwalk; an ocean liner burns 7000 tons of fuel oil crossing the ocean, and thunder has been heard from 23 miles on a clear day. All of which is good information if you had some place to put it.

Taking another long breath, we dish up the statistical gossip that rain drops fall about 19 feet a second; way back in 1794 the sovereign State of Pennsylvania fined you 67 cents for profanity either with or without a reason, and Iceland has no army and no navy. Therefore you couldn't declare war on Iceland because there would be nothing to fight.

Starting today Facts Not Worth Knowing merges with our other department of useless information. So what? Few people know that So What? was the earliest Greek fraternity in America. It was established when Christopher Columbus saw a berry bush in the Atlantic and his crew hollered, "So What?"

In the So What? department we find that snowflakes are larger in moist weather, that nobody knows what causes marsh lights, and that not everybody can build a railroad in America just because he has enough money to. You must get permission from the Government.

—o-o—

Here are some So Whats? not worth the powder to debug them. (Debug is a word we invented to take the place of delouse. 1. There were no mixed doubles in the 1936 ping-pong championships at Prague. So What? So they didn't play any. 2. The first player to run with a football was Ellis of Rugby in 1823. So What? So he apologized and the spectators got their money back.

Color Themes

Two color themes are being developed in matching bags and hats. Tones of yellow and bright blue are combined most frequently and seem to offer the most popular choice for wear with spring tailleurs. Felt and suede often are used together for both hat and bag, the darker tone serving as the basic one for each, while the yellow is employed as trimming. Bright red and navy form another striking alliance.

DRAMA MOTION PICTURES MUSIC RADI

Reign of Helen Hayes' Victoria at the American

Sixty Years in Life of British Queen and Empress Described in 10 Dramatic Episodes of "Victoria Regina," by Laurence Housman.

GREETED by more advance interest than any other production of the season, Helen Hayes' "Victoria Regina" comes to the American Theater tomorrow night for its week's run. The production has back of it a record of 517 performances on Broadway, in two separate seasons, and an eventful tour through the fall and winter.

The drama is a collection of 10 one-act playlets, detailing the 64 years of the reign of Queen Victoria of England, from 1837 to 1901. These were written by Laurence Housman, brother of the late A. E. Housman of "A Shropshire Lad" fame.

Deeply interested in the life and personality of Victoria, Housman some years ago wrote a playlet dealing with her Diamond Jubilee. That playlet is now the closing scene of "Victoria Regina." Housman followed with others until he had written a series of 30 short dramas, each with a complete and independent entity.

The series was published in book form, but since there was a ban in England on any dramatic production depicting the life of Victoria, the playlets could not be presented publicly. They were done, however, in costume but with no stage settings, in semi-private performances, and Gilbert Miller, the noted New York and London producer, heard of them in 1934. On viewing them, he was greatly impressed, sent a copy of the book to Miss Hayes and she hurried to London, where final contracts were entered into.

The present 10 episodes were then selected and arranged in dramatic form for Miss Hayes. "Victoria Regina" has no connection with the British film, "Victoria the Great," since the two are by different authors, although the material, being based on historical incidents, is much the same.

In the course of the three acts, Miss Hayes goes from the slender and graceful 18-year-old Queen to the plump and elderly Empress of 60 years later. In the role of Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg of Gotha, the husband to whom Victoria was deeply devoted, is Werner Bateman, young Viennese actor, now making his first appearances in the country. Bateman was engaged for the road production when Vincent Price of St. Louis, the Prince Albert on Broadway, withdrew at the close of the New York run. Price has since gone into new plays of the current season.

Others in the cast are Abraham Sofear, as Disraeli; Alexander Clark, Kate Warriner, James Gibson, Charles Francis, Eva Leonard-Boyne, Tom Woods, Pamela Henry-May, Jane Cobb, Augusta Roeland, Oswald Marshall, Albert Froom, Izetta Jewel, Guy Monypenny and Raymond Johnson, many of whom were in the New York production.

Since last June 20, the 100th anniversary of Victoria's accession to the throne, the ban on the play has been lifted in London and a Gilbert Miller production there, as well as one in Paris, has been highly successful. Miss Hayes' tour is scheduled to end in Los Angeles in June. She has been rehearsing Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" for future use and gave two performances of the play during her recent Chicago engagement.

Despite its popularity, the play can remain only its allotted week, which was arranged for more than a year ago and has not been changed in that time. It has other bookings and the American has another company, the returning "Brother Rat" unit which was here at holiday time, set in for the week beginning next Sunday night.

One of the most startling novelties of the current Broadway season, the Orson Welles' modern dress production of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," comes to the American on Monday, April 4. The company, organized for the road and now in Chicago, is composed of Tom Powers, Edgar Barrier, Morgan Farley, Lawrence Fletcher, Edmond O'Brien, Muriel Brassler, Helen Craig and others.

Using a virtually bare stage and dressing his cast in civilian clothes and military uniforms, Welles has interpreted "Julius Caesar" in terms of present-day dictatorship and social turmoil. He has trimmed the play to a two-hour thriller in such a manner that the production won the hallelujahs of New York critics immediately and has been a reigning hit since last November.

Guidi String Quartet At Coronado Tonight

In its final concert at the Coronado Hotel at 8:30 o'clock tonight, the Guidi String Quartet will present the first St. Louis performance of Igor Stravinsky's "Histoire du Soldat," suite for clarinet, violin and piano, and will play also quartets by Borodin and Beethoven.

"Histoire du Soldat," which had its world premiere in 1918, was played for the first time in this country in New York in 1925, with Stravinsky at the piano and Scipione Guidi, director of the Guidi String Quartet, as violinist. The suite is descriptive music, telling the story of a soldier, a devil and a princess. Assisting artists for its presentation will be Corinne Frederick, pianist, and R. M. Zottarelle, clarinetist.

The program in detail:

String Quartet No. 2 in G Major — A. Borodin
- Allegro moderato
- Scherzo
- Nocturne
- Finale

Histoire Du Soldat — — — Igor Stravinsky
- Marche du Soldat
- Le violin du Soldat
- Petit concert
- Tango, Valse, Rag
- La danse Du Diable

(First St. Louis performance)

String Quartet Op. 59 No. 3 — Beethoven
- Introduzione—Allegro vivace
- Andante con moto quasi Allegretto
- Menuetto
- Allegro molto

"Chimes of Normandy" In De Luxe Revival By Municipal Opera

ANOTHER Municipal Opera presentation with Metropolitan Opera singers, after the manner of "The Bartered Bride" last summer, will be a feature of the coming season. The vehicle selected is "Chimes of Normandy," comic opera which was heard in Forest Park the first season, 1919, and again in 1921.

Selection of "Chimes of Normandy" runs the list of repertory announcements to 10 shows. Negotiations are under way to obtain two European operettas for the remaining places in the 12 weeks' entertainment.

The music to "Chimes of Normandy" was written by Robert Jean Planquette, French composer of "Rip Van Winkle," "Nell Gwynne" and "Merrie England."

The book is by Clairville and Babet, and deals with peasant and fisher life in a village of Normandy during the reign of Louis XV. The play has numerous comedy situations, a haunted house theme and a romantic love interest.

"Gentlemen Unafraid," a world premiere, by Jerome Kern, Oscar Hammerstein II and Otto Harbach, will open the season June 3. Other productions are the world premiere of a stage adaptation of Robert Stolz's film operetta success, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time," which will have the stage title of "Lost Waltz"; the first St. Louis performances of two New York Center Theater operettas, "White Horse Inn" and "Virginia"; the Municipal Opera premieres of George Gershwin's "Of Thee I Sing" and Ziegfeld's "Rosalie"; revivals of "Show Boat" and Jerome Kern's "Roberta." The children's show will be the St. Louis premiere of an old extravaganza, "The Gingerbread [illegible]."

THE CELEBRATED NOTIFICATION SCENE FROM "VICTORIA REGINA." HELEN HAYES, AS VICTORIA, HAS BEEN ROUSED FROM BED TO BE TOLD THAT SHE IS QUEEN OF ENGLAND.

An Unspoiled 'Tom Sawyer'

By Colvin McPherson

FOR those who haven't walked a picket fence in 20 years or carried frogs in their hats since they were caught at it, Loew's Theater has the most sentimentally pleasant picture of the year. "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," brought to the screen for the third time, is all that Mark Twain might have wanted it to be and its Tom Sawyer is nothing less than perfect.

Master Tommy Kelly of the East Bronx, N. Y., becomes, under the skilled direction of Norman Taurog, the kind of human quicksilver that Tom would be, always in trouble whether he wants to be or not, mischievous, shrewd, sunny and eternally forgivable, no matter what he does. Whether Master Kelly has other ambitions in Hollywood or not—he is assigned to a second picture already—it will take the edge off a magnificent piece of casting if he goes ahead.

Although a few incidents that Mark Twain set forth have been clipped in the picture production, the screen play follows its original closer than most Hollywood transcriptions. All the well-remembered events are renewed—the whitewashing of the fence, the trip to the graveyard with a dead cat, the running away to play pirate on an island in the Mississippi, Tom and his friends attending their own funeral, Tom and Becky Thatcher lost in the cave. A balcony full of youngsters at Loew's Friday got all kinds of thrills out of these exploits and adventures.

The film is in full color, yet, aside from showing the forget-me-nots on Becky's bonnet with greater fidelity and capturing the reddish brown of Tom's hair, the color might have been dispensed with. Some landscapes, some river scenes and views in the cave are much too heavily stained.

Next to Tom's performance, those most appreciated are Ann Gillis' portrayal of Becky, Walter Brennan as Muff Potter and Jackie Moran as Huckleberry Finn. May Robson is her usual over-acting softie as Aunt Polly and Victor Jory is only pictorial as Indian Joe. Yet even both of these are not out of place in a story that does not call for much restraint from its grown-ups.

Loew's "associate" feature, as the double-bill items are beginning to be called, is a romantic drama, "I Met My Love Again," starring Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett. Taken from a magazine story called "Summer Lightning," it tells how two faithful hearts were separated some six or seven years ago and got together in matrimony recently. Difference in temperaments was the only reason for the rift. Fonda was too studious, Joan was too gay. She ran away to Paris with a good-for-nothing, had a daughter, and when the good-for-nothing was shot and killed, returned to Vermont. By that time, Henry, a young biology professor, was doing rather well and getting a little gay himself. One of his students was in love with him, but Joan disposed of her.

Far more sensible than it sounds on paper, "I Met My Love Again" is refreshingly written, excellently cast and directed. Fonda already is established as a stalwart of the screen, and if any proof is needed of his ability to act, the scene in which he does meet Miss Bennett after the many years can compete with the best of them. The two directors of the film, Arthur Ripley and Joshua Logan, seem to have done more to energize Miss Bennett, too, than did the audiences which saw her in "Stage Door" at the American early this year.

Except for the fact that Miss Bennett has responded, the picture would have been easily purloined from her by Louise Platt, a new actress who plays the co-ed and who, thank goodness, has already been placed under contract for the future. Although Dorothy Stickney, Florence Lake, Alan Baxter and Dame May Whitty are not exactly new to pictures, they may seem to be this week, with the amount of attention they get.

Walking Down Broadway.

SIX girls, "who dared to live for the things other girls only long for," are the main characters of "Walking Down Broadway" which is the picture you have to sit through at the Fox in order to see Mae West in the stage show.

Claire Trevor, Leah Ray, Jayne Regan, Phyllis Brooks, Dixie Dunbar and Lynn Bari are separating on a New Year's Eve but agree to get together a year later. Just to show what can happen, one is hit by a truck, another falls out of a skyscraper window, one falls in love with a young embezzler, one is convicted of murder, two get rich husbands. Dangerous occupation, being a chorus girl. And dangerous it is for Leah Ray, a torch singer, to try dramatic acting, as a courtroom scene demonstrates.

The stage show, except for Miss West, is typically music hall stuff—a quartet of roller skaters, a trio of comedians, some burlesque ballroom dancers and the really great drum act of Jack Powell, who was at Municipal Opera two summers ago.

Miss West, accompanied by a half dozen men in top hats and tailcoats—she in a glittering Gay Nineties affair—sings a little, dances a little, weaves and weaves, then goes into a skit about the meeting of a siren and a gigolo and their conversation on a chaise lounge. He says, "You are my Snow White" and she says, "Yes, I drifted," and it's all in fun, not intended to harm anybody, and makes 'em laugh, and that's show business.

Penrod and His Twin Brother.

THE Mauch Twins, who were in "The Prince and the Pauper," are stars of a juvenile entertainment entitled "Penrod and His Twin Brother" at the Missouri. The studio which produced the film has been hard put to find stories for twin boys, but apparently has hit upon an idea that will serve for the future. If there can be a "Penrod and His Twin Brother," why not a "David Copperfield and His Twin Brother," "Oliver Twist and His Twin Brother," "Hiawatha and his Twin Brother" or "Robin Hood and His Twin Brother?"

The present show is typically youthful melodrama, how a gang of boys rescue one of their members, capture a dangerous band of bank robbers and escape from a shack that falls in the river, or ocean, or lake.

"Bringing Up Baby," in which Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant appear, has moved into the Missouri on the same program, from the Fox. Admitting that the so-called "screw-ball" comedies are quite popular now and that some of them are enormously amusing—as, for example, the approaching "Merrily We Live"—the Hepburn-Grant affair is too much of a good thing.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," cause of wonder and admiration, is still at the Ambassador, with "Quintupland," an equally entertaining featurette.

Trudi Schoop Ballet On Civic Music List

Trudi Schoop and her comic ballet have been engaged as the fourth Civic Music League attraction for next year. Three previously announced are John Charles Thomas, Nathan Milstein and the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Schoop and her ballet will have had four transcontinental tours to their credit this coming season. The Schoop ballet is unique. Its members define themselves as comic mimes and as such devote themselves to satire and humorous ballets, but in reality are highly trained dancers and masters of pantomime. Their musical scores are played by two pianos.

'Young Elizabeth' To Open Thursday At Little Theater

"THE YOUNG ELIZABETH," winner of the Little Theater's $250 prize award for 1937, will begin its two weeks' run at the theater, 812 Union boulevard, on Thursday evening. The play, anonymously entered in the competition, was written by the Princess Amelie Rives Troubetzkoy, noted novelist and dramatist. The author, who lives in Virginia and discussed production of the play with Director Harold Bassage there, will not come to St. Louis during the run of the play.

"The Young Elizabeth" is a romantic story of the love affair between Robert Dudley and Queen Elizabeth, just after she has ascended the throne of England. The first of the four acts of the play is set in a room in Hatfield House, where Elizabeth and her retinue receive at daybreak, after an all night's vigil, the news of the death of Elizabeth's sister, Queen Mary. Elizabeth is immediately proclaimed Queen at the age of 25. Her first act is to appoint her wise old friend, Sir William Cecil, to the position of First Secretary and Chief Member of her Privy Council. Next, she pardons Robert Dudley, on whom she showers her favors and appointments, not suddenly, but, at Cecil's cautioning, by degrees. Another, Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, an old friend, she makes Ambassador to France.

The following three acts, occurring two years later, take place in the Queen's private apartments in Whitehall. Dudley, high-spirited and handsome, has become the favorite of the gay young Queen, although he has an estranged wife of his father's choice, living in retirement.

Elizabeth, constantly being urged to wed, receives many offers of marriage which she rejects. When Elizabeth refuses, a rumor is spread by enemies at home and abroad that Robert Dudley is plotting his wife's death in order to marry Elizabeth himself. These suspicions seem confirmed, when Dudley's wife is found dead, apparently from a fall. Although Dudley is technically cleared of the charges, and Elizabeth believes him innocent, she realizes finally that her subjects and her enemies will not sanction her contemplated marriage to him. Rather than risk a civil war or weaken the position of England abroad, she sorrowfully, but steadfastly, gives up the marriage.

Adelaide Tarrant Strong will be seen in the title role of Elizabeth. Harold Stark will be the Robert Dudley, and Gordon Summers will be Sir William Cecil. Other important roles will be played by William Miller, as the Spanish Ambassador, the Bishop de Quadra; Leonore Griffith as Blanch Parry, confidante of Elizabeth; Margaret Mooney, Jaime Mason, Leo Lederer and Mary Jane Roach. Also in the cast are Mildred Basden, Leonard Visser, Frank Corley, Robert Karnes, Edward Oresman, Julian Luckett, Robert Hille, Jackman Bieger, Dolores Harnett, John Fleming, Wilroy Miller and Charles Jacoby.

Several of the more notable scenes from the play will be broadcast over station KMOX, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock this evening.

Mummers in Two Showings of 'Green Grow the Lilacs'

FRONTIER drama with a background of songs and dances is the Mummers' offering for Wednesday and Friday nights at the Wednesday Club auditorium, when the group will do Lynn Riggs' "Green Grow the Lilacs." First produced by the Theater Guild in 1931, with Franchot Tone, June Walker and Helen Westley in leading roles, the show came to the American Theater later that year.

The play is laid in Oklahoma territory in 1900 and the characters are the hardy pioneers of that day. Curley, a roving cowboy, is in love with Laurey Williams, whose people were farmers. Jeeter Fry, a hired hand on the Williams' farm is also in love with Laurey and a murderous hate springs up between Curley and Jeeter. At a party on a neighboring ranch Jeeter and Curley almost get into a fight but are stopped in time by the guests. Curley marries Laurey, and in a "shivoree" scene they are placed on a haystack. Jeeter, following the crowd, tries to set fire to the stack, and in a fight with Curley, falls on his knife and is killed.

The play has a musical setting important to the story's development. The songs and dances are chosen from the folk music of that period. The songs that Curley sings are "Ta Whoop Ti Yi," "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Sam Hall" and "Strawberry Roan." Laurey, Aunt Eller, and Ado Annie sing "Miner Boy," "Next Big River," and "Dangerous Nan." A girls' chorus has three numbers, "Hello Girls," "I Wish I Was Single," and "Idyho," and the men's chorus sings three number, "Blood on the Saddle," "Empty Cot," and the famous "Chisholm Trail." Four Western square dances will have accompaniment by Louise Meyers, accordionist, and Frank Novotny, banjoist.

Leading parts are played by Clara Dell Swango, Warren Metzinger, Victor Zuzenak, Mary Honenberger, Al Henengarten and Gene[illegible]e Albers.

Y. M. H. A. Players To Stage "Dead End"

First non-professional production anywhere of Sidney Kingsley's drama of the slums, "Dead End," is set for next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights by the Dramatic Club of the Y. M. H. A.—Y. W. H. A., Union boulevard and Enright avenue. Harry R. McCain is directing.

Among the 30 players are Leonard Blumenthal, Al Gelfand, Sam Lewin, Meyer Fiman, Manuel Averbuch, Morris Yoffe, Hyman Gimpelson, Nathan Cutler, Ruth Chotinsky and Buddy Schucart.

Swedish Film Program

The Swedish film, "Intermezzo," will be shown twice next Thursday evening in Assembly Hall No. 1, Municipal Auditorium, under auspices of the Swedish Cultural Society of St. Louis. The feature will be accompanied by three short subjects on Sweden. In the cast of "Intermezzo," the story of a romance between a noted violinist and his young woman accompanist, are Gosta Ekman, Inga Tidblad, Erik Berglund and Britt Hagman. Performances begin at 7 p. m. and 9 p. m.

Symphony's Final Pai[illegible] Of Concer[illegible]

Strauss' "Thus Spe[illegible] Zarathustra" Feature[illegible] Again by Orchestr[illegible]

SUBSCRIPTION concerts of St. Louis Symphony Orch[illegible] for the 1937-38 season end[illegible] week with the regular appear[illegible] on Friday afternoon and Sat[illegible] evening, at the Auditorium [illegible] House. The program repeats [illegible] ard Strauss' tone poem, [illegible] Spake Zarathustra," which p[illegible] extraordinarily popular on [illegible] gram three weeks ago, and in[illegible] Mendelssohn's "Italian" Sym[illegible] and first St. Louis presentati[illegible] Phillip James' overture, [illegible] Harte."

Although completing its re[illegible] concerts, the orchestra is [illegible] ing into one of its busiest pe[illegible] On Wednesday afternoon, it [illegible] the last of its series of high sc[illegible] concerts at Southwest High, [illegible] Sunday afternoon it will be [illegible] tured on a "Magic Key" broad[illegible] and the same evening will gi[illegible] special program for the Music [illegible] ucators' National Conference, [illegible] der auspices of the Board of [illegible] cation. Both these programs [illegible] at the Opera House.

Immediately afterward, th[illegible] semble and Conductor Vla[illegible] Golschmann start on a two-w[illegible] tour of the South, returning [illegible] April 10 for the annual pe[illegible] fund concert, at which Nino [illegible] tini, tenor of opera, radio [illegible] screen, will be the soloist.

The repetition of "Thus S[illegible] Zarathustra" this week will m[illegible] the third occasion of its [illegible] formance by the St. Louis [illegible] phony. First introduced into [illegible] orchestra's repertory when Ern[illegible] Fernandez Arbos was conduc[illegible] in 1929-30, it had not been pl[illegible] again until this month. The [illegible] poem, composed more than 40 [illegible] ago, was inspired by Nietz[illegible] philosophical work of the s[illegible] name.

Mendelssohn's Fourth Symph[illegible] to which the composer himself [illegible] ferred as the "Italian" Symph[illegible] has no avowed organization t[illegible] would necessitate that title. Th[illegible] is little doubt, however, t[illegible] the exuberant finale, the "Sa[illegible] rello," was suggested by the [illegible] man Carnival, which Mendelss[illegible] witnessed and described in a ch[illegible] acteristic letter dated Feb. 8, 1[illegible] on his first visit to Naples. [illegible] completed the symphony in Ber[illegible] March 13, 1833, and it was pres[illegible] ed for the first time publicly [illegible] month later in London by the P[illegible] harmonic Orchestra, with the c[illegible] poser conducting.

The first movement is a h[illegible] piece of writing constructed on t[illegible] ditional lines. The second mo[illegible] ment has been called "The P[illegible] grims' March," with the introd[illegible] tory measures resembling the c[illegible] of a muezzin from his minaret. T[illegible] third movement is styled after [illegible] minuet, while the "Saltarello" h[illegible] traces of the mad adventures [illegible] the revellers of the Roman C[illegible] nival.

Phillip James, composer of [illegible] overture, "Bret Harte," is prof[illegible] sor of music and chairman of t[illegible] department of music at New Y[illegible] University. The work, written [illegible] 1934, and performed for the fi[illegible] time by the New York Philha[illegible] monic-Symphony Orchestra, D[illegible] 20, 1936, is the third of three ov[illegible] tures written by James under t[illegible] same title. The first two have ne[illegible] been performed. The one to [illegible] heard here is not programmat[illegible] It is based on bits of songs h[illegible] longing to the time and peop[illegible] written about by Bret Harte in h[illegible] novels. The composer has a[illegible] nounced he has tried to engend[illegible] in the overture the romance, th[illegible] boisterousness, the animation an[illegible] the many other abstract qualit[illegible] of the Western characters of th[illegible] Bret Harte stories. The overtu[illegible] is scored for full orchestra, au[illegible] mented by a tenor banjo and t[illegible] percussion section enlarged [illegible] such novelties as a rattle, wi[illegible] brush and slapstick.

The detailed program for Fr[illegible] day and Saturday:

Jessica Dragonette Concert Postponed

The concert engagement of Jessica Dragonette, radio soprano, at the Auditorium Opera House, originally set for Tuesday night, has been postponed until next month with no definite date set. Rearrangement of her tour, the first she has ever made in this section, is given as the reason for the delay.

Holmes' Final Lecture

Burton Holmes' travel lecture series at the Auditorium Opera House ends tomorrow night with "Down to Rio," in which he will describe an airplane journey to Havana, Yucatan, Guatemala, the Canal Zone, Chile and finally Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro.

Symphony's Final Pair Of Concert

Strauss' "Thus Spake Zarathustra" Featured Again by Orchestra

SUBSCRIPTION concerts of St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for the 1937-38 season end this week with the regular appearance on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, at the Auditorium Opera House. The program repeats Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Thus Spake Zarathustra," which proved extraordinarily popular on a program three weeks ago, and includes Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and first St. Louis presentation of Phillip James' overture, "Bret Harte."

Although completing its regular concerts, the orchestra is entering into one of its busiest periods. On Wednesday afternoon, it gives the last of its series of high school concerts at Southwest High, and Sunday afternoon it will be featured on a "Magic Key" broadcast and the same evening will give a special program for the Music Educators' National Conference, under auspices of the Board of Education. Both these programs are at the Opera House.

Immediately afterward, the ensemble and Conductor Vladimir Golschmann start on a two-week tour of the South, returning in April 10 for the annual pension fund concert, at which Nino Martini, tenor of opera, radio and screen, will be the soloist.

The repetition of "Thus Spake Zarathustra" this week will make the third occasion of its performance by the St. Louis Symphony. First introduced into the orchestra's repertory when Enrique Fernandez Arbos was conductor in 1929-30, it had not been played again until this month. The tone poem, composed more than 40 years ago, was inspired by Nietzsche's philosophical work of the same name.

Mendelssohn's Fourth Symphony, to which the composer himself referred as the "Italian" Symphony, has no avowed organization that would necessitate that title. There is little doubt, however, that the exuberant finale, the "Saltarello," was suggested by the Roman Carnival, which Mendelssohn witnessed and described in a characteristic letter dated Feb. 8, 18[illegible] on his first visit to Naples. He completed the symphony in Berlin March 13, 1833, and it was presented for the first time publicly a month later in London by the Philharmonic Orchestra, with the composer conducting.

The first movement is a lucid piece of writing constructed on traditional lines. The second movement has been called "The Pilgrims' March," with the introductory measures resembling the chant of a muezzin from his minaret. The third movement is styled after a minuet, while the "Saltarello" has traces of the mad adventures of the revellers of the Roman Carnival.

Phillip James, composer of the overture, "Bret Harte," is professor of music and chairman of the department of music at New York University. The work, written in 1934, and performed for the first time by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, Dec. 20, 1936, is the third of three overtures written by James under the same title. The first two have never been performed. The one to be heard here is not programmatic. It is based on bits of songs belonging to the time and people written about by Bret Harte in his novels. The composer has announced he has tried to engender in the overture the romance, the boisterousness, the animation and the many other abstract qualities of the Western characters of the Bret Harte stories. The overture is scored for full orchestra, augmented by a tenor banjo and the percussion section enlarged by such novelties as a rattle, wire brush and slapstick.

The detailed program for Friday and Saturday:

Overture "Bret Harte" — — Phillip James
(First St. Louis performance).
Symphony No. 4 in A Major, "Italian," Opus 90 — — — Mendelssohn
I Allegro vivace
II Andante con moto
III Con moto moderato
IV Saltarello (Presto).
Tone Poem: "Also Sprach Zarathustra" — — — Strauss

Hanson to Lead NBC Symphony Saturday Night

THE conductor of the NBC Symphony Orchestra's broadcast on KSD at 9 o'clock next Saturday night will be Dr. Howard Hanson of Rochester, N. Y., composer of the music for the opera, "Merry Mount," for which Richard L. Stokes wrote the libretto.

In addition to the first performance of his own new Third Symphony in D, Dr. Hanson has programmed for the broadcast Locatelli's Concerto Grosso in D-minor, his own orchestration of the overture and incidental music that Purcell wrote for "Diocleisan," and MacDowell's second "Indian Suite." His symphony is dedicated to the first Swedish settlers in America, who landed 300 years ago where Wilmington, Del., now stands. However, it is not program music, although it is intended to reflect aspects of the hopes for religious freedom which inspired the settlers.

The week's concert schedule includes:

Today—8:30 a. m. on KMOX, Aubade for Strings. 11 a. m. on WDAF and WEAF Net and W9XPD (31.6 meg), Home Symphony. 11:30 a. m. on KWK, Radio City Concert; Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," ballet music, and excerpts from his "Rosamunde," excerpts from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," and singing of the "Le Reve" aria from "Manon" by Jan Peerce. 1 p. m. on KMOX and WBBM, Borris Morros String Quartet.

BETTY WINKLER AND BORIS KARLOFF, THE MOVIE HORROR ACTOR, WHO WILL PLAY THE LEADING ROLES IN KSD'S "LIGHTS OUT" DRAMATIC PERIODS AT 11:30 WEDNESDAY NIGHT AND ON THE FOUR FOLLOWING WEDNESDAYS.

COMING FEATURES

TOMORROW, at 5:15 p. m., on the WEAF net, an attempt will be made to establish radio contact for a MacGregor Arctic Expedition broadcast from its camp in Greenland. A new Sing and Swing program is scheduled at 6 p. m. Monday through Friday on the CBS net and 10 p. m. on KMOX. Jack Fulton, tenor of the night-time Poetic Melodies series and the Andrews Sisters of the Sunday Double Everything program, will be featured with Carl Hohengarten's orchestra. The Intercity Golden Gloves boxing bouts in Madison Square Garden, New York, will be covered on WGN from 10:15 p. m. to the end of the contests.

Wednesday, at 7:30 p. m., Eddie Cantor, Deanna Durbin and Bobby Breen will broadcast their last program in their current series. Next week, they will move to the 6:30-7 p. m. period Monday night. Ben Bernie also will do his last program at 8:30 p. m., as next week he will take the Wednesday spot vacated by Cantor.

Friday, at 7 p. m., the CBS net will begin broadcasting a weekly dramatic program based on "The Ghost of Benjamin Sweet," a play performed twice in the Columbia Workshop. The ghost will be portrayed as the wish fulfillment of mankind, irresponsible, taking mild revenge on mildly mean persons, ludicrous revenue on vicious people and generally getting square with his enemies.

Saturday, there will be another of the FHA's Master Builder programs, at 5:15 p. m. on the WJZ net. With Art Tatum, the blind Negro pianist, featured, the Saturday Night Swing Club will be on the CBS net at 6:30 instead of 6 p. m. The Banker's Mile race at the Chicago Relays, in which Glenn Cunningham and Archie Sam Romani are expected to run, will be covered at 10 p. m. on the CBS net and WBBM.

A weekly Tales of Great Rivers series will begin at 9 p. m. Tuesday, April 5, on the WJZ net with Lisa Sergio, formerly announcer for 2RO, Rome, Italy, as narrator and music by the NBC Concert Orchestra, H. Leopold Spitalny conducting. The first program will be devoted to the Danube River, and the music will be that of Lehar, Lisst and Brahms and folk tunes of Central Europe.

Suderman's "Magde" will be performed by the Radio Guild at 2 p. m. Friday on the WJZ net.

The Last of the Lockwoods serial is now scheduled at 4 p. m. Sundays on the WJZ chain.

Nine broadcasts of features of the meeting of the Music Educators' National Conference in St. Louis will be broadcast in the week of March 27-April 1, including Dr. Joseph E. Maddy's Fun in Music concert, music by school bands, choruses and orchestras and an address by Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education.

Dramatic Series From KSD Studios to Begin on Tuesday

Paths of Destiny Will Dramatize Consequences of Great Disasters—Boris Karloff in "Lights Out" Play Wednesday Night.

UNDER the title, Paths of Destiny, dramatizations of incidents in famous disasters and consequences to certain families resulting from them will be broadcast by KSD from 9 to 9:30 Tuesday nights, beginning this week. The opening program will cover a chain of happenings having their inception in a loss suffered in the sinking of the Lusitania. In subsequent broadcasts, the San Francisco fire, the Chicago fire, the Ohio flood, the gold rush of 1849, the Dust Bowl tragedy and other disasters will be covered.

Marie Harrington's programs on KSD have been shifted from 1 to 1:15 o'clock afternoons Monday through Friday. Hitherto, Miss Harrington has broadcast at 11:30 mornings.

The broadcasts will be staged and produced in the KSD studios with casts of St. Louis actors, special sound effects and an orchestra supplying incidental, transitional and background music.

Among the actors who will play roles in the opening broadcast will be Nancy Fitzgerald and Elliott Bergfeld, of the Little Theater; Ruth Garvin, who has played in New York on CBS network programs; Nellie Booth, ten-year-old Mary Jane Rannels, Haskell Schwartzberg and James Dutson.

STARTING at 3:45 tomorrow morning, a new KSD series, called Mrs. Dodsworth, Day by Day, will be broadcast at the same time Monday through Friday. The program is designed to be a day-by-day account of Mrs. Dodsworth, who is any American housewife, and of her family, their activities and their problems, which will be about the same as those which develop in any family life. A regular feature will be a discussion of specific problems suggested by listeners.

Beginning this week, KSD will broadcast at 4:30 p. m. Wednesdays weekly interviews with St. Louis physicians on cancer and the questions about it most frequently arising in laymen's minds. The opening interview will be with Dr. Albert E. Casey, head of the department of pathology, St. Louis University Medical School. Other interviews are scheduled as follows: March 30, Dr. Joseph F. Bredeck, Health Commissioner; April 6, Dr. Howard A. McCordock, head of the department of pathology, Washington University School of Medicine; April 13, Dr. O. P. J. Falk, senior instructor in medicine, St. Louis University Medical School; April 20, Dr. David P. Barr, head of the department of medicine, Washington University School of Medicine; April 27, Dr. C. Malone Stroud, instructor in medicine at the Washington University Medical School and head of the medical clinic at Barnard Hospital. The interviews, which will be broadcast under the general title, "Cancer Can Be Cured," will be sponsored by the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

BORIS KARLOFF of "Frankenstein" and other movie horror roles fame will begin his five-week engagement to play leads in KSD's Lights Out period at 11:30 Wednesday night. The play for his opening performance has not been selected, but it may be that "Cat Wife," one of the most popular dramatizations broadcast in this period, will be revived. "Cat Wife," the tale of a neurotic woman, was written by Arch Oboler, author of most of the Lights Out offerings. Karloff, who says that he never misses a Lights Out broadcast if he can help it, is in Chicago rehearsing.

A talk by T. Arnold Hill, director of industrial relations for the National Urban League, is scheduled on KSD at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon.

Tomorrow night's Public Hero No. 1 broadcast on KSD will be the first part of a two-installment dramatization of the story of an unlucky gambler who turned bandit in New Orleans, became a bank robber and killer, and figured in two widely publicized jail breaks. It will be the first time that this program has departed from a policy of dramatizing stories of police suppression of criminals in single half-hour broadcasts.

Friday's First Nighter play on KSD will be "The Witch's Song," based on the witch hunt in Salem, Mass., in colonial days. Barbara Luddy will play the role of Ann Roberts, an orphan, rescued from a band of Indians by the hero, played by Les Tremayne. The climax will come when Ann is about to be condemned to die at the stake as a witch.

Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be KSD's Great Plays bill for the 4 to 5 o'clock period Saturday afternoon. A special orchestral arrangement of Mendelssohn's incidental music will be used in the production.

A ticket man at the pari-mutuel window of the Santa Anita track, who was "stuck" with $50 worth of tickets by a belligerent customer and in the end won a small fortune with the undesired tickets, will have a part in Robert L. Ripley's program at 7 p. m. Saturday on KSD.

ON KSD TUESDAY

FIBBER McGEE, WHOSE PROGRAM IS NOW BROADCAST ON KSD AT 8:30 TUESDAY NIGHTS INSTEAD OF MONDAY EVENINGS.

GUEST STARS

TODAY—Ossy Renardy, Viennese boy violinist, and Clyde Barrie, the baritone, in Magazine of the Air; Bess Johnson of the Hilltop House serial in the On Broadway period; Jack Benny and Joe Penner tentatively billed for Phil Baker's fifth year on the air program; Ida Lupino and Maxie Rosenblum, the fighter, with Fegs Murray; Joan Bennett, of the movies, with Tyrone Power

Belleville Tornado Heroine on KSD At 2:00 P. M. Today

THIRTEEN-YEAR-OLD Marilyn Emge, who was the heroine of a train flagging episode immediately after the recent Belleville tornado, will be on KSD's Radio Newsreel program at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

As soon as the story of her feat was published, the NBC program department made arrangements through KSD for Marilyn and her father, State Representative Ben Emge, to be flown to Chicago so that she could be interviewed by Wallace Butterworth and Parks Johnson, who conduct the Radio Newsreel series.

As will be recalled, when the storm partly demolished her home and blew a steel tower across the railroad tracks, her first thought was of a fast passenger train scheduled to pass soon. Running some distance to the nearest telephone she gave warning of the obstruction on the tracks in time.

ON SHORT WAVES

CAREFUL tuning may result in hearing a new British station at Delhi, India, which broadcasts on 9.59 megacycles at 8:30 p. m.

A dispatch from Washington says that a patent covering a phonograph has been issued to Joseph Volk, a St. Louis radio engineer.

Excitement can be built up over the air by pyramiding different voice qualities. The "March of Time" developed this first. With three or four different actors stepping up to the microphone and snapping out single sentences in succession, they have often aroused their audiences to a high pitch.

When a more powerful short wave station is erected on Pitcairn Island, of "Mutiny On the Bounty" fame, the NBC will try to put an occasional broadcast from the Pacific island on the networks. An expedition which will erect the station has left New York. The new station, which will replace a spark code transmitter dating back to 1928, will be operated by storage batteries charged by a gasoline engine-driven motor generator and a wind charger. The Pitcairn Island radio operator is Andrew Young, one of the 200-odd descendants of the original band of mutineers. It is hoped to put the first broadcast from the island on the air in March.

The author of the Vic and Sade serial is 30-year-old Paul Rhymer, who picked up much of his knowledge of human nature as a newspaper man in Bloomington, Ill. . . . The new NBC studios on the Pacific Coast will be called Hollywood Radio City. . . . The most popular piece of music of all time is Beethoven's Minuet in G, according to Meredith Willson, musical director of KSD's Thursday night Good News of 1938. . . .

TRACKING DOWN the 'BRAINS of a $100,000,000 RACKET

Somebody Talked and 'Dixie' Davis, the University Graduate Who Succeeded 'Dutch' Schultz as Boss of the Numbers Game, Found Himself in Handcuffs.

J. Richard "Dixie" Davis (left) and the late "Dutch" Schultz.

By ROBERT SELL

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

AN UNDERWORLD informer weighed his chances of death against $5000—and talked. A few hours later two New York detectives rapped smartly on the door of a Philadelphia apartment, pushed their guns into the face of a sleepy man who opened the door and forced him into a bedroom. Out of bed they hauled a pudgy young man—and thus the six months search for J. Richard (Dixie) Davis came to its ignominious conclusion.

A drab end for so spectacular a flight and a humiliating capture—trouserless and trembling with cold—for a man rated by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey as the sinister figure who sat on the pinnacle of the richest single racket in the world—the $100,000,000 a year numbers lottery that feeds like a Gargantua gone berserk on the pennies, nickels and dimes of millions of victims.

If there was any satisfaction at all in his arrest Davis might have taken it from the fact he was held in record bail of $300,000 while Philadelphia and New York authorities moved to extradite him here. His threats of a fight to the finish against extradition collapsed and he was placed in manacles on a train that brought him to the city in which he will face trial within a month or two.

On the train with him was the sleepy man who opened the door of the apartment, George Weinberg, who with Davis is one of the last of the living members of the hierarchy of the complex organization built up by the late Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer. Weinberg's brother, Bo, also was a member, but he met some gangland enemies one night and fell under knife and pistol. Then his body was encased in cement and dumped into the East River where it still lies. They do things with finality in the numbers game.

But Davis and George Weinberg are safely behind bars in the chateau-like Tombs Prison and scores of material witnesses are under 24-hour a day guard at various points in the city to save them from the fate that Bo met. And when Dewey has fitted in the last piece of the jig saw, what is anticipated to be one of the most colorful criminal trials of the decade will open in General Sessions Court here.

The dramatis personae has been a long time casting, but Dewey is a meticulous stage director. His climax scene in the vice ring crusade sent Charles (Lucky) Luciano and a handful of his chief lieutenants to long terms in prison. So also did he stage-manage the finish of the restaurant racket. But Davis and his cohorts may well be his magnum opus and Dewey does not intend to spoil by so much as one false word the finale of a drama that started on a frigid winter night last year when dozens of police swept abruptly into the rookeries of the numbers game and took 70 prisoners.

Perhaps it is better to say one phase of the drama started a year ago last January. Actually the plot began forming back before the turn of the century when an enterprising Harlem resident revived a gamble ancient in the time of the dynastic Pharoahs and called it simply "numbers." He went quietly along rolling up a fortune from the Negroes and gradually began to widen operations until white folk were investing little coins. But, glutton-like, he aimed also for the pennies of school children and the law sent him to jail.

Two views of Davis.

Came prohibition with its abundant profits and most of the big shot gangsters moved into that field or into the just beginning industrial "protection" line. Few of them paid any attention to Harlem where a few astute Negroes were goggle-eyed in wonder as their collectors brought in fabulous sums each day. There was the picturesque Madame Stephanie St. Clair who called herself Madame Queen of Policy. There was Joseph (Big Joe) Ison and Alexander (El Cubano) Pompey. And Caspar Holstein and Henry Miro. Some of the bankers were white, but most were Negro or West Indian and their profits — well the Pompey-Ison group took in $15,000,000 one year.

For numbers to many in Harlem is almost a religion. Negroes buy dream books and voodoo powder in an effort to conjure up the combination that will return odds of 600 to one. They consult soothsayers and sacred objects such as the Wishing Tree, the bark of which has been rubbed smooth by the hundreds of thousands of times it has been touched for good luck.

AND the most powerful gang leaders completely overlooked this, the most fruitful source of revenue in the metropolis. But they were doing well in liquor and why plunge into a strange field? That's the way most of them looked at it and especially an undersized, heavy-set beer runner named Flegenheimer who was gaining a name as "The Dutchman" in the ranks of the bootlegging mobs. It seemed that every time a gangster was killed The Dutchman moved into his place. Soon the top figures in the racket were meeting sudden death, and The Dutchman was meeting equally sudden prominence and power.

He was a strange character, a devoted father, a ruthless enemy. He kept the most vicious killers in the land on his payroll—and gave them plenty of work. There were no tears when two torpedoes swaggered into a Newark tavern two years ago and gave him short shrift he had given many others in the years before.

The Dutchman was a genius at organization. He had the knack of getting the right man for the right job. He heard from his scouts of an aggressive lawyer only 28 years old called "The Kid Mouth Piece" who had moved into the magistrate's courts with the confidence of youth and had broken the ring monopolizing policy cases by charging $15 instead of $25 a case. It was not long before The Dutchman sent for Julius

A portrait of "Dutch" Schultz made shortly before his murder.

Richard Davis and appointed him his legal representative.

This was a perfect meeting of minds. Davis had the brains, even his enemies admitted that. The Dutchman had the organization. According to Dewey it was Davis who mapped out the plan through which The Dutchman got control of a $100,000,000 a year enterprise with no more trouble than the waving of a few guns and the utterance of a few choice threats. The policy bankers were men of peace not action. They knew when they were licked and they agreed to pay 50 per cent of the take to The Dutchman for "The Big Fix"—political grease and police protection.

The lottery game is one of the simplest of gambling devices. The players bet on a combination of any three numbers from 000 to 999. The odds against them are 1000 to one. If they win they receive 600 to one. In years gone by the bankers would base the pay-off on the last three digits of the United States daily Treasury balance. But this was not susceptible to "fixing."

Thus the pay off now usually is on three digits of the mutuel totals at a race track. Which three is determined by individual banks. Although the odds of 1000 to one are steep enough Dutch Schultz took no chances. Killed with him in Newark was Otto Berman whose job was to fix the race track figures so the lottery pay-off would be on the least played combination. As soon as all the slips were in, expert accountants determined the number on which the bank would lose least and Berman would see to it that it came up. The bank, it was estimated, could save as much as $300,000 some days by this device.

ASSOCIATION with dangerous men suited Davis. Short, dapper, with full pursed mouth, jet black hair slicked down, pale yellowish eyes and a flair for clothes of "Broadway cut" he was in his glory. No one could recognize in him the small town boy whose first ambition was to be a violinist. By coincidence Dewey also was a small town boy interested in music.

Davis always derided his small town origin, however, pointing out that he was born in New York City even if his father did move the family to the slumberous hamlet of Tannersville, New York, when he was a boy. In Tannersville his father ran a tailor shop and Julie—as he was called—studied the violin and played in a band with three other friends. In 1920—when Julie was 16—the family moved back to New York and the son was sent to high school. On his graduation he went to Syracuse University doing odd jobs to support himself and had the gratification of high marks. He got his law training at New York University where he developed a talent for florid debate and banging on tables.

Because of his high scholastic standing he was offered a clerkship in a conservative firm, but this had no appeal for him and in 1930 he branched out on his own. He took a small office near the Washington Heights Court which handles many of the thousands of policy cases that congest the courts each year, announced his $15 price and "really began to get some business"—as he once put it. His success with his first few cases led to his being retained by Ike Edelman, a bondsman, as his counsel to combat a forgery charge. Edelman's friendship brought him still more work.

Then came the affiliation with The Dutchman and Davis promptly abandoned the little Washington Heights office and opened an elaborate establishment on the thirty-ninth floor of a Broadway skyscraper, an impressive suite paneled in oak and carpeted in heavy pile. There was an incongruous note, however, the bluntly worded sign that dangled from the door of Davis' inner office—"Private. Keep Out."

According to testimony before the Appellate Division and the grand jury that indicted him this inner sanctum was the center of the Schultz illicit enterprises. It was here that the records were kept and payment of money supervised.

The swank offices were not the only outward indications of the affluence deriving from his new connection. Davis took to wearing $200 topcoats and suits costing $175. He engaged a suite in the swank Sherry-Netherland Hotel, a penthouse in a fashionable midtown district and two other apartments on Park and West End avenues. He frequented the night clubs where he was known as a big spender and a favorite with the chorus girls.

And withal, he remained a good criminal lawyer. Cocky, adroit, quick-witted he was as suave as the silk handkerchief that invariably flowed from a pocket of his nattily tailored suits. He was, in the opinion of detectives, a closer approach to reckless Arnold Rothstein than The Dutchman himself. On his feet in a courtroom, without recourse to law books, and on the spur of the moment he displayed a familiarity with the law that showed him a close student and in rapid fire barrage of points he more than once drove city, State and even Federal counsel into a corner.

THE impression gained from the facts thus far gleaned from Dewey is that Davis, as the intellectual master of The Dutchman and his trusted lawyer, gradually assumed a more important position in the racket set-up than even Schultz realized. Thus he stepped to the throne when the gunmen canceled Schultz in Newark.

The same ostentation that led Davis to put up a glittering front led to his downfall. During a cursory investigation by the city of policy gambling in 1935 Davis was called as a witness because he had handled so many policy cases. His questioner was Irving Ben Cooper, a shrewd investigator, now on the bench. Savoring the words as though he was enjoying the sensation Davis told the hearing that the policy "take" was over $100,000,000 a year and otherwise displayed such familiarity with its workings that he came under suspicion.

That year the question of disbarment was first raised by the Bar Association. A committee finally denied the disbarment recommendation. And it was not until Davis was indicted last July on charges of conspiracy to conduct a lottery that the Appellate Division acted. It reversed the decision of a referee and ordered him disbarred on the ground he had become "in effect, a member of a criminal organization."

Several times police have had tips that Davis was marked for death. One of them came in March, 1935, when he bought train tickets to Albany for himself and for Jules Martin, a Schultz henchman suspected by The Dutchman of holding out $31,000 of the restaurant racket take. Martin's body was found in a snowy ditch outside of Troy, New York. A few days later police took Davis off a train on information he was to suffer a like fate. He laughed at them.

After Schultz was done in (and Madame Queen sent him a death bed telegram reading: "As ye sow so shall ye reap") Davis went into hiding for a few days lest he suffer a similar liquidation. When he came back, Mrs. Schultz charges, he combined with several associates to try to deprive her of a prosperous Yonkers brewery that Schultz left her. She is suing to regain control. But there was a new order in the city; acceding to the demands of civic groups the Governor appointed former Chief Assistant United States Attorney Thomas E. Dewey as special prosecutor for rackets.

Davis was harried and watched. His wires were tapped. In July the grand jury indicted him; he kissed his wife good-by and was not seen again by authorities until his arrest. He was true to character in at least one detail of his capture—in his apartment was a red headed show girl.

The 'Institute for International Ill Will,' Growing Student Organization Which Started at Emory University, Protests by Ridicule Against Dictatorship and War.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

ATLANTA, Georgia.

A BUNCH of the boys—well, three, to be exact—were whooping it up conversationally in the Chi Phi Fraternity house of Emory University here that night. They had dealt pretty profoundly with the state of the nation, the low estate of finances, organized athletics, education and co-education, the fine arts, applied science, emotional case histories, foreign dictators and the like, and were about to return to the subject of girls and their unaccountable ways when suddenly and strange to say an idea appeared.

Butler Atkinson, who had taken no part in the conversation for a full minute, emerged from self-communion with a gleam in his eyes. "Look," he said, "here's something. About war, now. You know, everybody in this country seems to want peace. But who's doing anything about it—anything that really matters, I mean?"

Grady Clay Jr. came to grips with the question, wrestled it briefly and came out of the bout with another. "But what can be done?" he inquired. "I mean, what can anyone do?"

Butler Atkinson stood up. He hung his thumbs in the arm holes of his vest. He was as calm as anybody could be expected to be who had just become the father of an idea.

"I'll tell you what can be done," he announced slowly. "Just this: Make war ridiculous."

He began to pace up and down the room. After all, this was something too big for calmness. "Yes, sir; make war the silliest thing in the world."

Jack Tolbert jumped up and began to stride along beside him. "My friend," he said, "you've got an idea there. I mean, you've got hold of something. But how can you put it over?"

Atkinson was ready with an answer to that, too. The old noodle was on its toes tonight, all right. "Here's how," said Atkinson. "Start with the colleges. Start students all over the world laughing at war. Other people will join in. When you get enough people laughing at it, war will be done with."

The three Chi Phis began talking then of ways and means. And so was born, one night last January, a movement which has quickly achieved world-wide notice. It has become an organization bearing the formal title of the Institute for International Ill Will, and already it has indicated its aggressive spirit by sending a cablegram—collect—to Adolf Hitler. In the last month, applications for membership have been coming in from all sorts of people, including college students, professors, business men and debutantes. It may be that a prankish notion which had its origin in an aimless collegiate gab session will prove to be a valuable contribution to the cause of peace.

It was a month after the historic conversation in the fraternity house before the campaign to ridicule war came out into the open. During that period the organizers did a lot of planning and contriving.

ONE of their first moves was to enlist a fourth student in the enterprise—Robert Knox, a junior at Emory and a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity. Then they gave themselves titles, rank being decided by flipping a coin. Butler Atkinson became commander-in-chief; Grady Clay Jr., brigadier-general; Jack Tolbert, quartermaster-general, and Recruit Knox, field marshal.

A few days later the leaders in the new anti-war movement held an all-night conference and adopted a constitution for the Institute of International Ill Will. The constitution reads as follows:

"WHEREAS in the coarseness of inhuman events it has come to a pretty pass when only one-fourth of the people of the world are engaged in war, and those nations that won't fight, just won't fight, and

"WHEREAS it is not the sporting thing to deny to three-fourths of the people of the world an opportunity to make the supreme sacrifice, and

"WHEREAS the diplomats and demagogues are having to carry alone the burden of encouraging war, and they insist on swapping notes instead of bullets, and

"WHEREAS non-belligerents won't fire when they see the white of the enemy's lies,

"We hereby form the Institute for International Ill Will.

"WE WANT WAR!

"Join now! You won't live to regret it!"

All this was done secretly. The organizers of the institute noted that dictators and other modern politicians get their effects by surprise—sudden, unexpected coups—and thought a peace movement might well play the same game. So their meetings were secret, and they told no one of their plans.

When plans were complete, they decided to announce the institute to the world with a big "putsch" on February 16, a gesture suggesting the spectacular dramatics of dictators.

They mimeographed pamphlets, made a round of the pawn shops and army stores, collecting uniforms and other military equipment, and late on the night of February 15 roused a Negro farmer from his bed, and bargained with him for the use of his mule. They needed the mule to lead the charge next day—the charge aimed against the ramparts of war.

Signs had been printed, and at dawn on the morning of the sixteenth, these were tacked on trees and the sides of buildings, here and there on the campus. Some of the signs read:

"SPLEENS VENTED; WARS EQUIPPED."

"A BATTLESHIP FOR EVERY LILY POOL."

"A WAR WIDOW IN EVERY HOME."

"WE WANT WAR; DOWN WITH PEACE."

"WAR WRANGLE; QUADRANGLE AT TEN."

Larger signs merely stated:

"WAR TODAY."

All was ready, and then came the first casualty. As the "putsch" was about to start, Field Marshal Knox doubled up with pain and was carted off to the infirmary where doctors decided he had acute appendicitis. They were removing the appendix when his three comrades were opening their war on war.

Undaunted by this misfortune, Clay, Tolbert and Atkinson closed the gap in their ranks by enlisting Ralph Dasher, a musically inclined student. At least, he could blow a bugle, and he was assigned to the task of furnishing an accompaniment as the campus march began.

Generals Clay, Tolbert and Atkinson had donned their steel helmets and Bugler Dasher was trying out a few experimental notes when a worried Negro boy arrived with news that seemed at first a death blow to the cause. The mule which had been hired the night before to play the leading part in the parade had balked half a mile from the campus and nothing could budge him.

With things at this crisis the three generals and the bugler were about to call a council of war when a great clattering was heard outside, and up trotted the mule hitched to a wagon. On the wagon seat bounced an indignant-looking Negro farmer. He explained that the mule had finally had a change of heart, so much so, in fact that the animal had practically been running away for the last quarter of a mile.

A huge banner was brought forth with the words "WE WANT WAR" painted upon it in foot-high letters, and was strung from one end to the other of the mule, making the parade's motive power also a moving signboard.

THEN the three generals and the bugler, assisted by a dormitory janitor, gave a final few minutes to a careful inspection of their costumes. All wore khaki coats and cardboard military decorations, red steel helmets with bull's eyes painted on top to assist bullets in finding the mark, and white shoes. Each carried an assortment of guns of various historical periods, and Clay added to his equipment a powder horn which had been the property of his great-grandfather.

Class bells rang on the campus at 9:50. At the same moment Bugler Dasher sounded a clarion note, and the parade of the Institute of International Ill Will began. The mule, using a corn row step instead of a goose step, led the way with two of the generals on his back, and the third ranking officer and the bugler bringing up the rear.

Students gathered from all sides. Professors, realizing that lectures just then would find few listeners, placed themselves on the sidelines.

The mule reached the center of the quadrangle, and Brigadier-General Clay tied him to a lamppost. But the spectators wanted more of the parade, so the mule was unhitched, and the embattled International Ill Willers proceeded to the steps of the library.

There they read their constitution and also a manifesto. This latter document proposed, among other things, that certain New Deal agencies past and present be changed into newer and more original organizations, and their initials interpreted as follows:

N R A—"No Regard for Anybody."

A A A—"Absolute Abhorrence of Arbitration."

P W A—"Promoters of World Armaments."

The manifesto also contained a petition to President Roosevelt that he appoint the following Ambassadors to the countries indicated:

Germany: Rabbi Ben Ezra; Spain: Bonke Carter (to the front); Italy: Margaret Sanger; Russia: Father Coughlin; Ethiopia: Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith.

The manifesto set forth that the patron saint of the International Institute is Cain, "who killed his brother Abel. War and charity begin at home."

As the No. 1 traitor to the cause of World War, the manifesto named Secretary of State Cordell Hull, "who is on the verge of plunging the United States into peace." It also listed as "traitors" Dale Carnegie, Alfred Nobel and Dick Powell wearing a navy uniform.

The manifesto concluded with the following "Unsolicited and unverified testimonials" from a number of history's most prominent characters:

Venus de Milo: "I'm all broken up about the present situation."

William Tecumseh Sherman: "War is hell when it elects only one President."

Alexander the Great: "What Institute? I never heard of it."

Napoleon: "An army travels on its stomach. Slow, but sure."

Following the reading of this historic document, application blanks were passed out through the audience, and the work of enlisting members quickly proceeded.

At 10:10 President Harvey W. Cox of Emory University stepped to the center of the crowd and asked the leaders to send the students back to class. The mule was led away, the crowd broke up, and the first engagement of the I. I. I. W. was over.

Next morning, Field Marshal Knox issued a bedside bulletin to new recruits:

"I AM sorry I have only one appendix to give to my country," he stated. "I am deeply cut up about the whole matter."

A few days later the Institute telegraphed President Roosevelt: "Why waste money on good will trips to South America. Save it for bullets."

Then came the effort to establish direct communication with Hitler. Two telegraph companies refused a message reading, "Quit stalling and fight Austria." International complications seemingly were feared. But a second cablegram sent collect to Der Fuehrer apparently was transmitted and accepted. It read: "We are all behind you and the eight ball. We recommend Austria for your growing pains."

The Institute hasn't decided on its next step. It is too busy enrolling new members in its war on war.

William Powell: "A movie actor's capital—his face and popularity—depreciates ten per cent a year."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

HOLLYWOOD, California.

HOLLYWOOD'S headache is over. Actors have been wavering to drug stores for aspirin and a dozen erasers and fighting their way blindly through snow flurries of shredded income tax blanks. Producers who struggled with fifth grade arithmetic were wrestling with surtaxes, while stars who used to alibi the landlady for last week's rent have quit nibbling pencils and computing the cost of fan mail.

There was hair tearing all over the country, but it was hair splitting here, because Movietown's allowable deductions have no parallel.

Sometimes a tweed business suit is a costume, sometimes not. The cost of turning a brunet into a blond may be allowed, but remodeling her nose is a personal expenditure. Legal fees for a suit to break a studio contract are okay, but to break a marriage contract—no.

While the ordinary taxpayer may envy movie salaries, he pays no agent's 10 per cent, buys no makeup and gives no publicity parties; consequently, he often can fill out his income tax blank with no more assistance than black coffee. But the citizens of Hollywood find it smarter, and necessary, to hire business administrators who not only keep them out of trouble with accurate, honest returns, but who know all the special exceptions to which movie people alone are entitled. Hiring one of these b. a.'s is another paradox, because his fees for ferreting out deductions are also deductible.

"Every case is different," said one of Hollywood's busiest business administrators, whose client list includes actors, directors and writers.

"Take the matter of clothes. One of my clients plays nothing except business man parts and the clothes he wears in pictures are the same he wears in private life. These are not deductible from his income tax returns.

"Yet it doesn't matter if a horse opera star wears out his white felt sombrero and buckskin pants on a ranch after a picture. Cowboy outfits are special clothes and they include spurs, pistols, lariats and other expensive trappings."

Most costumes are supplied by the studios, of course, but when an actress poses in her own wardrobe for fashion photos or wears her own mink coat in a picture, she is allowed a deduction. When she gets a grass stain on her overalls while posing prettily in the middle of her petunia patch, the cleaner's bill for removing the stain is also legally cut from her income.

When Jackie Cooper was recently blondined no kick was made about that, but there was some argument over the salary of his grandmother when she acted as companion on a personal appearance tour. "The Government refused to let us deduct her salary," the business administrator said, "their contention being that it was gratuity to a relative. We agreed that the salary was exorbitant according to ordinary standards, but as minors must be accompanied by a parent or guardian an adjustment was made and a reasonable salary was allowed."

NOT okayed was the return of an executive who listed $11,600 for dependents on the claim that he was the sole support of 29 relatives. The next year he tried again, listing them under organized charity, with the explanation that the relatives were organized even if he wasn't.

Writers get special dispensation sometimes under the item "story preparation," the expert said, citing one case of a client's deducting the cost of a trip to Honolulu. When it was challenged, the writer and his adviser maintained the trip was necessary for local color and authenticity. Scenario writing comes under the same claim, and directors as well as authors may legally take advantage of the "books and research material" item.

"Directors have an expense item which has no parallel so far as I know, for special service," the b. a. said. "If he is a top-notcher, he has a special crew which has worked with him for years and they're yanked from whatever they're doing if he needs them. At the end of a picture, he has received a lot of special service from the crew and he rewards them in money or gifts.

"The Government says the salary paid by the studio is sufficient compensation, but we have such a case up for appeal now. The technicality is that payments must be for 'reasonable and ordinary' expenditure. Well, it's an ordinary practice in Hollywood, and it's certainly reasonable because the director who doesn't reward a crew is called a heel and gets no more special service."

Another Hollywood deduction is for entertainment of the press, falling under "publicity and advertising," although movie people may far outnumber newspaper men; so is a party a director gives after a picture. If the party is for publicity, movie actors must be invited to make it interesting and news for the press.

Even the expense of attending a premiere is allowable, because the actors are on display as walking advertisements. Nowhere else in the world can a person deduct the cost of dates—but expenditures on publicity romances engineered by studios are deductible.

Uniquely Hollywoodian are fan mail deductions, for stamps, photos and the like. Studios will handle routine letters, but many actors prefer to give fans personal answers and it is sometimes an enormous expense.

One strange income tax report from a Hollywood star was that of Charlie McCarthy, Incorporated. Government accountants may well be puzzled at such items as: $48 wages to portrait painter for retouching Charlie McCarthy, and $300 labor on right arm for correcting mechanical defects. Paint for the retouching also was listed.

Edgar Bergen charges off $300 labor on Charlie McCarthy's right arm.

But William Powell contends that actors are discriminated against, not favored.

"Take a man who has a fortune of $10,000,000, which is invested in bonds and brings him $350,000 a year," he said. "That capital can remain unimpaired throughout his life.

"But consider an actor whose income is $350,000. His capital—which is his face and popularity—depreciates at least 10 per cent a year. And if you don't believe that, get a list and average up the screen lives of stars. But the actor, unlike other business men, isn't allowed to make deductions for depreciation on his capital."

SEASCAPES from TYPEWRITERS

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

TO PRACTICALLY everyone a typewriter is just a highly prosaic instrument for the execution of invoices, bills and print copy. But under the deft hands of Lemuel Stewart, a little ordinary portable becomes the means to "paint." Pictures of tugboats, trim sailships and ocean liners rise from his keyboard. And so realistic are the Stewart seascapes that from a bit of a distance one easily mistakes them for etchings and woodcuts.

There is not much mystery about the application of a typewriter to the production of creative arts; anybody, according to Stewart, might master the trick—though it will take the novice considerable time and perseverance.

But when sketching ships on your typewriter, don't mind your P's and Q's. It is the seldom used symbols, like &, $, ' and such that rise from obscurity and turn into stylish waves, clouds, wings of sea gulls.

Nowadays, it takes Stewart just a bit over eight hours to complete a ship. In the beginning he worked considerably longer.

Freudians will, of course, insist upon probing the master's subconscience for that basic complex which first caused him to seek escape in these seascapes. Stewart is ready to admit that as a boy he wanted to be a sailor, but his father refused and he became an advertising man. And so, as compensation for that frustrated ambition to navigate, he revels in all things maritime—including his typed ships.

Some five or six years ago, Lem Stewart would go down to the Battery and sketch ships that rode at anchor there. But passersby and idlers would gasp at his pictures, venture lots of uninvited comment and criticism. And the work would suffer.

So Stewart retired to a crow's nest of his own—a room on the thirty-first floor of the Hotel Shelton from where he has a fine view of the East River. On clear days, big ocean liners on the far side of Long Island are plainly visible.

From there, he "shoots" East River tugs and steamboats. Then again, by roving along New York's waterfronts, he finds three-masted schooners, Gloucester fishing boats, and other types of seacraft.

He has brought his art to astonishing perfection. What a maritime artist does with a pencil, he executes—and often better—with a typewriter. His clouds are whiffs hovering realistically over those boats. His waves lap and reflect the hulls of the steamers. The sails are properly shaded.

There are, of course, secrets to his technique, and Stewart will not reveal many of them beyond admitting that he does use the eraser now and then and that he twists the paper in his machine to get the proper swing into his curves. "Masts," he says, "I make out of underscores. I use number signs for the ratlines, T's and M's for handrails, exclamation marks for block and tackle, and oblique strokes, typed closely together, for shading of sails and clouds."

Love for the sea, he thinks, must be in his blood perhaps because his grandfather once was Master of the Port of Philadelphia.

Every fall he manages to take a cruise and on board sketches on his portable.

His voyages have never taken him further south than the Panama Canal, but he cherishes the ambition of some day rounding Cape Horn.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities (LADY IVY CHAMBERLAIN FRIEDL LANG)

BEHIND BRITAIN'S TALKS WITH ITALY

LONDON.

THE austere and flinty-eyed Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary from 1924 to 1929, was credited with being largely responsible for the rise of his former assistant, Anthony Eden, to the Foreign Secretaryship in 1935. His widow, Lady Ivy Muriel Chamberlain, now is—justly or unjustly—being credited with playing a major part in the dramatic resignation of Eden over the swing toward a rapprochement with Hitler and Mussolini. Not only in Hyde Park, the great outdoor forum where practically anyone with a message and a soap box can orate to his heart's content, but also in the newspapers, the cry has been raised. There are charges that she replaced the British Ambassador at Rome, used her influence on Mussolini, and fell victim to flattery. Critics of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, a half brother of Austen, have taken up the cry. Citing the fact that the dictator and Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister, have been her firm friends for years, they assert that she talked things over with them.

Lord Strabolgi, one of the Labor Party's foremost leaders, declared in a Hyde Park speech that Lady Chamberlain was a "society lady" trotting about Europe as a sort of self-appointed ambassador who was unable to resist flattery "in the presence of some of those great he-men, the dictators." Another Laborite M. P., Alfred Barnes, asserted that she "paved the way" for British-Italian talks.

Lady Chamberlain, who spends much time each year in Italy, answered from Rome: "I come to Italy every year and always see Il Duce, but there is nothing in that. . . . Of course everyone is interested in Anglo-Italian politics. Naturally we discussed the different sides of the question. It is quite untrue to say that I was responsible for the situation that precipitated the crisis." And when the London Daily Mirror continued its bold assertions, she answered the newspaper with a flat statement that she did not cause Eden's resignation.

And so it is that even his friends admit that there seems to be some cause for speculation. Ever since her late husband applied himself in 1925 to the remarkable diplomacy that produced the Locarno treaties, Mussolini had been acquainted with Lady Chamberlain. After her husband died in March of last year, Mussolini always made it a point to entertain Lady Chamberlain in state at the Palazzo Venezia and in private at his Villa Torlonia when she visited Italy. He is said to have remarked that he found her company very enjoyable since she had good breeding without snobbishness. As unofficial diplomacy has it, Mussolini expressed a gentle but rather sarcastic doubt when Lady Chamberlain remarked on her latest visit that "you know Mr. Eden is awfully anxious to get an understanding with Italy." And it wasn't so long after this, according to this same unofficial diplomacy, that Eden stepped out and Viscount Halifax stepped in.

Rumor also has it that Lady Chamberlain advised Mussolini to send a telegram to Count Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador to London, notifying him that Italy would accept the British plan for removing "volunteer troops" from Spain. This telegram, regardless of whether Lady Chamberlain inspired it or not, caused big head lines on February 22, two days after Eden resigned. Lloyd George arose in the House of Commons and charged that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain had withheld the telegram, which arrived a few hours before the resignation, from Eden. Furiously, Chamberlain denied that he had done "anything disgraceful." He asserted that Grandi had told him of the telegram's "favorable" contents Sunday, that he relayed the information to the Cabinet and that he did not receive the actual telegram until Monday after Eden had resigned. Eden then arose and stated that he had "received no official intimation whatever from the Italian Government in the sense of which the Prime Minister has just spoken." He added that it would have made no difference if he had.

And so, while the British lion apparently is giving ground to the European dictators, Lady Chamberlain is looming before the public as one of the members of the potent "Cliveden set" which is said to be the directing factor in the move for rapprochement with Italy and Germany. The "Cliveden set" gets its name from Cliveden, Viscount Astor's famous country estate at Taplow, Buckinghamshire, where meet the diplomatic forces—quite unofficially—who favor placating the authoritarian states. The late Will Rogers, when he visited at Cliveden in 1930 as Lady Astor's guest, remarked that it was "a modest bungalow of not more than 75 or 100 rooms," and that "Julius Caesar must have registered there."

This political set is said to be headed by Lady Astor's brother-in-law, Major John Jacob Astor, who owns the controlling interest in the conservative old London Times. The other members are commonly listed as Geoffrey Dawson, editor of the Times; Lady Astor's husband, Viscount Astor, member of the House of Lords and owner of the weekly London Observer; Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain; Lord Halifax, Lord Lothian, Lord Londonderry, chief of the Conservative Party organization; Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin; Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, and a number of satellites.

It is in this powerful set, sometimes referred to as the "second foreign office" or the "new No. 10 Downing street," that Lady Chamberlain is doing her part. Tall, fair, handsome and pleasant in manner, she is regarded as perhaps the most charming of the whole group.

She has come a long way since the turn of the century when she used to run a flower shop in London's West End. It was there, when he was just a young member of the Lower House, that Austen Chamberlain met her. He used to stop daily to buy an orchid for his button hole. Soon the daughter of the retired army colonel and the son of the British statesman found that they had a mutual interest in flowers and gardening. This interest took a romantic turn and they were married in 1906.

Adapting herself to her husband's political career, she became a charming hostess, but not one that might be labeled intellectual or ambitious. Society notices referred to her as "always in the picture with her surroundings which are invariably just right." She was mentioned as "believing in color . . . her flat, which is a spacious one, is always a bright spot in however dull weather. . . . In flowers and their graceful, pretty arrangement, she is an adept."

But when her husband became Foreign Secretary and plunged into the negotiations at Locarno that led to the treaties whereby peace was mutually guaranteed in Western Europe, Mrs. Chamberlain played a consistent part in promoting the atmosphere that made it possible to bring the diplomats together. Quiet little luncheons that she arranged played a bigger part than many of the more formal meetings. It was a steamboat trip on the lake, arranged by her, that carried the conference over one of the most critical moments of its discussion.

Mussolini greeting Lady Chamberlain in Rome recently.

THE final achievement made an impression on popular opinion in all the nations concerned because it marked a definite break from the war atmosphere. Austen Chamberlain won recognition for having supplied the main motive spirit.

A few months after the signing of the treaties, Chamberlain and his wife received royal recognition with the bestowal of knighthood on them in Buckingham Palace on December 1, 1925. Such double honor was without precedent. Never before had a husband and wife received knighthood simultaneously for co-partnership in service to the state and never before had knighthood been conferred on a woman for work in the diplomatic field. The Foreign Secretary knelt before King George and formally received the accolade of Knighthood of the Garter, entitling him henceforth to be known as Sir Austen Chamberlain. The King then handed the insignia of the Grand Cross of the British Empire to Mrs. Chamberlain. Her own honor gave her the title of Dame, like the wife of David Lloyd George, but she also became Lady Chamberlain by virtue of her husband's new rank.

Son of the Passion Play's 'Christus' Comes Here to Fly

FRIEDL LANG, quiet, blue-eyed youngest son of Anton Lang, the "Christus" of three Passion Plays, would be wearing the short lederhose and feathered green hat of the Bavarian villages, a prosaic career at a potter's wheel in prospect, were it not for the Reverend Paul Schulte's aid toward a more adventurous future as a flyer.

Dressed in conventional long corduroy trousers and leather jacket, Friedl prefers no hat at all, unless it be a flying helmet, and he may be distinguished from the scores of American boys at Parks Air College only by his accent when he speaks and his careful selection of the correct English word. But his fellow students like to point him out as the youngest flyer to gain a German transport license.

Friedl received his transport license last October and by March 24, his nineteenth birthday, he will be ready for his final examinations in radio navigation and instrument flying, courses he was unable to obtain in Germany.

Then he will join the "Squadron of the Flying Priest" as pilot of one of the three airplanes operated by Father Schulte, founder of the Missionary Vehicular Association, who recently told in a lecture here of "motorizing" mission services in the Arctic.

It was stories of Father Schulte's winged errands of mercy in the frozen Canadian wastes that provided inspiration for the dark-haired but fair-skinned youth and upset Lang's plans for his family in Oberammergau.

Mild-mannered Anton Lang, who strove to mold his own life after that of Him he has represented in the traditional miracle play for which the village of 1800 population has been known for three centuries, intended that Friedl take over the supervision of his small pottery. Thus, an older son, Karl, distinguished as a creator of artistic Madonnas in Bavarian native dress and handsome vases bearing Alpine flower designs, might be relieved of routine tasks he had assumed with his father's retirement.

Friedl Lang.

Anton Lang took great pride in Karl's superior ability at a craft in which he, himself, had won distinction. As a member of a group of 30 Oberammergau citizens which toured the United States with an exhibition of their wood carving, sculpture and pottery in 1924, to raise funds for their schools after Germany's financial collapse, Anton Lang demonstrated his skill as a potter in St. Louis. Friedl remembers his father's accounts of his visit here, including high mass at the St. Louis Cathedral, a specially conducted tour that the visitors might inspect the interior decorations, and dinner as the guests of Mayor Kiel.

But Friedl did not welcome the opportunity his father wished to provide. With his older brother, Anton Lang Jr., now a teacher of modern languages and literature at Georgetown University, he shared a desire to become a flyer. Brother Anton read him stories of flying adventures before he, himself, was able to read and once they had a trip in an airplane at Munich with a visiting American friend of the family.

By the time he was 10 years old, Friedl was using his pocket knife, not for wood carving, but to make model airplanes, one of which, he said, remained aloft for a half hour.

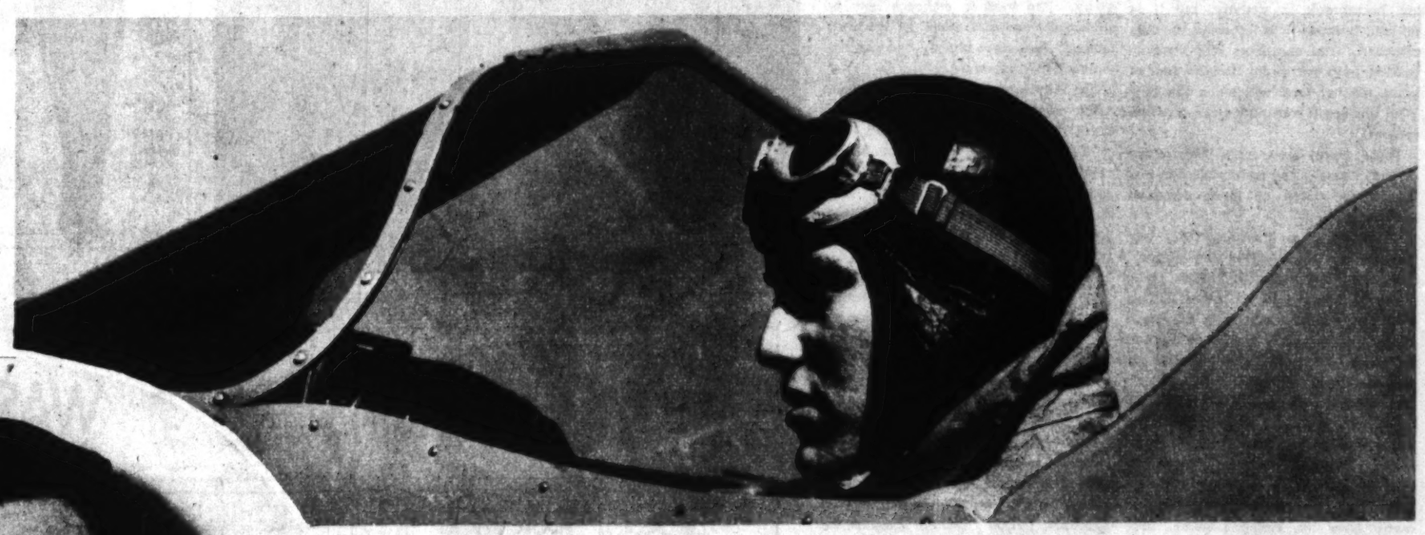
Parental objection to flying left Anton Jr. the choice of becoming a teacher, but Friedl never could forget the stories his older brother had read him nor their flight at Munich. In secondary school at Ettal, he continued to read of flying and flyers. Standing out among his heroes was Father Schulte, once a pilot in the German Imperial Air Corps. The tales of his missionary work in Africa and later in Canada fascinated the student. He read of the priest's plans for extending his activity and in the autumn of 1934 he wrote to him.

"I told him," Friedl said, "that I wanted to be the pilot of one of his planes. I said I wished this more than anything in the world.

"I could scarcely wait to open the letter he wrote me, but he only told me I should try to get older first. He said I could not be a pilot until I was 18 at least."

It was the following summer that Father Schulte, on a trip through Southern Germany, found himself in Oberammergau. He thought of the young applicant and his letter and called at his home to pay his respects to Anton Lang and meet the lad whom he never had seen.

The youth made the most of the opportunity to overcome his parents' objection to flying as dangerous. Father Schulte readily supported him in the respectful debate as talk turned to directional radio beams and the latest improvements in aircraft.



Friedl Lang about to take off.

Never before had Friedl been able to present fully at one time all his arguments against their fears and never before had he had the support of so able a champion.

At length, the parents conceded the negative team had the better of the argument. Father Schulte then revealed the letter he had received from Ettal and began a detailed questioning of the boy. Besides his physique, earnestness and enthusiasm, his qualifications included a good education and knowledge of English gained both at school and at home from his mother, who once lived in England.

FRIEDL answered the questions eagerly in the hope that he might be accepted when he was older. His heart sank as he saw Father Schulte rise abruptly as if to leave, but give a questioning nod to his father. When an affirmative nod was returned, Father Schulte stepped to the telephone.

Calling a large airplane factory at Dusseldorf, Father Schulte briefly left word that he was sending a young protege for instruction. Friedl knew he was safe from the potter's wheel.

During a year at Dusseldorf he learned construction and design and then left for six months at an airplane engine factory in Munich. Then he was sent to the Reichsportfliegerschule at Berlin for his training as a pilot.

Making use of a two-week holiday during more than a year at the flying school, he went to the Darmstadt glider school, hopeful of winning in that brief period the coveted "Silver C," three-winged emblem with a silver garland awarded to those pilots who pass the most rigid tests.

The aspirant must remain aloft in his motorless craft five hours, must rise 3000 feet above the altitude at which he is cut loose from a motored plane and must fly 50 kilometers cross country.

Friedl soared to 6600 feet over the Rhine after the towing airplane unhooked his glider at 1500 feet. He remained aloft five hours and 55 minutes. But inclement weather during the two remaining days of his allotted time there prevented him from attempting the cross country distance requirement. He does not wear the "Silver C."

Meeting Father Schulte in New York last December, he found another surprise in store for him. Radio Station MIVA, the letters representing the priest's Missionary Vehicular Association, had been established on a Far North island to guide his planes. The young pilot was to attend Parks Air College for three months to learn instrument flying. A brief visit with his brother Anton in Washington and he was on the last leg of a long flight to membership in the "Squadron of the Flying Priest."

Next month Father Schulte will have another pilot to aid him in carrying spiritual and medical assistance to remote communities of the Far North. Friedl no longer will need to look for adventure in books.

Some day, when Friedl Lang goes back to Germany—"It would be nice to fly"—he would like to win that "Silver C" as a glider pilot and to take Anton Lang for a look at Oberammergau from the air.

Ran Away From His Mother Four Times in 14 Days

Howard Frankel, Son of Divorced Parents, Defied the Court and Was Allowed Finally to Return to His Father.

Howard Frankel.

Howard with his father, Julius Frankel.

Mrs. Rose Frankel.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

TWELVE - YEAR - OLD Howard Frankel is happy now—he is with the father he loves and far away from his mother. This has come about after a custody battle that raged in two states. A court order stipulates that he must spend one day a week, one week-end a month and a full week in the summer with his mother.

For the heartbreak of the mother who loves him too well, who fought for his custody before six Judges although she is a sick woman, he has scarcely a thought. In an off-hand way he says that he will try to be nice to her when he sees her, but it is clear his world is encompassed by his boy scout troop, his schoolmates, his stepmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Frankel and the father he idolizes, Julius Frankel.

In Sheepshead Bay miles from the home of Julius Frankel in Linden, New Jersey, the desolate mother tries to bury her heartbreak in activity, but it is difficult because of a lingering nervous affliction. The neighbors who tried so hard to help her make Howard feel at home tell her time will teach the boy. With this small consolation she must be content.

There have been more sensational custody cases in the metropolis, but few that have stirred as much comment and feeling.

"This cry of a distressed little boy has moved the heart of the nation," said Justice Herbert O'Brien, who awarded Howard to his father. "This case has wound itself about the heart strings of the courts of two states and all interests have been subjected to the welfare of the child."

Howard, in the minds of many, became the symbol of all children who suffer through the divorce of their parents. His mother's frantic efforts to win his love, his adoration for his father and his pathetic attempts to run away from his mother's home were subjects of many newspaper articles and editorial as well as civic comment.

Howard was born in 1926, a year after Julius Frankel, a salesman, married Rose Simon. Mrs. Frankel said discord entered the household when her husband met Elisabeth Schwartz, a school teacher. But Frankel said it all started when his wife was stricken with sleeping sickness and was unable to take care of the four months old baby. Until he was 7 years old Howard was raised in various boarding schools.

In 1932 Mrs. Frankel went into court and won a separation and $12 weekly alimony, but Howard was given to the father because she was not well. Hard hit by the depression Frankel decided to try his luck in California. He took his son from a boarding school and set out for the West. On the train Howard became so ill hospitalization was necessary and they got off at the next station. That it happened to be Reno, Nevada, was pure chance, the father said, but while there he figured he might as well get a divorce.

He established residence in 1933 and wrote Miss Schwartz asking her to be his wife. They were married soon after his decree was granted.

All this time the first Mrs. Frankel had no inkling of what was going on for she was receiving polite little notes from Howard postmarked California. She charged later that her husband had mailed the letters from Reno to California for remailing there. When she learned of what was brewing she went into court in Brooklyn, proved her health had been restored sufficiently to permit her to care for her child and regained custody.

The Frankels returned to New York from Reno and the first wife had her ex-husband placed in alimony jail for a night until he could raise some of the $300 back alimony. Then came the incident that touched off the whole difficulty. On the hazy assumption, it is said, that he could retain custody if he could induce his former wife to refuse the child, Frankel offered to give her the boy if she would accept a reduction in alimony to $5 a week.

Mrs. Frankel couldn't make the deal, she knew she couldn't support two people on so little money. The father triumphantly felt that he had won, but Mrs. Frankel went into Chancery Court in Elizabeth, New Jersey, and sued to force adherence to the Brooklyn order awarding her custody. That was just a year ago.

It was not until August, however, that the case was called before Advisory Master Dougall Herr, who has a child about Howard's age. Mrs. Frankel came into court and went to her son's side. She stretched out a trembling hand to touch him—and he drew away. She tried to embrace him, he squirmed free and went to his stepmother. She wept bitterly and the boy watched her unmoved.

The Advisory Master listened to testimony about the remailed letters and the $5 a week offer and stormed:

"These people have so poisoned the child's mind against his mother that he regards her as some sort of ogre. He's a heartless father who would deliberately have sold his son for a mess of pottage."

HE ARRANGED for Mrs. Frankel to meet her child and attempt to win back his love. Eight times the two met—the mother and the son—eight strained unhappy occasions for both. Sometimes the boy was almost rude.

The Advisory Master took even stronger measures. He gave Mrs. Frankel complete custody and ordered Frankel not to go near the child for an indefinite period. During this time he hoped normal love would be kindled. Howard would not go with his mother until his father told him to. And all the long way to Sheepshead Bay he said not a word.

That was on January 23. Four days later a policeman found Howard wandering about Times Square in the chill of a winter morning.

"Oh, please don't send me back to my mother," the boy wept. "Send me to my father. I was trying to get to him."

Three days later he disappeared again. He was found riding on an elevated train. Twice more he ran away—four times within the space of 14 days—and he was arraigned in Children's Court as incorrigible. He was ordered into the custody of his great-uncle while the courts wrestled with the case.

Children's Court took jurisdiction in the matter and awarded the child to Frankel after the boy had threatened to kill himself if he were sent back to his mother.

"It's more than I expected," the father said. "Thank God for the New York courts. If it had not been for them I don't know what would have happened to me. I will teach Howard to respect his mother, but it is up to her to earn his love."

Mrs. Frankel was hysterical.

"It hurts," she said, "I did my best. I tried to please him. What's the use of fighting any further. The boy is not happy with me."

And Howard:

"Gee, I feel good now. I guess I'll be nice to her."

A SPRING PICTURE for a GIRL'S ROOM

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Tomorrow will be the first day of Spring. Follow the directions carefully—paste up neatly and you will create an attractive Spring picture.

DIRECTIONS ● Mount the largest piece upon thin cardboard and cut out. Fold upon the dotted lines to bring into position to paste (stars indicate where to put paste). Mount the remaining pieces upon heavy manila paper and cut out carefully on outside of heavy line. In cutting, these pieces will curl slightly—do not flatten them out. Next paste them to the proper starred areas in the order numbered. The large cloud to "1," the small cloud to "2" and so on. Paste each piece only to the area enclosed by the thin line. When all are pasted nothing remains to do but to attach a piece of string to the back to hang it with.

When the mighty Presto summoned Charley Chips to his mansion, he did it because he wanted Charley to remake Captain Crunch. Captain Crunch, you see, was a snowman who broke to pieces when he tumbled down from the ceiling of Presto's magic mansion. Now Charley was very angry when he found out that Presto wanted him to make a snowman, but he calmed down and became inspired when he learned that the mighty magician intended to bring his snowman to life. So inspired was he that he disregarded the fact that his snow statue should be that of a man. He made a beautiful woman instead—Charley's idea of a perfect woman. And he called her Sonia. We see him kneeling before her, praising her beauty, as

THE PLAY BEGINS

CHARLEY CHIPS—Oh, Sonia, how grand you are. How nicely you smile upon me. Soon the magician will make you live. And you will live for me. (Breaking into rhyme.) How happy we will be.

THE MIGHTY PRESTO—(To Bill Bunny.) What do you want me to do? Shall I bring her to life?

BILL BUNNY—No. Because the snow that that statue is made of is still Captain Crunch. You see, many years ago a man was turned into a snowman by an old witch who hated him. He would melt in the spring and turn into water, and in the winter he would change back into snowflakes again. This winter, as he lay on the ground, I came along and, quite by accident, made him once more into a snowman. He seemed to be a jolly old fellow and I liked him very much, so I called him Captain Crunch. Then I wished he was alive, and he came to life because I can have any wish I want when I am wearing these magic mittens.

THE GREAT PRESTO—Then the witch is the only one who really knows who Captain Crunch was or what he looked like. Um-m-m. I wish she were here.

BILL BUNNY—I wish she were, too. (And instantly a surprised old witch started sailing through the air toward Presto's mansion, and a moment later she crashes into Charley Chips, who falls into Sonia and breaks her all to pieces. Bill Bunny got his wish again.)

SENTENCED to BE FLOGGED

Four Youths of London's Smart Mayfair, Trying to Enact a Perfect Crime, Beat and Robbed a Jeweler—and Were Caught.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON.

SUBDUED murmurs of mingled surprise and approval arose in the courtroom as Lord Chief Justice Hewart announced that he was going to impose unusually severe sentences on the "four young men about Mayfair." There was, he said, no excuse for men with their background and breeding to resort to such a crime as robbery with violence. Cynics who offered odds that the defendants in the $85,000 jewelry holdup would get off easily because they "wore school colors" and came from influential families, began to figure their losses.

The four youthful defendants heard their fate. Robert Paul Harley, 26-year-old son of a distinguished army officer, was sentenced to seven years imprisonment, two of them at hard labor, and to 20 lashes on the bare back. David Wilmer, 24, a graduate of Rundle School and a son of a retired brigadier-general, drew five years, with two at hard labor, and 15 lashes. Peter Martin Jenkins, 22, son of a well known wool broker, now deceased, and also a graduate of Harrow, received three years, with two at hard labor. J. C. M. Lonsdale, 24, son of a good family and also a graduate of Oxford, got 18 months at hard labor. Harley's offense was regarded as the worst since he had been found guilty of committing robbery with violence and also being the custodian of the loot. Wilmer was convicted of participation in the robbery and of planning it with the other three at his flat. Jenkins was found guilty of taking part in the robbery and the conspiracy. Lonsdale merely took part in the conspiracy.

The floggings were what Justice Hewart had in mind particularly when he said that his sentences would be severe. Use of the cat-o'-nine-tails, is restricted to cases of robbery in which there is marked brutality.

On the afternoon of last December 20, Cartier, Limited, famous jewelry firm on Bond street, received a telephone call from fashionable Hyde Park Hotel, on Knightsbridge, S. W. The caller identified himself as "Captain Hambro" and asked the firm to send over a salesman with some "better diamond rings," as he was contemplating a purchase.

"Captain Hambro" was told that Mr. Etienne Bellenger, manager, would consider it his extreme pleasure to call on the Captain around 3 o'clock that afternoon.

Well acquainted with the clientele of his firm, Mr. Bellenger believed that "Captain Hambro" must be a relative of Eric Hambro, a former director of Cartier's and member of a millionaire banking family. He recalled that Sir Eric had once told him about a relative who was a captain in His Majesty's army. Bellenger was strengthened in his theory by the fact that over the phone, "Captain Hambro" had given his home as Wimborne, in Dorset, the country seat of the Hambro family.

Thus, without suspicion, Bellenger packed a tray of nine diamond rings, worth a total of $63,000. Then he took a cab to the Hyde Park Hotel, arriving at 3:15. There he was directed to suite 305-309.

He found the sitting room occupied by two young men. One of them, a handsome youth, introduced himself as "Captain Hambro." The second young man, introduced by the Captain as his secretary, appeared slightly older.

Captain Hambro showed much interest in two rings and, remarking that he wanted to see them closer in the artificial light of the chandelier in the center of the ceiling, he maneuvered Bellenger to a position with his back to the door of the adjoining bedroom.

Suddenly the jeweler thought he saw the Captain's secretary making a sign toward the bedroom door. He started to look around but at the same moment Bellenger felt a severe blow on the back of his head.

Swinging around, he saw himself face to face with a man a bit over average height who had stepped out of the bedroom. This assailant had his face concealed with tinted glasses and a handkerchief. In his hand he wielded a short heavy club.

Bellenger grappled with his assailant who continued to strike him until he fell to the floor. As he was about to lose consciousness, he saw his assailant's weapon again descending on his skull.

He thought, Bellenger later said, that "he was done for" and ceased to struggle. When he came to, he was unable to move. After 15 minutes or so, he heard steps outside. He cried out. A waiter and a maid heard him and called the hotel manager. By 4 o'clock the police, under the direction of Chief Inspector Leonard Burt of Scotland Yard, had arrived.

In the bathroom they found a pair of tinted glasses and the handkerchief that had been used as a mask by Bellenger's assailant. They found only one of the diamonds in the case.

The hotel manager told the police that at 1:20 p. m. that afternoon, two young men had come to the hotel, one of them, representing himself as "Hambro," taking the suite in question and signing the register as "E. L. Hambro—Wimborne Court, Wimborne, Dorset." He told the manager that his luggage would arrive about 4 o'clock. With that, he went upstairs with his friend and a few minutes later ordered a bottle of whisky, four glasses and a syphon. They were sent up.

AROUND 2:30 o'clock, a call from outside was received at the hotel, inquiring if Captain Hambro had arrived yet. Fifteen minutes later, a young, well-dressed and handsome man came to the hotel, stayed with Captain Hambro for about 10 minutes and departed. Then another man arrived at the hotel shortly after 3 p. m. and went to suite No. 305-309. He stayed there until about 3:45 when he left with Hambro and the young man who had come with the Captain originally. This was 15 minutes before Bellenger was found by the waiter and the maid.

Around 9 o'clock the following morning, Cyril Smith, night porter at the Clarendon Hotel in Oxford, was on his way home. Glancing at his morning paper, he was attracted by the screaming headlines on the jewel robbery. He began to read the story and made a very interesting discovery.

That same morning, at 6 a. m., two young men had taken a room at the Clarendon Hotel. One of them had given his address as "Wimborne, Dorset." The young men looked rather agitated then, Smith recalled. There was the coincidence also that the address of the wanted Captain Hambro tallied with that of the two young men at the Clarendon. Smith went to the nearest police station and told detectives what he knew. They hurried to the Clarendon Hotel and found the two young men, Jenkins and Lonsdale, in their beds.

After questioning, they admitted they were implicated in the holdup at the Hyde Park Hotel. In turn, they implicated Wilmer, who was arrested a few hours later.

While the police questioned these three youths, Detective Inspector Fabian of Scotland Yard received a telephone call from Harley. Harley, a free-lance writer, had met Fabian some months earlier in connection with newspaper work. He now told him that he had some important information for him in connection with the Hyde Park Hotel jewelry robbery. Harley asserted that the robbers had given him the jewelry since the "stones were too hot," and that he in turn had got in touch with the police. Naturally, he added, he hoped to receive the $7500 reward offered by the insurance company. With that, Harley took the inspector to his mother's house in Kensington and there, hidden behind a steam pipe in a bedroom, he pulled out two envelopes containing the eight missing diamond rings.

Harley had neither known nor imagined that Jenkins, Wilmer and Lonsdale already had been arrested and questioned by the police. The trio, however, had named Harley during Fabian's absence, as the man who had assaulted Bellenger.

IT TAKES A LIQUID TO CLEANSE YOUR SKIN

MISS JUNE ALLOWAY
Registered Nurse of Montclair, N. J.

"Ambrosia is the only thing that really cleans my skin. I sincerely recommend it."

HERE'S WHY AMBROSIA REALLY CLEANS

Liquid Ambrosia gives you a double benefit. It goes into your pores to clean out clogging dirt and make-up; and, because Ambrosia is the liquid cleanser, it cannot clog your pores with wax or grease.

Ambrosia helps fight blackheads and enlarged pores—enemies of beauty that follow "half-way" methods of cleaning. See how it leaves the skin feeling refreshed and radiant!

Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping

MUSTEROLE
BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER

NEVER BEFORE A CEREAL LIKE THIS

Millions praise Shredded Ralston, new delicious ready-to-eat cereal

Here's a flavor so new, so delicious it's actually patented. Here's whole wheat in a brand-new form—shredded then spun into bite size morsels and toasted a tempting golden brown. Try it!

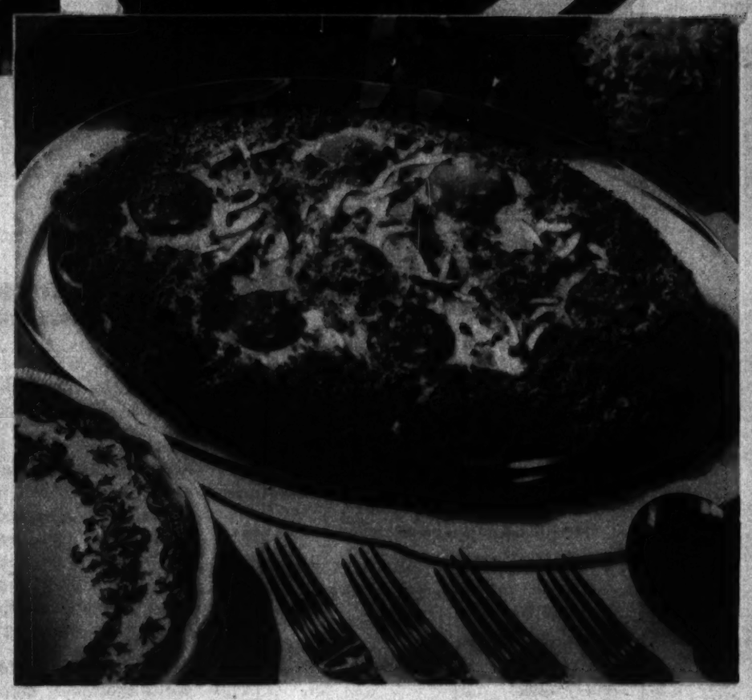
Who said it was hard to think up new things for Lent? With a special dash of this and that, or a new combination of old favorites, you can surprise your family every day—and we can prove it, on a stack of recipes! We've planned them all with calories as well as taste in mind, so you'd better use the exact Borden's products called for. When you want richness and flavor, Borden's foods are hard to beat!

Cheese Luncheons—There's no limit, practically, to what a smart woman can do with cheese these days—what with all the interesting kinds Borden's has to offer. There's Chateau, for example—Borden's famous cheese food that spreads, slices, or melts. It's especially good for children, one package containing as much nourishment as two quarts of milk.

A toasted sandwich made with Borden's Chateau makes a noble luncheon dish. Or, for company, you might serve a colorful cheese and fruit salad, such as the one below.

Cheese Fruit Salad—beautiful and easy! First you mold Borden's Chateau into balls and roll in chopped mint or parsley. Arrange crisp salad greens and pineapple slice on plate, and fill center of pineapple with Chateau balls. (Borden's Chateau is particularly inviting with fruit—golden in color, deliciously mild in flavor.) Garnish with sliced strawberries or whole cherries. Serve with mayonnaise or fruit salad dressing.

Other Borden's cheeses include grated Italian and grated American, for au gratin dishes—Liederkranz and Military Brand Camembert, for dessert—Borden's Cream Cheese and Pimento Spread, for canapes. You'll find a complete line at your grocer's.



Baked Eggs on Spaghetti—Have you ever fixed spaghetti with a white sauce made with Borden's Evaporated Milk? Our kitchen experts find this rich milk gives a smoother consistency. Here's their newest (and most tempting) way to bake spaghetti. Break eggs on top, and sprinkle with Borden's Grated American Cheese or Borden's Chateau, and buttered crumbs. Bake in slow oven (300° F.) about 30 minutes, or until eggs are cooked.

IMPORTANT: This recipe calls for Borden's Evaporated Milk, made from Borden's full-cream milk, evaporated to double richness. The Magic sauce below calls for Borden's Eagle Brand Magic Milk, a sweetened condensed milk. Be sure you understand the difference. Follow your recipes exactly!

"Magic" Sauces—and when we say "magic" we mean just that! Imagine a tart relish dressing you can simply shake up—in two minutes by the clock! Think of surprise sauces you can mix in a jiffy, without cooking! You can do all these, and a lot of other miracles, with Borden's Eagle Brand Magic Milk—the sweetened condensed milk that blends smoothly with other ingredients.

"Magic" Relish Dressing

⅔ cup Borden's Eagle Brand Magic Milk
½ cup vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon paprika
½ cup mixed olives, sweet pickle, pimentos, finely chopped

Blend thoroughly Borden's Eagle Brand Magic Milk, vinegar, salt, mustard, and paprika. Add olives, sweet pickle, and pimentos and beat until smooth. If thicker consistency is desired, place in refrigerator to chill before serving. Serve on meat, fish, or cooked vegetable salads. Makes 1⅔ cups.

NOTE: Have you ever tried the "Magic" 5-Minute Chocolate Frosting that never fails? This recipe, along with many others, is in the Recipe Leaflet on the top of every can of Borden's Eagle Brand Magic Milk. Save it!

Fuss-Budget . . . that's what they called Gail Borden back in the 1850's, when he used to call on farmers and insist on cleaner milk for his experiments for condensed milk. Old-fashioned dairymen grumbled at his fussiness—but Gail Borden's rules later formed the basis of many of the pure milk codes we have in our country today!

Sea Foods in Ramekins

You have probably served scalloped sea food before, but have you ever made it with Borden's Evaporated Milk? Just try our recipe—and see what this deliciously rich milk does for it!

2 cups canned tuna*
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
Dash of pepper
½ cup Borden's Evaporated Milk
½ cup water
2 tablespoons chopped pimento*
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Borden's Grated American Cheese or Borden's Chateau

Salmon, crab meat, shrimp, or leftover cooked fish may be used instead.*

Drain and flake tuna or other fish. Melt butter. Blend in flour and seasonings. Stir in Borden's Evaporated Milk and water. Cook slowly, stirring constantly until thick. Add tuna, pimento, and parsley. Place in 6 greased ramekins or a casserole. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and sprinkle with the cheese. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until brown and thoroughly heated. Serves 6.

Lenten Nightcap—For that vague bedtime hunger, we can think of nothing more delicious and warming than a hot glass of Borden's Malted Milk. It's teeming with Vitamins (A, B, and G) and it helps you sleep. Get it at your favorite soda fountain. Or, better still, make it at home from the handy Family Size package—sold at your grocer's and druggist's.

You're missing lots of good cooking tricks—and good eating—if your pantry isn't lined with every one of these Borden products. Stock up now! Your grocer has them all.

At Ste. Genevieve, Mo., limestone miners are hollowing out a large limestone hill for the calcium carbonate used in tooth paste, tooth powder and chemicals. First mined in 1900, it is estimated there is enough limestone in the hill and those nearby to continue mining operation for a century.

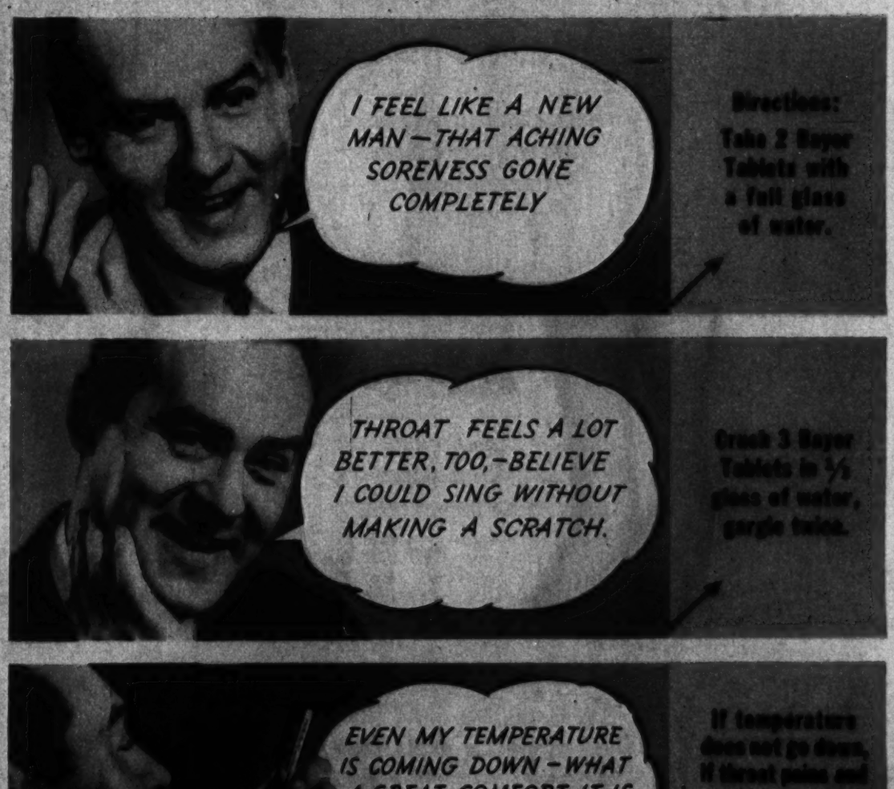
COLDS

Get relief with remedy that goes to work in a few seconds



Genuine Bayer Aspirin Gives You These 2-fold Results Fast

One of the best and quickest ways to relieve the misery of a cold is this: Ease aches and soreness with genuine Bayer Aspirin — if you do not improve promptly, see your family doctor.

The moment you feel a cold coming on take 2 Bayer Aspirin tablets. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions found in box.

If you have a sore throat with your cold, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will aid in reducing the fever and pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain, acting like a local anesthetic on the irritated membrane of your throat.

Try this way. Your doctor, we believe, will endorse it. For it is a quick, effective means of relief. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's — not for "aspirin" alone.

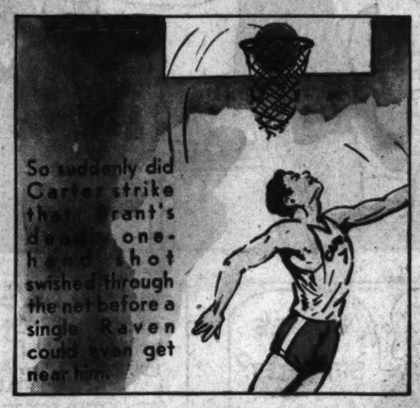
NED BRANT

By BOB ZUPPKE

DRAWN BY B. W. DEPEW

The great crowd is impatient for the start of Carter's attempt to upset the national champions.

Feinting his guard out of position, Ned Brant streaks for the basket to meet a well-timed, bullet-like pass from Bud Shekels.



So suddenly did Carter strike that Brant's deadly one-hand shot swished through the net before a single Raven could even get near him.

The crowd's wild cheering stops suddenly as a Raven marksman sinks an amazing shot from far out.

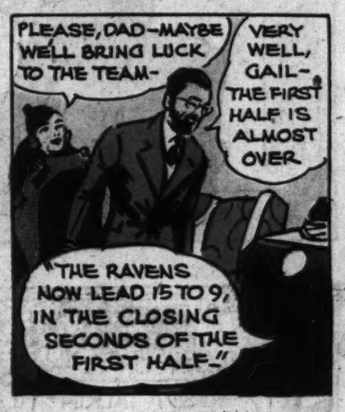
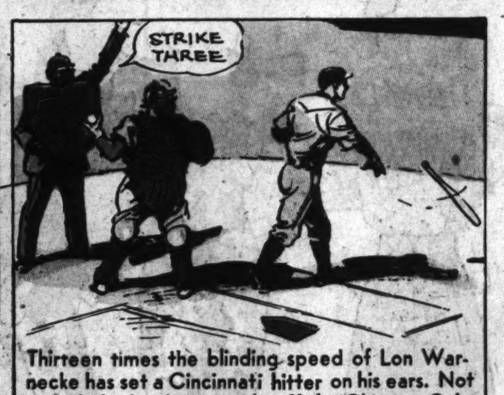
And the champs have hit their stride. The big fellows seem to toy with their smaller foes as Carter tries desperately to gain control of the ball.



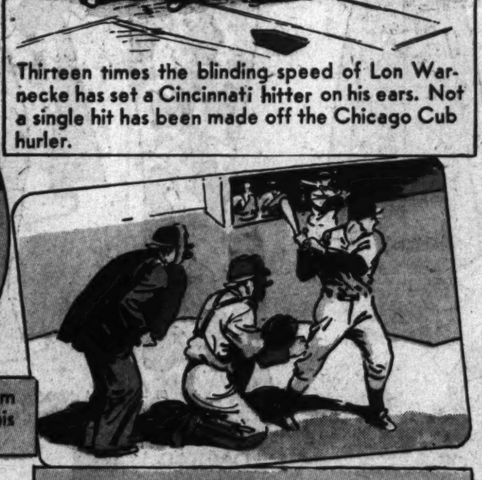
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About the Pitcher Who Came One Toss From fame



Thirteen times the blinding speed of Lon Warnecke has set a Cincinnati hitter on his ears. Not a single hit has been made off the Chicago Cub hurler.

There is one out in the ninth as big Adam Comorosky, Red outfielder, selects his war club.



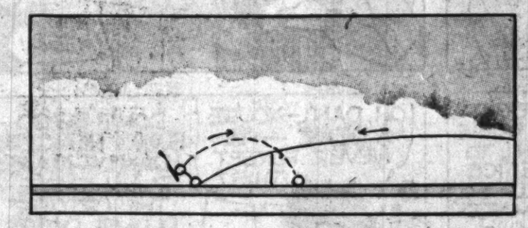
The fans are begging for a no-hit, no-run game as Warnecke gets his sign to pitch to the Cincinnati slugger.

And then the crowd went suddenly still as Comorosky smashed out a sharp single, spoiling Warnecke's near-perfect pitching feat.

With Adam Comorosky's single that day at Cincinnati April 18, 1934, the door to the hall of fame slammed in the face of this great pitcher, Lon Warnecke, who beat the Reds 6 to 0.

Table Tennis . . . . . by NED BRANT

How to Play Doubles



Drop Shot

Good shot when your opponent is playing deep, expecting another drive. Tilt the racket backward and just give the ball a light push just after it has touched the table.

The four courts are used only in doubles play. All serves made either from A to B, or from B to A. If one and 2 are playing 3 and 4, each pair serves until five points are made. Then the service changes. 1 serves to 4, whose return must be taken by 2, whose return must be handled by 3, and 3's return must be taken by 1. In other words, partners alternate returning the ball. The same server serves all five points, except when the score is 20-all. Then each player serves but once. Service must be into the proper court.

WONDER BREAD helps build VITALITY!

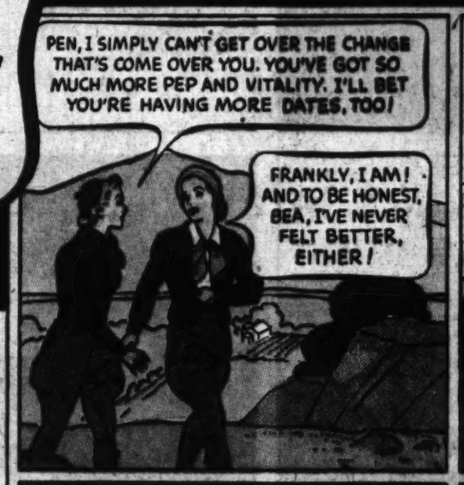
HOLLYWOOD KNOWS! VITALITY—NOT A PRETTY FACE—IS THE REAL SECRET OF POPULARITY!

Says ANN DVORAK

FEATURED IN HAL ROACH M-G-M PICTURE, "MERRILY WE LIVE"



IN ACTUAL COMPARISON WITH OTHER BREADS—

89 out of every 100 women have chosen Wonder Bread

North, South, East, West . . . in grocery stores in all parts of the country . . . women by the hundreds of thousands have made the famous 1-2-3 comparison of breads. They have compared virtually all popular brands by the very method experts themselves use to compare bread quality.

Now look at the actual record! To date, 381,499 women have made this test . . . and 89 out of every 100 have chosen Wonder Bread over all others.

These women declared Wonder Bread best after discovering its tempting, delicious flavor! Its firm, delicate texture! Its appetizing, "wheaty" fragrance!

Has any bread you know ever won such overwhelming preference? Never, we believe, have women been so outspoken in their enthusiasm for any bread!

Now when you buy Wonder Bread, you can be sure that you are getting the one bread declared BEST in this fair, impartial bread comparison by American housewives. Get a loaf of slo-baked Wonder Bread tomorrow!

Tune in! "PRETTY KITTY KELLY"

MON., TUES., WED., THURS., FRI. MORNINGS • COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

HOW WONDER BREAD BUILDS UP ENERGY

If you want to have the radiant charm . . . the sparkling vitality that, screen stars agree, makes women truly attractive . . . you must have energy—vital energy!

This, you can only get from the food you eat. Wonder Bread, food authorities agree, is a splendid source of energy. It is made of choice ingredients that supply in abundant measure the food-energy you need.

And Wonder Bread is slo-baked to make it more quickly, more completely digestible . . . to give you vital energy more quickly and easily!

CHINESE HOLD JAPANESE AT CANAL; HEAVY CASUALTIES

Repeated Attacks of Troops Attempting to Cross Are Beaten Back in Fierce Battle 18 Miles North of Suchow.

ARTILLERY POUNDS DEFENSE POSITIONS

Reports Indicate 30,000 Killed on Both Sides in Week of Fighting in Eastern Sector of Central Front.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, March 21.—Repeated attacks by Japanese shock troops against Chinese defenses were repulsed today in a furious battle along the ancient Grand Canal. Despite terrific artillery shelling, the Chinese clung to their trench lines on the south bank of the canal 18 miles north of Suchow.

An advance guard of Japanese cavalry which swam the river was driven back by machine gun and rifle fire.

The Japanese were fighting desperately to effect a crossing and continue their advance down the Tientsin-Pukow railway line to Suchow, where the line crosses the east-west Lunghai railway.

Hanchwang, on the southern border of Shantung Province where the Tientsin-Pukow line crosses the canal, fell into Japanese hands. Japanese were assaulting Taierchwang, 25 miles to the east. A flanking force swung to the east and occupied Yihsien in the push on Taierchwang.

30,000 Reported Killed.

Both sides admitted heavy losses, casualty reports indicating 30,000 soldiers have been killed in fighting which has been going on incessantly since the Japanese started their new drive down the Tientsin-Pukow railway more than a week ago.

The Japanese asserted the Chi[illegible] had abandoned 7000 bodies in last week's retreat from Lincheng, north of Hanchwang.

In the Chuhsien-Lini sector the Chinese said heavy casualties were inflicted on two divisons, with Japanese dead "piled up in heaps" after the assault. The Chinese said the divisions were forced into retreat northward.

The Chinese said they had pushed back the Japanese at all points along the Yellow River on the western border of Shansi Province, removing temporarily danger of invasion of Shensi Province.

A dispatch reaching Shanghai said a German Catholic church at Lincheng, on the railway north of Hanchwang, had been bombed by Japanese planes before troops seized the town. Four occupants were killed and 200 wounded. All of the casualties were believed to have been Chinese. The church was said to have been flying the Nazi flag.

Japanese Bomb Suchow.

Suchow was bombed twice by Japanese planes to prepare for land assaults from the north and south and possibly the east. Japanese reported destroying a troop train in an attack on the Suchow railway station.

A Japanese force 40 miles east of Suchow threatened to cut the Shanghai railway near Yunho, and split into two columns. One would occupy an 80-mile stretch of the railway from Yunho to the China coast and the other would strike westward to Suchow for an attack on the railcenter from the east.

Japanese columns had occupied all but about 30 miles of the Tientsin-Pukow railway north of Suchow while units advancing from Pengpu, 90 miles south of Suchow, were reported to be driving Chinese from their footholds along the southern stretch of the north-south railroad. With Suchow captured, the Japanese apparently intend to drive the Chinese westward along the Tientsin-Pukow railway north of Suchow, Shanghai railway and join Shansi and Northern Honan forces.

Chinese Military Academy Raided.

Far to the south, Japanese reported their bombing planes had destroyed a Chinese military academy at Singtze on the shore of Lake Poyang, Kiangsi Province, less than 70 miles from the principal Chinese air base at Nanchang. Japanese authorities in Shanghai
